According to Registrar J. W. Mlinar, a new attendance record was established last fall. A number of new students are also expected to enroll at the opening of the winter term January 6. Speciel classes will be arranged for the new students so that all credits earned will apply towards graduation. The winter term will close the last week in March so that students will be able to return home in time for the regular spring work.

TURTLE GETS FIRST BITE AS DRUMMER HUNTS SOUP

Sleepy Eye.—We all know Sleepy Eye Drum Corps members must have their turtle soup at any expense—but Jos. Eckstein, farmer south of town draws the line when his right ear is concerned, Joseph capturing the reptiles at the Cottonwood river for the local stick clickers and cheek puffers that they might enjoy their annual turtle feed, and bagged several and put them in a sack, threw it over his shoulder and proceeded home. One of the irate brutes, not content with his new environment, poked his head through the sack and clamped his jaws on Joseph's ear. Attempts to free himself were futile. The man had to wait until arriving home and had the assistance of his family. His injuries were slight.

Sacred Spot in Switzerland

One of the interesting spots in the region of the lake of Lucerne, Switzerland, is Seelisberg. A cable railway climbs from Trieb to this resort village. Immediately below is the meadow of the Rutli, the most sacred spot on Swiss soil. Here, in the night from November 7 to 8, 1307, the three confederates, Walter Furst of Attinghausen in Uri, Werner Stauffacher of Steinen in Schwyz, and Arnold Anderhalden, of Melchtal in Unterwalden, each accompanied by ten faithful followers, assembled and in the name of their respective cantons swore to drive out their Austrian oppressors.

Looks Spanish

The reason St. Georges, Bermuda, looks so much like a Spanish town, is because when the site was cleared of cedars, men built their white stone homes irregularly over the open spaces, heedless of the inevitable advent of vehicles, and so the town is a maze of narrow streets and crooked alleys bordered by walled gardens. Some of these streets still bear the original names, such as Old Maids' lane, Shinbone alley, Featherbed alley and Breakneck alley.

TAXES TOO HIGH; CONTROL NEEDED

With the special legislative session again assembled, after a period of adjournment during the holidays, it appears evident they will now endeavor to secure speedy disposition of bills introduced for social security and tax legislation.

Taxation is an important phase of the session's work, since social security laws must be properly financed, if they are to work out successfully. But even beyond the immediate financing of social security legislation there lies the tax problem itself. Taxes are too high and getting higher. One of the most important things to be done about taxes is to control them.

Realizing that control is fundamental to correction of our present high tax load, an expenditure control bill has been introduced in the special session. Representative S. Theo. Severtson is author in the House—H. F. 87, and Senator Henry C. Stiening is author in the Senate—S. F. 51.

The purpose of this bill, briefly, is (1) to provide uniform accounting systems designed to check appropriations with expenditures thus preventing diversion of public funds; (2) to provide pay-as-you-go methods in every taxing unit to discourage high taxes, tax delinquency, defaults and the present practice of spending on anticipated revenue; (3) to provide budgets for every taxing unit and hearings where taxpayers have the right to be heard; (4) to provide reasonable requirements of taxing units already having an aggregate debt of 7% and a tax delinquency exceeding 15%, where it would be necessary to post notice of intention before placing the community under obligation and conducting a public hearing on the matter.

ESCAPE INJURY IN AUTO MISHAP

A group of young people from Wyandotte and Smiley, who were enroute home from Plummer by way of Red Lake Falls, had a narrow escape from injury here Saturday morning. Their car grazed the railing on the little bridge in front of Henry Olsen's place and went into the ditch on the east side of the grade. As the car went down the steep incline, it tipped against a light pole badly damaging the car body. Aside from a severe jarring, and a few scratches from broken glass, the occupants were uninjured.

MRS. L. NETTLAND DIES

Mrs. Lars Nettland, pioneer settler of Rocksbury township, and a resident of this county for over fifty years, died Saturday at her home at Thief River Falls after a long illness. Rev. Fjelstad officiated at the brief funeral service held at 1 o'clock today at Thief River Falls, and Rev. M. L. Dahle officiated at the service held later at St. Pauli church in Rocksbury of which the deceased was a member. Burial took place in the cemetery near St. Pauli church.

1936 CALENDERS STILL AVAILABLE

There are still a few copies of the community calendar available at this office. Those who have not received a copy are asked to call at earliest opportunity and get one. It is especially desired that a copy be in every home in St. Hilaire and vicinity. As these calendars are expensive, the B. M. Club would appreciate if no requests were made for calendars to be sent away. One copy to each home will best serve the purpose for which they are intended.

TRAFFIC DEATHS IN STATE NUMBER 550 TO DECEMBER

11,000 Injured in Mishaps in 11 Months, Patrol Chief Says

Eleven thousand injured, and 550 killed, reddened Minnesota's traffic calendar for 11 months of 1935, a report of John P. Arnoldy, state highway patrol chief, disclosed Saturday.

The toll through November, Arnoldy told the Minnesota Sheriff's association, emphasizes need for strict enforcement of traffic laws—jailing of speeders—and education of drivers.

Of those killed, 200 were pedestrians, Arnoldy said, and the injured included 3,960 pedestrians. Highway patrolmen, he said, arrested 5,222 persons, and the cases of only four were dismissed in court. The figures applied to the state outside of the Twin Cities and Duluth.

All 81 motorists arrested for speeding, 128 for drunken driving and 640 for careless driving were convicted, Arnoldy said.

DAKOTA GETS SNOW

Western North Dakota and also southern part of this state was swept by a severe blizzard last week. Heavy snows fell, blockading most of the main travelled roads and necessitating steady work for two days by snow removing equipment before they could be opened to traffic. This section has been very fortunate thus far this winter in that only sufficient snow for good sleighing has fallen, and the mercury has not remained below zero for more than two consecutive days at the time, and this on only a few occasions.

BRAY MUTUAL WILL MEET JANUARY 15

Annual meeting and election of officers of the Bray Mutual Fire Insurance Company will be held in St. Hilaire on Wednesday, January, 15, 1936. The company has just closed another very successful year at furnishing dependable insurance at cost to its members. It is now rated as one of the largest mutual insurance concerns operating in this part of the state.

ZIMMERMAN ASKS LONGTIME RELIEF PROGRAM IN STATE

Administrator Says Problem Will Confront State for Many Years

Minnesota will have a relief problem for many years to come and the state should start now to study plans for a permanent relief organization and program, L. P. Zimmerman, SERA administrator, has notified the special session of the state legislature

Mr. Zimmerman asked the legislature to authorize the state executive council to conduct a statewide survey to ascertain definitely the relief needs for a period of years and to appropriate not less than $100,000 to make the survey possible.

"Such a survey should be conducted in each of the state's 87 counties," Mr. Zimmerman said. "It should obtain first hand information regarding local condition industries, maximum and minimum possible employment, and the maximum ability of each county to provide for its relief needs.

"The survey should include a definite examination of persons who are receiving relief, who are unemployables and who may be classified as institutional cases, the prevailing social standards in each instance and the relationship between dependency and neglect and other social problems.

"The survey should include a definite chart and plan for a permanent organization to deal with all public welfare programs in the state; a plan for efficient administration and for definite allocation of responsibilities in connection with all welfare work."

"Long-time relief programs are now being studied in many states and the proposed survey in Minnesota undoubtedly would lead to adoption of a comprehensive, intelligent and constructive program on a long-time basis and would materially assist in meeting Minnesota's relief problem, which appears to be a permanent one." Mr. Zimmerman said.

GERMS JUMP EIGHT FEET IN SNEEZE, AUTHORITIES FIND

Because health officials have long contended that germs causing the common cold, from which several millions of the population suffer annually, are spread chiefly by coughs and sneezes, the American Institute of Sanitation recently conducted a series of experiments to determine just how far a germ can travel in a sneeze.

Test plates were prepared with a suitable medium to receive bacteria and were held at different distances from persons afflicted with cold to catch germs projected into the air by sneezes and explosive coughs. After being exposed to the sneezes the test plates were examined after the colonies of bacteria that had developed from the seed were large enough to be counted. Precautions were taken to precent contamination of the plates from outside sources. It was found from the experiments that a deep sneeze can project germs as far as eight feet. Conversation carried on in ordinary tones may result in a germ screen being sent out to a distance of two or three feet.

"In view of the ease by which countless germs may be rained on surrounding objects by a sneeze or cough, the best way to prevent colds is to keep from contact with sufferers, both directly and indirectly," comments the institute. "Reading a book or using a pencil after sneezers should be avoided.

"Rigid rules of sanitation should prevail in buildings used by a number of persons. First, all the sunshine possible should be admitted. Drawn shades are favorable to prolonging the life of disease bacteria outside the body. In schools and offices a modern, efficient disinfectant should be added to the mop water. Dry sweeping and dusting should be avoided. Brooms and dusters extend the range of the original sneezes. Instead of dusting the desks should be wiped off with a cloth wrung out frequently from water containing adequate disinfectant.

"The use of antiseptic mouth washes by cold sufferers may be regarded as both a personal and a public health measure. Through such reduction of the number of bacteria in the mouth, there are less bacterial buckshot in a sneeze."

"Big Ben" Not Name of London Clock, but Bell

Do you know that there's no such clock as Big Ben? That name is given simply to the bell of the clock over the Houses of Parliament. Big Ben's chime is little more than a whisper compared with what it might be, for the bell is cracked, and the huge hammer originally made for it cannot be used in case it might wreck it.

The M. P.'s who sit immediately under Big Ben do not hear it strike until its tones have already been heard in the furthermost corners of the British Isles! Wireless reception is instantaneous; but the sound of Big Ben takes a fraction of a second to reach anybody on the ground who is not "listening in."—London Answers.

Accidents Cost as Many Lives in 1900 as Now

In spite of the increase in automobile deaths in the United States accidents cost no more lives now, in proportion to the population, than they did in 1900. Deaths from railroad and street car accidents, drowning, burns, poisonous gas, food poisoning, and suffocation, have dropped from an average of 47.7 per 100,000 population during 1900-1905 to 17.9 during 1931-1934, an improvement of 29.8.

The rate from automobile accidents was practically zero in 1900 and 28.4 in 1934. The one about balances the other. Accidents are now a greater hazard than any disease, except heart disease, cancer and nephritis. —Science Service.

Spending Must Stop

Washington.—There has been much discussion lately concerning the liquidation of the dozens of New Deal emergency agencies. It is a discussion that is timely because, first, Mr. Roosevelt in his plans for the forthcoming government budget contemplates a shrinkage in the vast outlays represented in the emergency agencies, and second, it is a matter of political import. Whether Mr. Roosevelt is reelected or whether there should be a Republican succeed him in the White House in January, 1937, somebody must clean up the wreckage of the alphabetical soup—which is what all of these various agencies eventually must become. They cannot go on; an end must be had to the expenditures and that will conclude the operations of these agencies and, further, something in the way of permanency for agencies that may be kept must be worked out.

It is one of the real problems of government. Those who have been in Washington any length of time recognize that it is much easier to establish a government bureau and populate it with bureaucrats of a political hue than it is to put an end to the agency and send the political patronage boys back home. It is really an old story to observers here and, I believe, all of them recognize how difficult if not dangerous it is going to be to dynamite the alphabetical agencies out of existence.

Some of them undoubtedly have served and are serving a useful purpose. Undoubtedly, some of them were needed long before Mr. Roosevelt brought his New Deal to Washington. Instead of that fact making the wrecking job easier, it makes the job more difficult. It is very hard to convince plum pickers that their job is a temporary one, even though they were so informed when they were appointed. It is more difficult to convince that type of individual that their agency is not all-important or that it is of less consequence than a neighboring agency bearing another set of alphabetical letters.

In addition, the plum pickers have their patronage backers at the capital. The representatives and senators interested in building up their own political machines back home naturally put people in the political jobs who will be most helpful in assisting that particular representative or senator to be re-elected. Thus, it becomes rather obvious that even if Mr. Roosevelt seriously tries to liquidate the various alphabetical bureaus, boards, commissions and administrations, he has a man-sized task on his hands. If by chance a Republican should be elected and Mr. Roosevelt retired to private life, he, too, will find himself criticized, cajoled and threatened when he seeks to squeeze the water out of this structure known as government which was expanded so much in Mr. Roosevelt's plans to meet the emergency.

Long, Hard Task

Frankly, I believe it will take the full four years of the next President's term to unseat all of the excess job holders and eliminate from the government all of the surplus alphabetical agencies. In the very nature of things it cannot be done more quickly. The answer lies in the fact that these agencies embark upon ambitious programs that cannot be halted. The government becomes committed to certain propositions and, except in war time, most of them must be executed. So, however you examine the situation, Uncle Sam is well hooked.

To illustrate how difficult is the job of getting rid of a government agency after it is once established, one need not go further than the late NRA. Six or seven months have elapsed since the Supreme court unanimously clipped the wings of the famed Blue Eagle. That decision did the work of wrecking NRA as completely as a bombshell can wreck a boat when a direct hit is scored. But, whether you realize it or not, we still have in Washington an NRA organization of almost 2,500 employees. It is true that number is probably only about one-fourth of the total number on the NRA pay roll when General "Crack-Down" Johnson was at the helm and guiding the flight of the Blue Eagle but it was assumed at least that the Supreme court decision made payments for the NRA pay roll illegal at the same time. However, it has happened that the administration has found money some place with which to pay this regiment of employees who, as far as most observers in Washington can ascertain, have very little constructive work to do.

The organization has no official status except such as is given it by Mr. Roosevelt's various executive orders. It has no authority. Anything it does or says has no more force than a zephyr. Yet thousands of dollars are being paid its workers on the first and fifteenth of every month—and there is no sign that these payments will be ended soon.

For another example let us go back to the war days. In order to successfully prosecute America's part in the World war, the government took over and operated the railroads. A gigantic organization was built up here in Washington and representatives of the railroad administration were scattered far and wide throughout the country. Commitments were made that continue even to this day. Credit in the form of government loans was extended to the rail lines and several hundred million dollars of that amount remains uncollected to this day. And with all, after 18 years we still have a railroad administration operating in Washington at government expense.

Another wartime agency about which little is heard but which still is in existence is the War Finance corporation. It floated bonds and made loans to private interests and those commitments have forced retention of a skeleton organization that probably must be continued for several years yet before the job of liquidation is complete.

One could go on and on in illustrating how a government agency becomes a parasite on the government structure to remain, long after its usefulness has ceased, a burden on the taxpayers. It is hardly any wonder then with the knowledge of what has happened in the case of other governmental agencies that there is a question of how long it will be before the present emergency alphabet can be eliminated. It is likewise a matter of concern what the total cost is going to be before the mess is finally eradicated.

Thumbs Down on NRA

We have had evidence lately of how efforts are initiated to maintain these agencies even when they are legally dead. Recently in Washington there was held a much ballyhooed meeting to which some three thousand representatives of business interests were invited. It was called by George L. Berry, the top man in what is left of the NRA structure. The purpose was to find out what business wanted in the way of a revived NRA. Business did not want NRA revived and the meeting turned out to be a genuine flop. There was nothing like three thousand representatives in attendance and the meeting itself gave a good many persons the impression of being staged for the benefit of the American Federation of Labor, to which the old NRA catered.

Mr. Berry, until lately the head of one of the large union labor organizations, did not convince business that it needed more governmental interference, Indeed, if business went away convinced of anything beyond the fact that Mr. Berry's meeting was a flop, it left Washington with a deep feeling that it did not want NRA in any form nor did it want any other governmental agency messing around with its efforts to get back on its feet.

The circumstance illustrates better than anything I know how parasitic agencies in the government seek to perpetuate themselves. One must realize in considering such a condition that all of those employees obviously want to keep their jobs.

In the case of the attempted revival of NRA, the political factor is important. Mr. Roosevelt said, it will be remembered, that when NRA was organized it must be regarded as something of an experiment and that if the experiment failed to work, he would be the first to say so. He has not made that announcement yet for, it is considered, if he admitted that the NRA experiment failed to work he would be admitting defeat for one of his earlier pet projects right in the face of a Presidential campaign. Politicians do not like to make admissions of this kind.

Business Fights Back

It will be recalled as well that after the Supreme court held the business codes of NRA to be unconstitutional and the business codes were the vitals of the NRA structure, there was much pressure exerted on congress from the White House for reconstruction of some sort of a program to succeed NRA. Business did not want it any more then than it does now and it fought back while the legislation was pending. The result was that congress passed a law permitting lines of commerce and industry to organize and frame their own voluntary codes.

Jurisdiction of these codes was placed in the Federal Trade commission. That agency was supposed to work in co-operation with business and to exercise a judicial function in determining when the codes were properly within existing laws against monopoly.

The Trade commission in the last year has blossomed forth as a rather sound agency in its consultations with business and, I believe, merits the respect which business generally has for it. But with all of that respect and the knowledge that the Trade commission tries to be fair, only five lines of industry have presented codes of fair practice for commission approval.

The details of the futile attempt to breathe life back into the Blue Eagle have been related at this length to show what the future holds in the way of barnacles on our structure of government. If we have many more the result is liable to be a cancer and a cancer thus far has proved incurable.

Rochester—Fred Anderson, 44, Dodge county commissioner and president of the Kasson school board, died in a hospital here from injuries sustained when his truck was struck by a railroad train at Kasson.

St. Paul—Despite protests and counter indorsements, Governor Olson is expected to name Elmer A. Benson, state commissioner of banks, to the vacant Uninted States senatorship, caused by the death of Thomas D. Schall.

Redwood Falls—Martin Bolger will spend the next 60 days in the county jail for constructing a fence on farm property in Granite Rock township in defiance of a district court restraining order.

St. Paul—The body of Senator Thomas D. Schall, accompanied by a congressional delegation arrived from Washington for interment in Lakewood cemetery. The senator died as a result of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile.

Worthington—Ruth Mixo, local high school student, won first place in the fifth annual Christmas seal public speaking contest, it was announced by Dr. E. A. Meyerdig, executive secretary of the Minnesota Public Health association, sponsors of the contest over WCCO.

Fort Snelling—In accordance with congressional action providing that the United States army be brought to its full peace-time strength recruiting has begun to increase the Fort Snelling garrison by 578 men, bringing its total strength to more than 2,000. The 578 new men all will be added to the Third infantry, which represents the bulk of the garrison.

Robbinsdale—Theodore Torrison, 22 years old, and crippled, admitted there must still be a Santa Claus. On Christmas eve, old Saint Nick drove a new 1936 de luxe sedan to the front door of Theodore's home and left it there with congratulations of the Log Cabin Syrup Company, as a first prize award for his recent radio contest entry.

Virginia—Kanstu Matero, 65-year-old farmer, was killed by St. Louis county deputy sheriffs as he ran from a bathhouse on the farm of his sister at Idington, near here, where he had been barricaded all night. The farmer, believed to have become temporarily deranged, had gone to the farm home of his sister, Mrs. Victor Riipponen and threatened to kill the family if they did not leave the place.

St. Paul—The state department of education was credited with an alotment of $1,017,000 from state income tax receipts it was announced by Julius Schmahl, state treasurer. The allotment was the second this year, bringing the total benefit to each public school child in the state from income taxes to $7.50. The first allotment was $2,020,000. Income tax payments last year provided $1,873,429 for the public schools, or $4.80 for each pupil.

International Falls—Firemen searched the ruins of a store building for the bodies of two men believed to have burned to death in a fire. Four families, who occupied second floor drinking poisoned breakfast cocoa, to the street in their night clothing, when the fire, believed to have started in the furnace room, raced through the frame structure. Loss was estimated at $35,000. The building was a landmark of the old lumberjack days.

St. Paul—A counterfeit money passing ring that had operated in the northwest nearly a month was broken up, federal agents said, with the jailing of 10 persons, four here and six in Davenport, Iowa. United States secret service agents and police who co-operated in the roundup said the spurious $5 and $10 bills, which first made their appearance in the Twin Cities, December 3, were believed to have been manufactured in New York.

Cokato—Fire broke out in the heart of the business district here early Christmas eve and for a time threatened to destroy an entire business block. Firemen from Cokato and help summoned from the neighboring town of Dassel fought the flames from early evening until long past midnight, in an effort to halt the spread of the fire. When it was brought under control early Christmas morning, three buildings had been destroyed with damage estimated at about $40,000.

Franco-British Peace Plan Killed; Hoare Resigns

IF IT really was intended to bring about peace between Italy and Ethiopia, the plan proposed by British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Premier Laval of France turned out a dismal failure. The storm of opposition to the scheme which would give Mussolini two-thirds of the African country as a reward for stopping an attack that was denounced by the League of Nations, brought the British and French governments to the point of collapse. To save the Baldwin cabinet, Hoare resigned on the eve of a parliamentary battle in the house of commons, and Baldwin frankly told parliament that the peace plan was an error. Despite fierce attacks by the Laborites and Liberals, the prime minister was given a vote of confidence. Several days later he announced the appointment of Capt. Anthony Eden as foreign secretary.

Sir Samuel Hoare

In Paris Edouard Herriot, member of the cabinet without portfolio, resigned as president of the powerful Radical Socialist party whose support is needed by Laval to maintain his majority in the parliament. Herriot's action, in the opinion of some observers, presaged Laval's early downfall.

Hoare's position became untenable when he learned that the peace plan was about to be buried at Geneva. Capt. Anthony Eden, probably never enthusiastic for it, practically repudiated the scheme in a public meeting of the league council. Laval also spoke, more reservedly, declaring that even if the plan were rejected, the council must continue to seek conciliation. After the session, however, he admitted to French newspaper men that the plan, for the time being at least, is dead.

The council received from Addis Ababa a note in which Emperor Haile Selassie bluntly accused Great Britain and France of having violated the league covenant by seeking "to impose upon Ethiopia a predominant control by Italy with the certain aim of entrusting to Italy the administration of the capital and a large part of the territory. The League of Nations in consenting to lend itself to such dissimulation would violate article X of the covenant."

In view of all the opposition and of Mussolini's hint that he would reject the proposals, the league council killed the plan entirely, softening its action by formally thanking Great Britain and France for their "preliminary efforts" toward peace. A permanent committee of 13 councilors—all but the Italian member—was named to study the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

How close Europe is coming to a general war is apparent with the revelation that Britain is lining up the coutries of the Mediterranean region for support in case she is attacked by Italy. Most of them are believed to have given this pledge. But Bulgaria, a close friend of Italy, would be expected in that case to attack either Greece or Turkey, both allies of Britain, and Rumania has promised the British that she will attack the Bulgarians in that case. This would arouse Hungary to the defense of Bulgaria; Czechoslovakia would be drawn in against Hungary, and Poland probably would take the field against the Czechs. Germany is allied to Poland, and Russia to Czechoslovakia. Such is the realistic view of the situation held by competent observers in European capitals.

Senator Schall Dies of Auto Accident Injuries

SENATOR THOMAS D. SCHALL of Minnesota, who was struck by an automobile as he was being conducted across the highway near his residence in Maryland, succumbed to his injuries. The blind statesman had been one of the bitterest opponents of the New Deal and President Roosevelt. He had started his campaign for re-election, and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota had announced he also would seek the nomination for Schall's seat. The governor said after the senator's death that he would soon appoint his successor; that he had no intention of resigning in order to be himself named to fill Schall's place.

Senator Schall

Mr. Schall, who was born in 1878 in Michigan, lost his sight in an accident after he had been practicing law in Minnesota four years. He continued his work, and served six terms in the house of representatives before he was elected to the senate in 1924.

Supreme Court May Be Divided on TVA

WHEN the Supreme court passes on the constitution[illegible] Tennessee Valley act, it [illegible] not be unanimous, is the [illegible] those who were present during the oral arguments. The case was taken up to the highest tribunal by fourteen preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power company.

Justice McReynolds, known as a "conservative," appeared to challenge the TVA lawyer to defend the right of the government to sell surplus power produced by Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals.

On the other hand, Justices Brandeis and Stone, who are known as "liberals," inquired into the right of minority stockholders of the Alabama Power company to bring the suit which led to the Supreme court test. The stockholders sought to enjoin performance of a contract under which the company was to sell lines to TVA for transmission of power.

Federal Judge Holds Wagner Labor Law Invalid

FEDERAL Judge Merrill E. Otis at Kansas City has held unconstitutional the Wagner labor dispute act which gives employees the right to organize and bargain collectively. The judge granted the Majestic Flour mills of Aurora, Mo., a temporary injunction against a National Labor board complaint which cited it for alleged refusal to bargain concerning a wage and hour agreement with a union of its employees.

Declaring congress had exceeded its constitutional right "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states . . ." the judge said, "the conclusion is that the whole act is unconstitutional."

Senator Borah's Hat Is Almost in the Ring

IF WISCONSIN Republicans wish to make Senator Borah their candidate for the Presidential nomination, it is all right with the veteran from Idaho. State Senator P. E. Nelson of Maple, Wis., and former State Senator Bernhard Gettelman of Milwaukee called on Mr. Borah in Washington and asked permission to circulate nominating petitions for him in their state. This was granted.

Senator Borah

Mr. Borah told reporters that Nelson and Gettelman had suggested a campaign for "a delegation representing the liberal forces in the party out there, and in my name." He had agreed, he said, to "go along with them."

Later Mr. Borah issued this statement:

"My primary objective is a convention of liberal delegates which will write a liberal platform and name a liberal candidate. To that end I shall devote my efforts. If in any state or district the liberal forces think that it will help the liberal cause to pledge delegates to me, I shall co-operate fully with that plan. If, however, it is thought better to pledge the delegates to some other liberal, I shall co-operate just as fully. In other words, inflexible as to the objective, flexible as to the tactics.

"As I see the political situation in this country, a man would be seeking political immolation to take a nomination upon any other than a liberal platform. So the first thing to do is to get a convention committed to liberal principles. So far as my efforts count, I am not going to permit personal matters, either my own or those of others, to interfere with the main purpose."

Kidnaping Threats Drive Lindberghs to England

REPEATED threats of kidnaping and even murder for their little son have driven Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh from the United States. They have sailed with their boy, Jon, for England, and plan to establish a residence there, though they will not give up their American citizenship. Where they will live has not been revealed to even their closest friends. It is believed the colonel will not sever his relations with the two air transport companies for which he is a technical adviser but that his active work for them will cease.

Government Ownership of Railways Is Urged

GOVERNMENT ownership of America's railroads is the objective in a campaign which has been started by the Railway Labor Executives' association. Describing the carriers as "chips in a financial poker game," the executives, in a circular to members of congress, ask for government ownership as "the only way out of the morass in which the roads have been placed by the bankers."

Senator Wheeler of Montana introduced a resolution for government ownership in the last session but did not ask for immediate consideration of the measure.

Festive Trappings Bring Joy to Brides of Moscow

Weddings in Soviet Russia are beginning to take on the romantic trimmings of the bourgeois West. In the October quarter of Moscow a special room has been provided in the registration bureau where couples may sign the marriage contract. It is furnished with oriental rugs, elaborate hangings, overstuffed furniture, and flowers. The young woman registrar is smartly gowned and wishes the couples happiness with all the grace of French and Italian municipal marriage officials.

Formerly weddings, deaths, and births were all recorded in one room. But brides protested vehemently against being married in the same room where weeping widows were recording the deaths of their husbands.

25 Years Ago

Arne Skeie, age 28, died Jan. 3rd at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Skeie, in this village. Funeral services were held at the United Lutheran church.

Surveyors were engaged in platting the waterpower and millsite, and local people were guessing at what it was all about.

Ole A. Wiste of Boy Center, Idaho, a former resident of St. Hilaire, was here for a visit with friends.

Dogs may come and dogs may go but the breed which has maintained its popularity with the greatest consistency is the Boston terrier. It is the only breed which originated in this country and there are more here than in any other country in the world. There are more registered and shown at dog shows and more sold than any other type.

Length of February

When January and February were added to the calendar by Numa Pompilius in 713 B. C., February was given 29 days. This was continued by Julius Caesar in his revision of 46 B. C., but an extra day was added every fourth year and as this was placed in February, in those leap years February had 30 days. When Augustus Caesar changed the name of the month Sextilus to his own, as Julius had done with Quintilis, he took one day from February, so that August should have 31 days like July. Since then the present length of February has prevailed.

Buddhist Influence

More than two thousand years ago, Buddhism started its mighty march across the plains of India. To this day its influence is vital in the art of China, Japan, Burma and Tibet. Since Buddhism gave dignity to all life, there is an abundance of design. Then, some thousand years later, Mohammedanism established a characteristic school of ornament. Confucianism, Brahmanism, Zoroastrianism and Christianity all have influenced rug designs. Only the initiated are familiar with all types of oriental rugs. There are rugs of dowry, wedding hearth and hospitality, of throne mosque, pall and prayer; all woven to strict rules.

57,500 EMPLOYED IN STATE ON WPA WORK PROJECTS

17,300 in Minnesota CCC Camps, Christgau Reports

A city larger than St. Paul would spring up in Minnesota if work relief employes of federal agencies operating in the state resided in one community.

This observation is based on figures which show approximately 65,620 families in St. Paul as compared with the latest available data on work relief employment from the office of Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator.

Carrying the bulk of the load as the federal agency to which was delegated the responsibility of setting up a work program which would hasten the transfer of persons from relief rolls to jobs in the least possible time, the Works Progress administration today has 57,500 employes.

Employment figures for the other federal agencies included: 3,037 employed by the department of agriculture, department of navy, department of treasury, department of war and veterans administration;

17,300 in the 87 civilian conservation camps—a figure which includes 15,120 "juniors" between the ages of 17 and 28, 1,051 veterans and 1,130 "local experience" men; 1,300 on Public Works Administration projects; 11,000 youths given part-time jobs by the National Youth administration to aid students in financing their way through high schools and colleges to supplement earnings in high budget families.

Beginning the work of setting up his state-wide organization late in July, Mr. Christgau as WPA administrator and coordinator of activities of all federal agencies operating in the state, divided Minnesota into nine districts. The first step in the program was securing the applications of communities throughout the state for worthwhile and, insofar as possible, permanent public improvements. When the September 12 deadline set by Washington for submittal of work proposals was reached, Mr. Christgau had approved and sent to Washington more than 4,000 work proposals to cost more than $132,000,000.

Actual work on WPA projects in the state began four days later, September 16, when 1,500 St. Paul men received jobs. At present WPA employes in St. Paul and Ramsey county total 9,230.

Current WPA employment figures for other districts in the state are: Duluth district 10,447, Brainerd district 5,674, Rochester district 5,674, Minneapolis district 13,634, St. Cloud district 4,239, Detroit Lakes district 4,540, Morris district 3,163 and New Ulm district 2,878.

Pedestrians Require Regulation, Too, Says Chrysler Co. Official

"Intelligent regulation of pedestrian traffic and the education of the individual pedestrian to protect himself and give the motorist a fair chance will greatly reduce the accident toll that is costing America so many lives every year," says J. W. Frazer, vice-president of the Chrysler Sales Division of the Chrysler Corporation.

"Legislation has been aimed almost entirely at the motorist, the pedestrian has been permitted to be as careless and unreasonable as he pleases. Lately, however, in a number of cities, laws and ordinances have been passed that compel the pedestrian to regard certain fundamental simple rules that make for his own safety. Jay-walking is prohibited by a fine in some places. In others, crossing a street at any other point than an intersection is illegal, as is walking against a green light.

"I think that one of the fundamental troubles is a wrong conception on the pedestrian's part of his rights as opposed to those of the motorist. There seems to be an idea that the man on foot has more rights than the man at the wheel. This is untrue. Their rights are exactly the same. The highway belongs to the motorist as much as to the pedestrian. The very fact that a man is driving proves he is paying heavy taxes to support the highway, or at least the vehicle that he is driving pays these taxes. I think the idea that a pedestrian always has the right of way is a hold-over from the days when the automobile was a rich man's toy and the fellow who didn't have one was jealous of a possible infringement on his rights by someone who had more money. Today, however, the motor car is no longer a luxury but an esesential part of civilization. Obviously cars are driven by more poor men than by rich ones.

State Wolf Bounties of $32,804 Paid This Year

A total of 1,840 full grown wolves and 834 wolf cubs brought state bounties of $32,804 during 1935, A. C. Hanson, director of the division of game and fish, announced last week. Full grown wolves bring $15 each, while $6 each is paid for cubs. The figure shows an increase of approximately $12,000 over 1934, when $20,328 was paid in bounties by the state. According to Gustav Swanson, biologist of the division of game and fish, the increase is due to a larger number of wolves rather than to increased activity on the part of trappers.

Upton Close, Authority on Far East, to Speak at Crookston

Upton Close of New York, who is recognized as an international authority on the Far East, will head an outstanding group of speakers who will appear throughout the week of the Red River Valley Winter Shows, February 3 to 7. He will discuss "The World Parade and Our Place in It." His discussion will, therefore, include a background of world conditions with emphasis on the present unrest in Japan, Asia and Europe.

Other subjects of vital importance to the farmers and townspeople of this area will be discussed by national authorities each day during the week. Dean W. C. Coffey and Professor Henry Schmitz of the University Forestry Department will appear on both the men's and women's programs. Other addresses will be delivered by Dr. E. C. Stakman and Dr. H. K. Hayes who were jointly responsible for the development of Thatcher wheat; W. H. Peters, Chief of the Animal Husbandry department, University Farm; A. G. Tolaas, in charge of potato certification work; Miss Gracia Countryman, Minneapolis city librarian, who will discuss "A Librarian's Trip to Spain" and "Expansion of Library Facilities"; A. M. Foker, "Repair and Maintenance of Farm Buildings," and others.

On Monday evening, February 3, a banquet will be held in honor of the school of agriculture, agricultural high school, farmers' club and 4-H club livestock and farm crops judging teams. Upton Close is scheduled to address the mass meeting Wednesday evening, while the Northwestern Minnesota singers will appear Friday evening. Speakers for the Tuesday and Wednesday evening mass meetings will be announced shortly.

All valleywide agricultural organizations are also arranging special meetings and banquets during the week.

Accurate Grinding

Grinding is one of the most accurate pieces of work performed in a modern factory, done by a wheel which, spinning around at a high speed, tears off the metal with its thousand points, creating showers of sparks in its passage over the surface.

ROY AGAIN HEADS THE COUNTY BOARD

At annual meeting of the board of county commissioners held Tuesday and Wednesday at the county seat, Paul Roy of St. Hilaire was re-elected chairman for the coming year by unanimous vote of the board. This is, we believe, the first instance of a chairman being elected to succeed himself since the county first was organized in 1910. The choice will meet with general approval as Mr. Roy has made an excellent record for himself the past year as board chairman.

At the Tuesday meeting, the Thief River Falls Times was named the official newspaper of the county for 1936, and the St. Hilaire Spectator was named the official paper in which shall be published the second publication of the Annual Financial Statement of the county. Fixing of bonds for the different county officers, setting amount of salaries to be paid, assignment of board members to different committees to have charge of county activities the coming year, etc., occupied most of the time of the board at the annual meeting.

NAMED TO TEACH 7TH, 8TH GRADES

At meeting of the board of education held Tuesday night, Mr. Ben Wollan of Glenwood was elected to fill the unexpired term of Miss Onerheim as teacher of the 7th and 8th grades of the local school. Mr. Wollan is a graduate of Lutner College at Decorah, Iowa. He has taken special training in music, and will be able to give valuable aid to the band. He entered upon his duties Wednesday morning.

Word has been received that M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., will attend the Red River Valley Winter Shows at Crookston on February 4th, and will address the mass meeting to be held in the Armory that evening. His visit to the Valley will offer farmers and townspeople an unusual opportunity to learn first hand of the many extensive projects now being carried forward by the Department of Agriculture.

CLEARING THE CEMETERY

A crew of twenty men in charge of Foreman Paul Ortloff, has put in some work this week at removing stumps from the new addition to the cemetery. Leveling of the ground, landscaping the boulevard in front, planting of shrubs and other beautification work will be done when frost goes out next spring.

SCHOOL NOTES

The St. Hilaire high school basketball team will meet the Oslo school team Friday night this week at the gymnasium at Thief River Falls. All supporters of the team are asked to make special effort to be present at this game.

Bob Briggs, comedy cartoonist, will be the entertainer on the next assembly program to be given at 9:00 A. M., next Tuesday, Jan. 14, at the school. For adults the admission charge will be 15 cents. People of town are cordially invited to attend. With your help, we hope to make this event pay cost of obtaining this entertainer.

Renamed Board Head

PAUL ROY
Of St. Hilaire, who Tuesday was reelected chairman of the Pennington county board at its organization meeting.

200 ELIGIBLE FOR OLD-AGE PENSIONS

Pennington county has 200 persons eligible for old age pensions under the new federal social security plan now before special session of the legislature, according to a survey made.

Pennington county is one of the counties paying old age pensions at the present time, and it has 35 persons more than 65 years old on relief, 9 persons between ages of 60 and 65 on relief, and 10 not receiving pensions who would be entitled to old age payments at present time if relief were not available and county finances permitted the payments. The survey discloses that 7 per cent of the population of the county are more than 65 years old, and that 27 per cent of these would be eligible for the new pension.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Only ten more weeks remain before official opening of spring.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday night at the club rooms.

Dr. D. Horn was here Monday and Tuesday from Ulen to attend to his local dental practice.

Manford Dahle returned Monday to the University of North Dakota after spending the holidays at home.

We wish to thank the Red Cross for articles bought for us, and also for the Christmas Cheer box. Mr. and Mrs. J. Neuman and family.

Local buyers of eggs report a heavy increase in intake the past two weeks. A steady increase is expected from now until early summer.

First meeting of the new village council with Lester Olson as president, and Frank Sweet as councilman, was held at the village hall Tuesday evening to transact routine business.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holmes entertained a group of friends last Friday evening in honor of Mrs. Holmes' father and sister, Wm. Novak and Mrs. Hazel Swadburg.

Robert Huff and Arvid Rolland have taken over the repair shop at the Erickson garage. Their specialty will be dismantling of old cars and selling of used parts.

William Prichard, elected mayor of Thief River Falls at election last fall, took office this week. Mr. Prichard has had previous experience as he was mayor of Thief River Falls a few years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdie Brown motored down Sunday from Grygla and spent the day at the home of Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Jennie Carter. They were accompanied here by Darrell Carter who had spent a week with them at Grygla.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson entertained at bridge Friday evening honoring Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord and son of Fosston. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. M. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. O. Gunstad, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Olson.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE

Mrs. Robert Black was honored by about twenty of her friends at a bridal shower given Friday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. Hilda Gigstad. Games and contests of various kinds furnished diversion during the afternoon, and later a delicious luncheon was served. Mrs. Black was the recipient of remembrances of the happy occasion.

TOY BALLOON FOUND 250 MILES FROM SEND-OFF

Alexandria— What must be close to a record for the flight of a toy balloon is reported by John Eklund of Kensington, who found such a balloon recently in a tree on his place three miles southwest of Kensington, in Douglas county. The toy balloon had inscribed on it, "Gene Hagen, age three years, 1809 24th Street, Sioux City, Iowa." The distance from Sioux City to Kensington by air line is about 250 miles. South winds, rather unusual at this time of the year were prevailing the week before the balloon was found, which accounts for its having come so far at a season of the year when such a trip would hardly be expected.

School re-opened Monday morning after the annual holiday vacation of two weeks.

Only 349 days remain until Christmas. Counting out Sundays and holidays, there are not so many shopping days left. Do your buying early.

Annual ice harvest has started down on the river. Because of low stage of the water, it is likely less ice will be cut here this season than in former years.

Mrs. Emil Just returned Saturday after spending the past month at Larimore, N. D., at the home of her son and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Carr. The past week was spent with friends in Grand Forks.

MACK BROTHERS BUY MEAT MARKET

Ernest Mack, who is employed at the Schantzen garage, and his brother, Lloyd Mack of Argyle, have bought the shop equipment of the City Meat Market in the Bilden & Olson building and took charge Tuesday. As soon as they have finished with renovating the place, the young men will have a complete stock of fresh and smoked meats. Lloyd Mack was employed as meat cutter in a shop at Argyle before coming here. Carl Pearson, who formerly owned the market, has not fully decided on what he will do in the future.

SPEAKS JAN. 21 IN THIEF RIVER FALLS

Will prices of farm products be higher or lower in 1936 than in 1935? Which products are likely to enjoy the most favorable prices? Will 1936 farm incomes in Minnesota be above or below those for 1935? What factors and conditions will have deciding influences on farm incomes in Minnesota and Pennington county next year?

The foregoing questions will be discussed by J. B. McNulty extension economist of University Farm, at a meeting to be held in Thief River Falls at the court house Wednesday, Jan. 22 at 2:00 o'clock, County agent R. M. Douglass announced today. Mr. McNulty will suggest things the indivividul farmer can do to increase his income during the coming year. He will show why, under identical conditions, some farmers make money while others go behind, in years when prices are good as well as when they are poor. Other questions that may affect farm incomes in Pennington county will be discussed.

A representative of the farm credit administration will explain the kinds of credit that can be obtained from the various loan agencies of the farm credit administration. The origin, the purpose, and the profitable use of the particular kinds of credit available to farmers, thru farm credit loan agencies, will be discussed. Some think the farm credit administration is loaning too much money; others think that it is not loaning enough to farmers. Who is right? Can farmers make a profitable use of credit in 1936? Will interest rates be likely to go higher or lower?

The foregoing are suggestive of the subjects that will be taken up. The entire program is free to anyone who wishes to attend.

H. WINTER SELLS HIS BARBER SHOP

In a deal made a few days ago, Harry Winter sold his barber shop equipment and business, located in the Branum building, to Mr. Ben E. Burk of Erskine. Mr. Burk was recently employed in shops at Wadena, and comes here recommended as a first class workman. He plans on making a few changes at the shop, and will continue at the same stand. Because of injury to his right hand, sustained some months ago, Mr. Winter found it difficult to continue in the barber trade, and he now plans to devote his entire time to farming and to operation of his apiary which he will enlarge the coming spring.

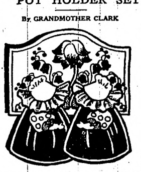
PRETTY STENCILED POT HOLDER SET

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



These two little Sunbonnet Girls seem to be having some important secrets. They both work in the kitchen and are talking over their day's experience. They are the little pot holder girls, a cute and novel holder to have in your kitchen. The two dresses are the pot holders and when hanging up snap into place under the bonnet. Finished size 11 by 14 inches.

This stamped and tinted piece of material, No. 1002, will be mailed for 15 cents. This is to be made up and worked in simple outline stitch.

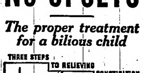
Century of Progress

Sugar has been grown commercially in Hawaii, America's mid-Pacific Sugar Bowl, for a hundred years. Hawaiian plantations have electric power plants, irrigation works, scientific experiment stations and employees' welfare projects. Hawaii now produces close to 1,000,000 tons of sugar yearly and pays more taxes into the United States treasury than sixteen mainland states.

NO UPSETS

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION



A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

No New Taxes Soon, Says Senator Pat Harrison

SENATOR PAT HARRISON of Mississippi, chairman of the senate finance committee, on his arrival in Washington for the opening of congress gave out the welcome statement that no new general tax legislation would be pushed through during this session. Said he: "I don't look for it and I don't think it is in the realm of possibility."

Sen. Harrison.

Adoption of a manufacturer's excise tax was also "out," according to Harrison. He pictured an unusually short session of congress with appropriation bills and amendments to existing legislation the principal business to be handled.

In the senator's opinion a compromise on the bonus, always politically vexatious, would be reached and a presidential veto would be avoided. Harrison reiterated his opposition to the Townsend old age pension plan and said it would make no progress at the new session.

Many house members agreed with Harrison as to taxes. It wouldn't be good policy to pass such measures this session for there will be elections in 435 congressional districts in 1936.

Pat Harrison took a crack at the Liberty league and its legislative program offered to congress. The league, he said, was "ready to take over the legislative and judicial functions" of the national government and might be magnanimous enough to take over the executive branch as well. The senator called the league a "lobby" and described its statements as "plutocratic propaganda."

Alcohol Control Valid, Says Federal Judge

FEDERAL JUDGE CHARLES J. BRIGGLE of Peoria, Ill., ruled that the Federal Alcohol Control administration act is constitutional, the decision being made in a test case brought by a Peoria distillery company. The alcohol administration closed the distillery, asserting it held no basic permit at the time the old code was outlawed by the Supreme court. The company held it did hold such a permit and applied for a new one.

Judge Briggle denied the plea for an injunction to force the administration temporarily to retract its decision on the application for a basic permit. In his decision he said:

"The former objections to the wrongful delegation of legislative authority with reference to the so-called 'code' provisions now has been obviated by this act, and while the plaintiff's position in some other respects is not without merit, yet the court is not convinced that sufficient doubt exists as to the constitutionality of the act to warrant the court in granting a temporary injunction."

Ruling by McCarl Halts Relief Food Purchase

COMPTROLLER GENERAL J. R. McCARL issued an order that blocked the plans of the Federal Surplus Commodity corporation to buy surplus farm products for relief distribution. He held that the administration could not use the 30 per cent of gross customs receipts set aside for the AAA to buy farm products to be given to relief clients. In a letter to Secretary Wallace, McCarl said relief legislation and relevant statutes provided another way to handle such purchases.

J. R. McCarl

It was believed McCarl's ruling would not affect AAA plans for purchases for diversion purposes and not for relief distribution. An offer has been made for purchases of surplus potatoes from the 1935 crop, to be diverted into industrial channels. Officials said, however, they did not expect growers to take advantage of this offer because of recently advanced prices for potatoes.

Latest Returns From Literary Digest Poll

NEW DEALERS speak scornfully of the Presidential poll conducted by the Literary Digest, but everyone is eager to see what it reveals. The latest returns show a still further decline in New Deal popularity. Out of a total of 987,158 votes received, 577,631 answered negatively the question "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?" This brought the negative percentage to the new high figure of 58.51 per cent. The last preceding percentage was 57.69.

The Rocky Mountain states, with the single exception of Utah, contributed substantial majorities against the New Deal, as did four of the six New England states, which were voting 3 to 1 against Roosevelt.

Senate Munitions Probers to Hear J. P. Morgan

MEMBERS of the senate munitions committee announced that they would resume on January 7 their investigation of whether loans to the allies helped to get the United States into the World war, and the first witnesses will be J. P. Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont, of Morgan & Co. The committee plans to try for the enactment of broader neutrality legislation.

The Morgan firm, which was fiscal agent for Great Britain during the war, has denied emphatically that it played any part in leading America into the conflict. Chairman Nye and other committee members have thought otherwise.

Benson Named to Fill Out Schall's Term

ELMER A. BENSON, state banking commissioner of Minnesota, was appointed United States senator by Gov. Floyd B. Olson to complete the term of the late Senator Thomas D. Schall. He will serve until December 31, 1936. Mr. Benson has been a Farmer-Laborite since that party's birth and before that was active in the Nonpartisan league movement in Minnesota. He is forty years old.

The new senator is an advocate of public ownership of monopolistic industry and a backer of collective bargaining for labor. He has urged greater levies on higher incomes and inheritances, and favors immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus.

"I shall be very glad," Benson said, "to join the liberal bloc in congress in opposition to those who would turn the arms of the clock backwards and perpetuate a system callous to human suffering, which neither understands nor wants to understand the meaning of human happiness."

Mississippi Valley Plan of Senator Norris

WITHOUT waiting for a ruling by the Supreme court on the validity of the Tennessee Valley authority act, Senator Norris of Nebraska, father of that and much other advanced legislation, has prepared a bill for a Mississippi Valley authority along the same lines as the TVA but immensely greater in scope. He intends to introduce the measure soon in congress. It would embrace more than half of continental United States, including all the vast plain between the Alleghenies and the western continental divide and from near the Canadian border to the delta of the Mississippi; only the Tennessee valley would be omitted from the plan.

Sen. Norris.

Norris said it was an expansion of his former plan for a Missouri valley authority. Flood control would be its chief goal, he disclosed, but it also would direct the development of navigation, irrigation, hydroelectric power, soil conservation and reforestation.

Like TVA it would be managed by a three-man directorate. The cost is not stated. Congress would vote funds from year to year as the work progressed.

Uruguay Severs Relations With Soviet Russia

DECLARING that all America is menaced with violence by the Communists, the Uruguayan government severed relations with the government of Soviet Russia; Minister Alexander Rinkin and his staff were handed their passports, and the Uruguayan charge d'affaires was recalled from Moscow. The decree, signed by President Gabriel Terra and all members of the cabinet, asserted that Montevideo was the headquarters of Communists who were plotting uprisings in all South America countries, and quoted the Brazilian charges that the abortive rebellion there in November was instigated by the Soviet government and that the Montevideo legation was its intermediary.

Relations with Russia were broken on these three formal charges:

1. That the recent congress of the Third Internationale in Moscow agreed to push a communistic drive throughout South America, with Communists involved in the Brazilian uprising.

2. That the Soviet legation remitted checks for large sums to unidentified recipients, "providing foundation" for a presumption that the legation actively aided Communist plans.

3. That there was a direct connection between the Third Internationale and the Soviet government.

Dr. Jose Espalter, Uruguayan foreign minister, said:

"We have proof that Montevideo was the center of a gigantic Soviet expansionist plot and that Minkin was organizing a revolution in Uruguay for next February or March."

Huge Deficit in First Half of Fiscal Year

WITH the final week not reported, the treasury came to the end of the first half of the current fiscal year with receipts behind expenditures by about $1,786,000,000. For every dollar collected in taxes and other revenues since the financial year began July 1, $1.95 had been spent. Of the latter, $1.10 went for the regular general expenditures of department and bureaus and 85 cents was for relief and other emergency purposes.

These factors, coupled with prospective expenditures, caused an increase of $1,843,000,000 in the gross federal public debt. The debt rose from $28,700,000,000 last July 1, to $30,543,000,000 on December 23.

For the same period, all categories of receipts, except processing taxes, showed increases over a year ago. Total receipts were $1,865,000,000 compared with $1,811,000,000 in the same period of the 1935 fiscal year.

Against the public debt total, the treasury had a balance of $2,291,000,000 in cash on hand, which included $143,000,000 of its gold profits resulting from the revaluation of the dollar, and $252,000,000 from seignorage charges on the coinage of newly mined silver.

The working balance totaled $1,895,000,000, much larger than usual because some $900,000,000 was borrowed to meet the wintertime costs of the relief and recovery programs.

Chance for European War Seems to Increase

WAR clouds over Europe were growing denser and blacker during the Christmas holidays when all the Christian world was supposed to be singing "Peace on Earth, good will toward men." Under the skillful guidance of Anthony Eden, the new British foreign secretary, a solid front against Italy was being built up. There was no present talk of further sanctions against Mussolini, but it is expected added penalties will be put in force late in January. Meanwhile the general military and naval staffs of Great Britain and France concluded conversations which were declared "satisfactory," meaning that those nations were prepared to stand by each other in case Il Duce makes what Prime Minister Baldwin called "a mad dog attack." In the capitals of other members of the League of Nations similar plans were being laid by military and naval attaches.

Anthony Eden

Turkey came into line with the other presumptive opponents of Italy, but is reported to have made a suggestion that France doesn't like. This is that it be permitted to fortify the Dardanelles, the strait between Europe and Asiatic Turkey which was demilitarized under the treaty of Lausanne after the World war. The Turks also, according to Paris advices, ask the eventual return of the island of Rhodes in the Aegean sea, which has been under Italian sovereignty since 1923.

Eden is a firm believer in the League of Nations and, though he is moving with caution, is determined to bring Italy to terms through the sanctions provided the other members of the league give the necessary support. The British government certainly doesn't want war with Italy, but it is fast preparing for armed conflict if that shall prove to be unavoidable.

That Mussolini, too, is getting ready for extreme eventualities was evidenced by orders canceling all Christmas leaves of all officers and men of the army. The same orders directed the return to their units of the 100,000 army men demobilized in November in order that they might do the needed work on their farms.

Premier Laval, defending his course in the negotiations to end the Italo-Ethiopian war and promising that France would stand by Great Britain faithfully if the latter were attacked, saved his government temporarily by the slight margin of twenty votes. He skilfully dodged the oil embargo issue. It was believed that his downfall before long was likely.

Terms on Which Ethiopia Will Discuss Peace

DISPATCHES from Addis Ababa said reliable sources there disclosed the terms on which Emperor Haile Selassie had authorized his delegation at Geneva to discuss peace. They were thus stated:

Withdrawal of Italian troops from Ethiopia; recognition of the African empire's sovereignty; payment of indemnity by Italy; delimitation of East African boundaries between Ethiopia and the Italian colonies by a league of nations committee, and foreign economic, administrative, and financial aid and advice for Ethiopia only on the condition there would be no Italian influence.

Lindbergh's Going May Lead to Crime Inquiry

DEPARTURE of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh with his wife and child from the Untied States because of threats of kidnapers probably will lead to a congressional investigation of crime. Senator Pope of Idaho said he was prepared to introduce a resolution calling for such an inquiry, in the hope of making America a safer place in which to live.

His resolution would authorize an investigation of local enforcement conditions, primarily to determine if an "American Scotland Yard" controlled by the federal government could co-ordinate police agencies successfully.

A Biographical Fragment That Stands the Acid Test

PARK LANE HOTEL, LONDON.

THERE is an old Park Row axiom that "names make news." But news dies and the pulmotor of publicity is strained to its utmost in any effort to vitalize the remains.

In the lounge of this Picadilly hostelry where one may always find a percentage of Americans plotting the downfall of care, I spotted a New Yorker who proved to me beyond all possible doubt that current interest is nothing compared with human interest. The story he told could just as well have been dateless and nameless:

In the year 1892 an Irish youth, twenty-six and fresh from the far country, landed at New York in search of a job, which he found almost immediately upon his arrival in a Wall Street newspaper office.

Makes Humble Start.

"Just where do you want me to begin?" he asked of the proprietor.

"I may start you off as manager of the messenger boys. Or possibly ask you to interview Mr. Morgan on market conditions. And then, again, you might take up the matter of foreign exchange and equip yourself to handle that department."

"I know nothing of exchange, foreign or local, or its relation to the money market. Nor do I consider myself equipped to tackle it," said the youth.

"The proper way to learn about exchange is to write about exchange. There is no shorter course of training. And now is the time to begin."

This observation called for decisive action. The ambitious Celt suddenly recalled a design for initiative that had been handed him in Dublin before he had set out for the United States:

2—All forms of work are equally honorable.

3—Never be surprised at anything you hear, for anything is likely to be done anywhere, any time.

Tries Design for Living.

So, facing the situation, he went to work in the fetid atmosphere of money madness, mastering sinking and soaring values with mathematical accuracy. The sixteenth day of his novitiate in Wall Street fell upon October 12, the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, and as such a national holiday. Great expectations possessed the young Irishman, keen to observe New York under gala circumstances. However, he was informed by his boss that Columbus day had been chosen as an appropriate date upon which to install certain necessary steam piping through the pressroom, and would the student of exchange and its collateral branches kindly be on hand to assist in the plumbing operations?

Paragraphs 2 and 3 of the design for living—in America—flashed the stop, look and listen signal, with the result that he postponed celebrating Christopher's performance and spent the day learning the secrets of how to manipulate monkey wrenches and left-handed pipe tongs. It was a great experience for one struggling to solve the problems of modern finance and why things happen "anywhere, any time."

Won by Wall Street.

In any case the recruit from Ireland found himself so completely absorbed in the activities of Wall Street as to be forever won away from thought of earning a livelihood otherwise, or elsewhere. Indeed he came finally to believe implicitly in his mentor's dictum that the "proper way to learn about anything was to write about it." Writing became his profession; the Street, his mistress. More than that, he absorbed much of the homely philosophy of his employer, a personality who left a lasting impress upon his times. One of the latter's private ecstasies after the tickers were shut down for the day and the market closed, was to slip away to his residence on Leffert's place, Brooklyn, and with his own hand prepare from 20 to 30 portions of chopped meat which he set out on tin plates in the back yard for whatever stray cats wished to collect a daily dividend that involved no investment.

After the story of the meat line leaked out an inquisitive trader asked the Good Samaritan why he kept up the practice. "Well," said he, "the time may come when I will find myself in a situation where I need desperately the friendship of cats."

The young Irishman, despite the plumbing interlude, remained on the staff until 1905, 13 years to a day, when he took his pen elsewhere, to return after an interval of 25 years, during which period he established an international reputation as a writer.

I suppose there are some readers of this column who just won't sleep unless I supply names. Very well: Charles H. Dow, Dow, Jones & Co., founder of the Wall Street Journal, fed the cats at Leffert's place, Brooklyn, and Thomas Francis Woodlock, the present contributing editor of that paper, doubled as the plumber and steam-fitter.

After an exhaustive survey that reached into every corner of the nation, Prof Paul D. Converse of the University of Illinois, in collaboration with the National Association of Finance Companies, has found the answer in this question. Office clerks, with a percentage of 92 per cent, it is disclosed, lead the list.

Trailing them, in terms of approximate percentage, are the following: Storekeepers, 89; school teachers, 85; dentists, 82; doctors, 80; nurses, 79; lawyers, 61; mechanics and tenant farmers, 60; policemen and firemen, 58; common labor and hotel employees, 47; barbers and truck drivers, 45; painters and decorators, 38.—G. R. Turner in Kansas City Times.

Childlikeness Which Is Highest Gain of Humanity

There is a childhood into which we have to grow, just as there is a childhood which we must leave behind; a childlikeness which is the highest gain of humanity, and a childishness from which but few of those who are counted the wisest among men, have freed themselves in their imagined progress towards the reality of things.—George McDonald.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well - Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

The Original Milk of Magnesia Wafers

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It was in the sultry days of the summer of 1914, it will be remembered, that Archduke Ferdinand was laid low by an assassin's bullet in a remote province of Austria. At the time, the assassination was front page news for most of the newspapers but its real import was not generally recognized. Nevertheless, from that incident sprang the greatest war the world has ever known.

Waiting for a Spark

Within a few months of 22 years after the assassination at Sarajevo the world sees a situation in Europe where another such incident would have consequences just as violent. At the present time, ammunition dumps all over Europe are waiting for a spark to set them off. It may be an accidental spark or it may be a spark deliberately cast into that powder keg. I do not mean to say that it will happen but I do wish to emphasize that at no time since the Archduke's assassination has there been a field so fertile for the promotion of a gigantic war as the present.

It may seem, and it undoubtedly does seem to many, that the dangers inherent in the European situation at present are afar off. But, it can be recalled that there were those in this country who, as late as 1916, said the European war was 3,000 miles away. Before it ended, however, 5,000,000 American boys and young men had been drafted to be thrown into that European cauldron. It may happen again.

While there is no immediate possibility of the United States getting tangled up in the European political problems which spring from hostilities between Ethiopia and Italy, those who know history cannot fail to agree with the statement that it is never too early to plan for preventing war. For that reason, then, I believe almost every family in the United States has a stake, either directly or indirectly, in one of the problems with which congress must deal. This legislation is known by the short and rather indescriptive title of the neutrality policy. It is, indeed, just that, but the point I seek to make is that the title does not convey by any manner or means its full importance or its full effect upon the lives of each of us. If a policy can be worked out, a policy that is effective, obviously our chances for remaining out of any hostilities in Europe—or in Asia for that matter—are certainly much better. I do not know and I do not believe anybody can say accurately that it is possible to develop a neutrality policy that will be fool-proof; or that will guarantee to us the removal of possible entanglements, or that will prevent us from stubbing our toes and falling into the midst of the mess. It seems to me, however, that we ought to try.

Keep Us Out of War

A year ago about this time, congress enacted a bill which was designed to prevent the shipment of war materials to any belligerent nation or nations. It was mandatory. The President was directed by congress to lay an embargo against the shipment of arms, ammunition of war to any countries engaged in hostilities regardless of whether their claims were right or wrong. We have had some experience with the force of that legislation already and it has not been without its embarrassing and difficult phases. Now, however, it is proposed to revamp that legislation which was admittedly of a temporary character and is due to expire by limitation of law on February 29. Congress has been told rather definitely, I think, that this country wants to remain out of someone else's war. The President has the same idea. So, instead of allowing our citizens to run wild, ship anything and everything, make contracts with the countries now engaged in war or those that may be engaged later, it is proposed that we have a permanent policy embodying whatever principles may be found wisest to protect us from ourselves and prevent us from throwing ourselves again into such a volcano of molten lava as any present-day war would be.

The problem is not as simple as it appears on the surface. When congress enacted the present temporary neutrality legislation, it provided that the embargoes, when and if laid, must apply to all. It gave the President no discretionary power to determine whether we wanted to use these embargoes as a weapon against one nation while aiding another. Mr. Roosevelt, in accepting the original legislation, said publicly that he believed he should have such discretionary power. This was in line with the conclusions of the Department of State which necessarily must be the President's adviser on matters of this kind.

Congress was criticized in many quarters when it made the embargoes applicable to all belligerents. Now, however, if we may judge from the word that comes to Washington, sentiment seems to be swinging in the other direction and there certainly is a considerable, if not a majority, sentiment for use of the mandatory provision as distinguished from the extension of discretionary authority to the President. To say it another way, the sentiment appears to be in favor of making the embargoes applicable to all belligerent powers and not just to one nation whose claims our government may believe to be unjust.

Expect Hot Debate

It is safe to say that before congress determines definitely what the permanent policy shall be, there will be bitter debate. In examining the problem, it is to be remembered that when the government lays an embargo against all nations at war it takes away possibilities of tremendous profit. This profit accrues to those industries by which sustaining war materials are produced. Neutrality legislation, therefore, may prove costly, not as costly as war, perhaps, but nevertheless a costly action. Hence, there is no question that many lines of commerce and industry are going to be drawn into the preliminaries of this decision.

To explain how disturbing to certain lines of industry this thing can be, it is only necessary to recall events of the last month or so in connection with the sanctions proposed by the League of Nations. The League has tried to force the dictator, Mussolini, to withdraw from Africa by the use of embargoes, which is what sanctions are. The League proceeded with considerable vigor until it reached the question of oil. Immediately, shoes began to pinch and the feet that were pinched were in every country where oil is found, even our own.

As a result, they have led the oil horse up to the watering trough from a half dozen different approaches but they have not yet been able to make him drink. Our own oil interests have not been quiescent. If the league bans oil shipments to Italy, the United States, which is not a member of the league, obviously will do likewise. Profits of the oil companies and the hundreds upon hundreds of thousands of shareholders would be cut.

Further, Mussolini has announced publicly that imposition of the embargo upon oil would mean war. He did not say with whom he would go to war but the British and the French know and they are getting ready. The British has its entire home fleet in the Mediterranean at this time and the Blue Jackets aboard the British men of war have been drilled thoroughly anew in the science of manning their big guns.

So it is seen how delicate this whole circumstance is. It is plain that when congress deals with the neutrality legislation, it is moulding a pattern over which there will be undoubtedly an alignment among our citizens as sharply drawn as though it were a purely domestic question. There will be those, of course, who favor a permanent policy which will make it mandatory upon the President to apply embargoes against shipments of anything usable in war and treat all nations engaged in war alike. There will be set off against this sentiment those who think the Chief Executive should have discretionary power and that the government should not be placed in a strait-jacket from which it cannot extricate itself without congressional action. Whatever the conclusions may be and whatever form the new legislation takes, it remains as one of the most important policies to come before congress in many moons. Whatever is done necessarily will be a precedent toward which future generations will look as time goes on whether civilization becomes more enlightened or not.

Must Cut Outgo

The Treasury, operating on a fiscal year that runs from July 1 to June 30, has just passed the half-way point in the current 12-month period. The figures show that its receipts are lagging far behind the expenditures and demonstrates the necessity for cutting down the federal outgo unless the nation desires to see its public debt go far beyond any total hitherto conceived.

The official Treasury statement as of December 30 shows that the government has spent approximately $1,850,000,000 more in the first six months of this fiscal year than it received in taxes and other revenue.

In consequence of this deficit, the public debt is now approximately $30,600,000,000, the highest point it ever has reached and that total is roughly two billion dollars higher than the public debt as it stood last July 1 when the present fiscal year began.

Since the expenditures were so much larger than the receipts, the Treasury has been operating on a basis that, reduced to the minimum, shows an outgo of about $1.96 for every $1.00 collected in revenue during the first half of the current year.

Many Arson Fires

In the United States today a house or other structure is willfully set on fire—for insurance, excitement or revenge—on an average of once every 105 minutes, despite the fact that arson fires are usually easy to detect and the punishment is severe. In six states conviction calls for the death penalty and, in 14 others, it results in either life imprisonment or a 20-year sentence.

Washington Monument Dimensions

The Washington monument is 555 feet 5⅛ inches in height. The base is 55 feet square, and the top is 34 feet 3 inches square.

With the Minnesota Lawmakers

With the liberals bombarding the committee's pension bill with provisions designed to increase its dispensary provisions, and with the more conservative members just as firm in their resolution to stick by the majority presentation, the state senate tossed the old age pension ball into the think of the legislative fray.

Moving into the final phases of pension consideration, the senate approved four changes in the bill and rejected four others. Approved were measures to give government agencies a common claim on the estate of deceased pensioners in the amount of benefits paid, to require pensioners to reside in their home counties at least a year before applying, and to permit temporary change of counties without loss of benefit.

In rapid succession, amendments designed to place management of the pension system under the state board of control and to increase the minimum from $35 to $45 a month were voted down by sizeable majorities.

The first amendment, proposed by Sen. B. G. Novak, St. Paul, recommended that the state and federal governments bear the entire cost of the pension distribution instead of forcing a portion of the cost on the county as the committee bill proposes. Senator Charles N. Orr of the capital city urged the defeat of this amendment, stating that a state controlled system would encourage payment of pension to persons who did not actually need it.

Financing of the pensions continued to lurk in the background as a possible subject of disagreement between the house and the senate. A house sub-committee was working on a bill designed to put an extra two million dollars into the general revenue fund to permit that fund to finance pensions without adding to the one million dollar load already put on real estate. The bill, in rough form, included 25 per cent surtaxes on individual and corporate incomes, a five mill corporate excess tax, a surtax on inheritances, a gift tax, and additional taxes on liquor and telephone, freight line, sleeping car and express company gross earnings, all to expire after one year's operation.

Additions to the tentative revenue bill were announced by Rep. W. R. Youngquist, Minneapolis, chairman of the subcommittee drawing up the measure. New taxes, inserted since the first drafting of the bill, he said, are the liquor tax, which advances levies from 60 cents to $1 a gallon and the gross earnings taxes.

The telephone tax would leave the present 4 per cent rate in effect on local exchange business in fourth class cities and other towns of less than 10,000, but would advance it to 6 per cent on all toll business and on exchange business in the larger towns and the metropolitan centers. The increases proposed on freight, sleeping car, and express company earnings are the same as those proposed in the much discussed omnibus bill

The senate is hanging back on the definite financing discussion until the pension takes more definite shape. Senator A. J. Rockne, Zumbrota, has suggested that an outstanding two million dollar debt of the highway department to the general revenue fund be paid off next year to bear most of the pension load.

Without a dissenting vote, the house speedily approved the tax bill designed to permit property owners to pay their delinquent taxes in installments. The measure applies to all property taxes delinquent in 1933 and before, and is aimed at encouraging repayment of all or part of the $85,000,000 taxes that are unpaid in the state.

Active interest of the legislature in the recent turmoil over labor disputes and the spread of crime in the state was indicated again by the announcement of Edwin L. Lindell, executive secretary of the Minnesota Law and Order league. Eight bills for curbing crime will be submitted to the legislature if the special session continue long enough and the members care to discuss such matters, Lindell said.

The bills would include measures to give the prosecution in criminal cases the final plea of the jury, to transfer some duties from the pardon to the parole board, to adopt the uniform extradition act to give police and sheriffs in adjoining states the right, to cross state lines when in full pursuit of criminals, to require registration of guests and motor vehicles in tourist and cabin camps, and to increase penalties for drunken driving.

Debate over the Novak proposed waged hot and heavy for a few hours with Sen. H. C. Steining, Moorhead, drawing considerable interest with his survey of the same sort of system as used in Ohio. In the Buckeye state, Steining said, the situation has become so bad that the governor has called for an investigation. Eighteen months after Ohio adopted the strictly state administered system there were 81,000 pensioners on the rolls as against an original maximum estimate of 70,000, he stated

You Must Govern Self Before You Can Guide Your Offspring

Young Follow Example Set by Parents, Psychologist Shows.

"He's a chip off the old block," you say, little realizing, perhaps, how squarely you are hitting the nail on the head. According to an article in the Parents' Magazine, "Not only in matters of temperament can the origin of a child's problem be traced to the parent but in the realm of attitudes there is very often a definite relationship."

"The major problems of divorce, discordant homes, widowhood, illness and other serious situations are reflected in the maladjustments of the children," in the opinion of Helen Sargent, supervisor of the psychological clinic, Northwestern university. Admitting that the roots and branches of such problems are so far reaching that each requires extensive study and individual solution, Miss Sargent declares:

"There are many less apparent connections between the ways in which adult members of the household choose for meeting their lives and certain trends which appear in youngsters."

High-Tensioned Mother.

The psychologist calls our attention to the "little terror" in the home, whose mother has been warned he has a nervous temperament and must not be overstimulated. She follows expert advice to the letter—makes him rest before going to bed, forbids him exciting radio programs, etc. But Sonny continues to grind his teeth, toss in bed, to "raise cain" in general during the day hours. Miss Sargent asks us to watch his mother in action:

"With studied quiet she asks him to stop banging on the table while she is telephoning, then in a voice tense with annoyance tells the grocer what she thinks of the peas he sent yesterday. She arranges a simple routine for her son but herself rushes from one task to the next, creating an atmosphere of crackling electricity wherever she moves."

Mother, Daughter Egocentric.

Dorothy's another example. Miss Sargent points out the poor child simply can't or won't make friends and it worries mother. Yet mother confesses:

"I never have liked many people . . . When I'm with a group, I always wish to get back home . . . I don't miss people . . . I have my family."

Miss Sargent's theory is that if mother is to find out what's wrong with Dorothy, she must search her own character. "Mother must determine why her life has become so egocentric that she is content to do without friendly contacts that are a vital part of the life of the average human being."

The article clears up a number of points which must puzzle plenty of parents. Its theme song is, before you try to guide your child, you must be able to govern yourself. You must meet your own problems and find a solution or you simply can't map out the program that will benefit your offspring.

SENATE TUESDAY PASSES OLD-AGE PENSION MEASURE

Less Liberal Bill Anticipated from Lower House of Legislature

Restoring the controversial lien provision, the state senate Tuesday passed a bill to pay beginning May 1 $30 monthly old age pensions to needy 65 year old residents, with the state and counties to each pay one-fourth of the costs and with county beards administering the law under supervision of the state board of control.

The measure, approved by a final roll call of 58 to 6 with four liberals and two conservatives dissenting, now goes to the house which earlier in the day returned its bill to committee with instructions to make it less liberal.

One point of issue generally expected to complicate ultimate agreement between senate and house is the matter of financing. The federal government pays onehalp, but the house bill would have counties pledged to contribute oneeighth and the state three-eighths, instead of the state and counties sharing equally in the costs as provided in the senate measure.

As passed by the senate, the bill carried a $1,625,000 allowance which, according to estimates, will cover the state's share of the costs. The bill has been amended to authorize counties to issue excess warrants to cover their share of the costs.

The lien clause was put back into the measure Wednesday by motion of Senator O. J. Finstad, Windom conservative, who argued that some such provision should be made to hold down ultimate costs. The vote was 34 to 30, with party lines yielding in both direction.s

ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAM MAPPED BY DISTRICT WPA

Young People Wishing to Participate Are Asked to Register

With the appointment of Mrs. Elma V. Bradke as district WPA supervisor, the adult education program is definitely under way in the seventh district. The objective will be to get as many classes organized as possible in order that all the unemployed teachers in the district, heretofore on relief, will have work. Classes have already been started in Red Lake and Mahnomen counties, and assignments have been made for two projects and one at Bemidji. In addition to the adult education program, Mrs. Bradke will also have charge of nurse schools, where children of relief workers are taken care of. Three such classes are in operation at White Earth, Becker county.

N. A. Thorson has been appointed district supervisor for the Youth program, which will give part-time employment for young people from relief families. Ray Casperlin has been appointed as time-keeper. Projects, under the National Youth Administration program, will include community development and recreational leadership, rural youth development and public service training.

However, the local district program will center for the present on working part-time on work relief projects. There are 282 relief and 18 non-relief young people in the district, and a total of $16,693 of federal funds has been earmarked for this district. Young people, wishing to participate in this program, must first register with their local national reemployment service, from where they will be certified to the district director and assigned.

PRES. ROOSEVELT SEES '37 DEFICIT FOR WORK RELIEF

President Roosevelt Monday submitted to congress a balanced budget for regular federal expenditures in the 1937 fiscal year but forecast a work relief deficit of $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 for that period.

Mr. Roosevelt withheld from congress estimates of the size of the work relief appropriation to be sought this spring. He said, only, that the appropriation would be "far less" than the $4,88,000,000 which congress grudgingly voted last year.

The message forecast the second largest annual revenue in American history for the next fiscal year —$5,654,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt said that income would give him a $5,000,000 surplus of receipts over regular expenditures in the 1937 fiscal year—still excluding the prospective relief appropriation which will be determined and revealed in March or later.

This budget showed that seven depression years will more than double the national debt —from $15,000,000,000 in 1930 to $31,000,000,000 in 1937. Mr. Roosevelt promised only that the 1937 deficit would be smaller than the $3,234,000,000 estimated for 1936.

He asked for $1,000,000,000 for national defense. This draft on the treasury for men and guns gave emphasis to his January 3 warning that the threat of war is upon the world.

Without mentioning the bonus, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated to congress that it must impose new taxes to meet cash payment or any other burden imposed on the treasury beyond budget items.

Pete Rainard of Crookston, formerly of St. Hilaire, went to Ft. Francis, Canada, to supervise construction of a large sawmill for the Shevlin-Carpenter Company.

Lars Hanson, brother of H. J. Hanson, died Jan. 8th, at a hospital in St. Paul. The remains were shipped here for burial.

N. A. Nelson was elected treasurer of the Bray Mutual Fire Ins. Co., to succeed Chas. Gustafson.

James Ward, age 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Wilson of St. Hilaier, won a cash prize of $5,000.00 for making an airplane flight over the harbor and fortifications at Charlestown, S. C.

O. H. Olson, manager of tue local retail lumber yard, returned after a visit at his old home in Wisconsin.

SHE LOST HER CAR

Trying in vain to find a parking place in the Minneapolis business district, a LeSueur young lady welcomed the offer of a stranger who stepped up. He said he'd park the car for her. She assisted. The man got in, drove around the corner, and the young Miss is still waiting to hear where he parked it.

SENATE TUESDAY PASSES OLD-AGE PENSION MEASURE

Less Liberal Bill Anticipated from Lower House of Legislature

Restoring the controversial lien provision, the state senate Tuesday passed a bill to pay beginning May 1 $30 monthly old age pensions to needy 65 year old residents, with the state and counties to each pay one-fourth of the costs and with county boards administering the law under supervision of the state board of control.

The measure, approved by a final roll call of 58 to 6 with four liberals and two conservatives dissenting, now goes to the house which earlier in the day returned its bill to committee with instructions to make it less liberal.

One point of issue generally expected to complicate ultimate agreement between senate and house is the matter of financing. The federal government pays onehalp, but the house bill would have counties pledged to contribute one-eighth and the state three-eighths, instead of the state and counties sharing equally in the costs as provided in the senate measure.

As passed by the senate, the bill carried a $1,625,000 allowance which, according to estimates, will cover the state's share of the costs. The bill has been amended to authorize counties to issue excess warrants to cover their share of the costs.

The lien clause was put back into the measure Wednesday by motion of Senator O. J. Finstad, Windom conservative, who argued that some such provision should be made to hold down ultimate costs. The vote was 34 to 30, with party lines yielding in both direction.s

Young People Wishing to Participate Are Asked to Register

With the appointment of Mrs. Elma V. Bradke as district WPA supervisor, the adult education program is definitely under way in the seventh district. The objective will be to get as many classes organized as possible in order that all the unemployed teachers in the district, heretofore on relief, will have work. Classes have already been started in Red Lake and Mahnomen counties, and assignments have been made for two projects and one at Bemidji. In addition to the adult education program, Mrs. Bradke will also have charge of nurse schools, where children of relief workers are taken care of. Three such classes are in operation at White Earth, Becker county.

N. A. Thorson has been appointed district supervisor for the Youth program, which will give part-time employment for young people from relief families. Ray Casperlin has been appointed as time-keeper. Projects, under the National Youth Administration program, will include community development and recreational leadership, rural youth development and public service training.

However, the local district program will center for the present on working part-time on work relief projects. There are 282 relief and 18 non-relief young people in the district, and a total of $16,693 of federal funds has been earmarked for this district. Young people, wishing to participate in this program, must first register with their local national reemployment service, from where they will be certified to the district director and assigned.

President Roosevelt Monday submitted to congress a balanced budget for regular federal expenditures in the 1937 fiscal year but forecast a work relief deficit of $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 for that period.

Mr. Roosevelt withheld from congress estimates of the size of the work relief appropriation to be sought this spring. He said, only, that the appropriation would be "far less" than the $4,88,000,000 which congress grudgingly voted last year.

The message forecast the second largest annual revenue in American history for the next fiscal year —$5,654,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt said that income would give him a $5,000,000 surplus of receipts over regular expenditures in the 1937 fiscal year—still excluding the prospective relief appropriation which will be determined and revealed in March or later.

This budget showed that seven depression years will more than double the national debt —from $15,000,000,000 in 1930 to $31,000,000,000 in 1937. Mr. Roosevelt promised only that the 1937 deficit would be smaller than the $3,234,000,000 estimated for 1936.

He asked for $1,000,000,000 for national defense. This draft on the treasury for men and guns gave emphasis to his January 3 warning that the threat of war is upon the world.

Without mentioning the bonus, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated to congress that it must impose new taxes to meet cash payment or any other burden imposed on the treasury beyond budget items.

DAHL COUPLE MARK GOLDEN WEDDING

Children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Dahl gathered at their home in this city Sunday, January 5, to celebrate the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Dahl.

Mr. and Mrs. Dahl were married January 5, 1886, at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, by Rev. N. O. Fossmark of that city. In 1887 they came to Pennington county and settled on a homestead in Smiley Township. After living on the homestead for thirty eight years, they moved to this city in 1935, and have made their home here since that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Dahl are the parents of thirteen children, four of whom are now dead. The children who attended the golden wedding were Mrs. Clarence Dean of Virginia, Minnesota, Mrs. George Hellquist of Minneapolis, Levi Dahl of Willmar, Minnesota, James Arthur Dahl of Rochester, Minnesota, and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, Mrs. Oscar Hellquist, Alvin and Harry Dahl, all of this city.—Thief River Falls Forum.

WILLARD YONKE

WILLARD YONKE AWARDED MEDAL

Willard Yonke, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Yonke of St. Hilaire, returned this week with County Agent Robert Douglass after having attended Farmers and Homemakers Week at University Farm. While there, Willard was presented a valuable medal by the Minnesota Livestock Breeder's Association as a reward for winning the state ton litter contest last month. Willard raised a litter of 13 pigs to a weight of 3,155 pounds in the 180 day period set by rules governing the contest, an average of 242.7 pounds each. The Spectator joins with other friends in extending congratulations to Willard on his winning the honor of champion hog raiser of Minnesota. He and brothers have taken a keen interest in 4-H Club work, and three of the boys won free trips to the Junior Livestock Show last fall as a reward for their activities.

THIEVES TAKE RADIO

While Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson and son were visiting friends last Thursday evening, some person evidently well acquainted with their place, entered the house and carried away an electric radio. So far, no trace has been found of the instrument, but several clues were left that may lead to apprehension of the guilty parties. Some previous happenings of similar nature, as well as petty thievery of gasoline from cars around town, have been let pass without action because of youth of some of the parties concerned, and out of respect for their parents, but the limit of patience has been reached and prison sentences await those who participate in more depredations of this kind.

McNULTY TO SPEAK IN VILLAGE JAN. 21

J. B. McNulty, extension economist of the University Farm, will speak at the Bilden & Olsen hall in St. Hilaire at 2 o'clock Tuesday, Jan. 21st. Mr. McNulty will suggest things the individual farmer can do to increase his income the coming year. He will show why, under identical conditions, some farmers make money while others go behind in years when prices are good as well as when they are poor. Other questions that may affect farm incomes in Pennington county will be discussed. The question, will prices of farm products be higher or lower in 1936 than in 1935? Which products are likely to enjoy the most favorable prices? Will 1936 farm incomes be below or above those of 1935? And the general outlook for the coming crop season will be discussed from viewpoint of one who has made a lifelong study of such conditions.

A representative of the farm credit administration will explain the kinds of credit that can be obtained from the various loan agencies of the farm credit administration. These and many other subjects that are of especial interest at this time, will be discussed. The entire program is free to anyone that wishes to attend. Remember the day and date—Tuesday, Jan. 21, at 2:00 P. M.

SNOW FALLS HERE

The heaviest snow of the present winter fell over this section Saturday night and Sunday morning. Depth of the snowfall is estimated to be between ten and twelve inches. Many side roads were made impassable following the storm, but the main roads have since been opened by the county and state snow moving equipment.

Bob Briggs, comedy cartoonist, gave an interesting entertainment at the school assembly Tuesday morning.

MRS. ANDREW HUSBY DIED SATURDAY

Mrs. Andrew Husby, a resident of this community for fifty-three years, died Saturday morning at her home in Rocksbury township after a short illness. Mrs. Husby, nee Marie Strom, was born at Hancock, Mich., on July 23rd, 1870 and was 65 years, 5 months and 18 days of age. At the age of 13 years, she came with her parents to St. Hilaire and made her home here until her marriage in 1892 to Andrew Husby. Following that time she has resided continuously at the present home farm in Rocksbury.

Mrs. Husby is survived by her husband, seven children and one brother. The children are Mrs. Helmer Finstad of Hazel, Mrs. Joe King of St. Hilaire, Mrs. Arnold Johnson of Warren, Edwin at Fosston, Elmer, Ethel and Alfred who reside at home. The brother is William Strom of Calumet, Mich. One daughter preceded her mother in death some years ago.

A kind and loving wife and mother, Mrs. Husby will be sadly missed by her family as well as many friends in the community where she resided so long.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at 1 o'clock from the home, and at 2 o'clock from the local Norwegian Lutheran church, with Rev. M. L. Dahle officiating. A large number of neighbors and friends of the deceased were present at the service to pay their last respects to Mrs. Husby who was held in high esteem by all. Interment was at the Lutheran cemetery north of the village.

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—much pleasanter to take than liquid. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system, and insure regular, complete elimination without pain or effort.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Expect Long Session

Washington.—President Roosevelt has told congress that he wants it to finish its labors and adjourn in short order. He has figured that about three months ought to give the members sufficient time to mull over the problems that confront them and that they then should return to their several homes. But the President is doomed to disappointment if he sincerely believes that he can get congress out of the Capital by the end of March. The best guess right now is that the congress will be in session at least four months and, it is well within the range of possibilities that it will remain in session almost to the time of the national conventions.

There are a number of factors that make realization of the President's early adjournment wish impossible of realization. Probably the most influential of these is the fact that this is a campaign year. Every member of the house and one-third of the senate, along with Mr. Roosevelt himself, are affected by the election date and politics must have its turn. Every four years this same condition obtains and every four years politicians do about the same things in furtherance of their own political interests. The bulk of the legislation to be considered has its political tinge. Politics even creep into the annual appropriation bills—and usually the result is a swelling of the totals in order that some gears of individual political machines may be oiled just a bit for smooth running in the campaign.

While the appropriation bills are important from a political standpoint, their weight in this session of congress sinks rather below par because there are such things as the bonus for the World war veterans, the Townsend old age pension plan, various New Deal reform measures and such replacement legislation as may be necessary since the Supreme court kicked over New Deal propositions like the Agricultural Adjustment act with its processing taxes and sundry other schemes. However the Roosevelt leaders in congress may desire to act, the machinery of legislation can be run only so fast in an election year.

Seek Publicity

One of the chief reasons why a congressional session in an election year drags on longer than usual is because of the publicity value the sessions have for individual representatives and senators. Members of congress discovered a hundred years ago that the chambers of the house and senate constituted splendid sounding boards for the dissemination of political views. There has been increasing use of this potentiality as the years have gone by until now the older members of the house and senate have become very adept in capitalizing on this factor. It takes no stretch of the imagination to discover that a senator or representative, speaking from the floor of his respective chamber, gets much more publicity than his opponent back home who talks only as a private citizen. It is perfectly natural, therefore, that those members seeking re-election want to take full advantage of the publicity vehicle available to them in Washington.

The use of this publicity weapon is available to opponents of the New Deal as well as to its supporters. While the approaching election may be expected to knit the house Democrats more closely into a unified front for the November election, the same condition is not true in the senate. In that body, there are a number of old-line Democrats who do not like the New Deal and who are going to utilize every available opportunity to make their record as Democrats as complete as it is possible to do before they must speak to the home folks in person. It is obvious that such men as Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, cannot desert the Democratic ticket and run for re-election independently. So it is to be expected that men of this type will establish for themselves a comprehensive outline of their political beliefs as Democrats while distinguishing their position from that known as the New Deal. They must look to the future when, according to all indications, they feel the party machinery will again be controlled by the Jeffersonian type of Democrat instead of by the reform type of Democrat headed by men and women with the New Deal outlook.

Two More Factors

An additional factor operating in the senate is the presence of two Republican Presidential possibilities in the persons of Senator William E. Borah of Idaho and Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan. Senator Borah is actively seeking pledged delegates to the Republican national convention. Senator Vandenberg says he is not a candidate, but the well-known bee is buzzing around and there are many observers who think that Senator Vandenberg is hoping that, in case of a convention stalemate, the assembled delegates may riot and turn to him as the nominee.

Such a condition means, as it has meant before, that these two men will desire to see all of the political issues aired in congressional debates. It is only natural and logical as well that the Republican minority in the house and senate will seek to foment as much debate as possible in order to obtain a record of what the majority party thinks or proposes to do if returned to power.

In all respects, the session will be the most political, therefore, since Mr. Roosevelt took office. His Presidential message on the state of the Union already is being kicked back and forth and picked to pieces in the preliminary campaign gunfire. There is simply no way by which this situation can be avoided. The opening of congress was the opening of the 1936 campaign.

Congress May Stall

In an earlier letter, I reported to you concerning the question of a neutrality policy and declared at that time that it was the most important item to come before the current session. It remains so. I believe the situation is even more delicate than in my earlier anaylsis of this problem and it may well be that congress will stall along in reaching a decision on this policy in order to give foreign developments an opportunity to manifest themselves further. The administration apparently is willing to let congress work out the legislation without much interference but the leaders realize that a decision will be difficult as long as foreign maneuvers continue to present an almost daily change in the scenery.

Reference is made to the neutrality question here because it is one of the things entering into the combination that will cause a longer session than the President wishes.

There seems to be no doubt that passage of a bill to pay the soldiers' bonus at an early date will be accomplished in this session. Likewise, there is hardly the shadow of a doubt that if congress passes such legislation and Mr. Roosevelt vetoes it, the bill will be passed over the veto. It is a campaign year and it is not a good time for politicians to antagonize an organization with the vast membership of the American Legion or the other groups of ex-service men. This legislation will not contribute much to the length of the session but in all such cases representatives and senators must make their speeches and be on record as to why they voted for or against a bill.

The Townsend plan cannot get anywhere in the current session. I do not mean that it will be dodged as a subject of discussion. This is impossible. There will be plenty of debate on it. In the end, however, it will be sidetracked.

Then, there was a flock of inflationary schemes due to horn in on the parade as the session moves forward. Farm mortgage refinancing is one of them. It is unfortunate that the inflationists—those who are willing to prostitute the currency in any manner—are leading in this fight.

Waiting Decisions

In all probability, also, the current session of congress will be called upon to meet some problems resulting from adverse decisions by the Supreme Court of the United States. The court has before it any number of cases involving New Deal policies, including such as the AAA, the TVA with its Tennessee Valley power yardstick, the attempt to regulate wages and hours of labor under the Guffey coal bill known as the Little NRA, and a half dozen other policy propositions. It seems unlikely, although no one can guess, that all of these measures will be held constitutional. If any are held invalid, naturally the President will ask congress to draft new legislation.

As a sample of the political aspect of the current session, one can sight the furor that was stirred up when President Roosevelt delivered his massage on the state of the Union to a night session of congress. Except for one instance, Presidents always have delivered or sent their message to congress at noon of a day after the session has had two or three meetings. Mr. Roosevelt chose to get his message to congress on the very first day of the current session but in order to do it and allow for consummation of the usual routine of the opening day, it was necessary to hold a joint session at night.

The White House announcement of this decision immediately precipitated a biting demand from Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman. Mr. Fletcher charged that since the President's speech was being delivered "out of hours" and was being broadcast to potentially the greatest radio audience ever to listen to a Presidential message of this kind, the broadcasting companies must agree to allocate time for the Republicans to answer it. The Republican chairman asserted that the message was reduced to the "common level of a political speech" and so he demanded for the opposition the right to analyze it from the opposition standpoint through the same number of radio stations and to potentially the same radio audience.

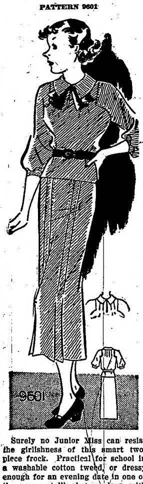
TUCK A SMART BOW BENEATH THE CHIN

PATTERN 9601



Surely no Junior Miss can resist the girlishness of this smart two-piece frock. Practical for school in a washable cotton tweed, or dressy enough for an evening date in one of the new metallic-shot woolens, with velveteen bow and belt. Isn't the cut of the shoulder line unusual? The blouse, with darts front and back, is separate, you know, so its pleated skirt may accompany many different blouses.

Pattern 9601 may be ordered only in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12 requires 2⅛ yards 54 inch fabric and ½ yard 5 inch ribbon. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Winter-Born People Found Lower in IQ Than Others

Are people born in the winter as intelligent as those born in the summer? No. At least, Prof. Rudolph Pintner and Dr. George Forlano, psychologists of Teachers college, Columbia, report in the Journal of Educational Psychology a study they made of the intelligence quotients—now known as the IQ's—of 17,502 children and young people, and they found those born in the winter had a slightly but consistently lower score on intelligence tests than those born during the other months.

Belief Is Influence in Direction of One's Life

The forces that impel action reside in temperatment. The ideals and convictions that guide it are hidden in the mind and heart. A man moves slowly or swiftly, he does his work slowly or swiftly, according to the energy that is in him. But the direction of his life, this way or that way, follows the unseen influence of what he admires and loves and believes in.—Henry Van Dyke.

Take the Time

RESOLVED - TO SAVE TIME AND MONEY THIS YEAR WITH Firestone
GROUND GRIP TIRES
SELF CLEANING

THE best New Year's resolution you can make is to put your car, truck, tractor, and all your farm vehicles on Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

These remarkable tires make their own road — wherever they go. That is why they will take your car or truck through mud, snow, or over unimproved roads — and you will not need chains.

On tractors and farm implements, Ground Grip Tires enable you to do more work in less time at a considerable saving in fuel. The great flexibility of the Gum-Dipped cord body cushions the shocks of rough going and protects costly equipment against vibration and breakage. They make equipment roll easier, reducing draft more than 50%.

No farmer can afford to be without Ground Grip Tires. See your nearby Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer today and resolve to end your traction troubles with Ground Grip Tires.

RIFLE SHOT TO HAIL NEW YEAR K.O.'s TELEPHONES

Little Falls.—At the stroke of 12, as old 1935 took flight and 1936 came in, an unidentified person stood in an alley in Little Falls, all set to usher in the new year. Pressed against his shoulder was a 30-30 rifle, poised high in the air. He pulled the trigger and the bullet mushroomed thru a telephone cable carrying 404 fine copper wires. Instantly some 140 telephones in the north end of the city went out of commission. Within a few minutes there was a call for emergency repair crew. The bad piece was cut out and the two good ends stripped back while workmen set themselves to the tedious task of splicing each pair of wires. A two-way signal system was required for every splice so that the proper connections were made. The work was completed 22 hours after the break, altho many phones were in service before then. This is how a crew of telephone workmen spent New Years day!

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

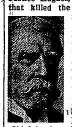
AAA Is Killed by Decision of the Supreme Court

SIX justices of the United States Supreme court, including Chief Justice Hughes, joined in an opinion that killed the Agricultural Adjustment act. Three associate justices, Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo, dissented. The majority decision, read by Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, held that the AAA was wholly unconstitutional because it invaded the rights of the states in seeking to control farm production. The whole system of processing taxes imposed to finance the program was swept into discard.



Chief Justice Hughes

Not only are the processing taxes illegal but the court apparently declared the farm benefit contracts void and put up bars against any attempt of the federal government to regulate farm production by whatever means.

Senators and representatives who immediately began planning legislation to continue benefit payments to farmers and to balance agricultural output did not seem to grasp the full significance of this part of the decision. The court said flatly that regulation of farm production is not within the scope of the federal government and of its powers to accomplish this, nor can it purchase adherence to a control scheme by federal payments.

The decision destroyed not only the original AAA but also the amended act of the last session of congress.

The dissenting opinion held that the AAA was a legitimate employment of the power to tax for the general welfare. It attacked the theory that the preservation of our institutions is the exclusive concern of the Supreme court and suggested that under the majority decision the unemployment work relief act is unconstitutional.

President Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and other administration leaders had no immediate comment on the decision to make public, but the President called Attorney General Cummings and Mr. Wallace into conference. The administration and congress must do something to raise nearly half a billion dollars which the government has contracted to pay farmers and against which it now has no income, since the processing impost is outlawed. Disposition of about $200,000,000 accumulated under court orders that impounded processing tax collections must be determined.

AAA Administrator Chester Davis stopped all payments to farmers "until further notice," and the Treasury department ordered all collectors of internal revenue to desist from further efforts to collect processing taxes.

In his budget message President Roosevelt included revenue from processing taxes, so the Supreme court decision had the effect of throwing the 1937 budget still further out of balance by something like a billion dollars.

President's Message Is a Defiance of Opponents

SURROUNDED by klieg lights, microphones and movie cameras, President Roosevelt stood before the senate and house in night joint session and delivered what was nominally his annual message on the state of the nation. Actually it was not that at all, but a statement concerning the warfare and international disturbances on the other continents, followed by what the press generally considered an eloquent and militant political speech addressed to the people of the United States, who by the millions were listening in on their radios. Partisan opinion of his message is perhaps worthless. Of course his supporters praised it highly, and his opponents were equally emphatic in derogation.

President Roosevelt

Democrats and Republicans alike commended the President's opening paragraphs in which he boldly condemned the aggression of Italy and Japan, though without naming those nations; and there was little dissent from his assertion that the United States must maintain its neutrality while seeking to "discourage the use by belligerent nations of any and all American products calculated to facilitate the prosecution of a war in quantities over and above our normal exports to them in time of peace."

The remainder of the message, devoted to domestic affairs, was devoted chiefly to a belligerently worded defense of the New Deal measures of the administration, an attack on those who oppose them and a spirited passage in which Mr. Roosevelt defied and dared his critics to move for the repeal of those measures instead of "hiding their dissent in a cowardly cloak of generality." In only two paragraphs did the President dwell on "the state of the nation." In these he said that after nearly three years of the New Deal national income is increasing, agriculture and industry are "returning to full activity," and "we approach a balance of the national budget." That last statement was greeted with mocking laughter from the Republican side of the chamber, and though the Democrats cheered loudly, Mr. Roosevelt himself smiled at his words.

One passage in the message was interpreted by some as a threat to close the lower courts to suits attacking the constitutionality of federal laws. The President told congress that its enactments require "protection until final adjudication by the highest tribunal," and added that congress "has the right and can find the means to protect its own prerogatives."

Altogether, the spectacle in the house chamber was extraordinary and unparalled. All the senators and representatives were there, the latter being remarkably noisy. Eight members of the cabinet attended, and in the galleries sat Mrs. Roosevelt, the wives of cabinet members, diplomats and enough other privileged persons to fill the seats completely. Vice President Garner and Speaker Byrns jointly presided over the session.

The President's message was denounced by the American Liberty league as "the most dangerous speech that ever came from a President," and by Former President Herbert Hoover as a message of "'war on earth and ill will among men.'"

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, struck back at the President's critics in a statement declaring that if the President had recited the Ten Commandments he would have been accused of having ulterior motives. He repeated the challenge of the President to his critics to repeal New Deal legislation.

Secretary of Labor Perkins Praises Year's Doings

SECRETARY of Labor Frances Perkins found in the developments of the last year much of benefit for the American workingman. In her annual report she cited these five great advancements for labor:

Secretary Perkins

1. Unemployment compensation, accomplished through the social security act.
2. Old-age security, brought about also by the social security act.
3. Establishment of boards for settling industrial disputes locally.
4. Greater co-operation between the states and the Labor department, through regional conferences.
5. Development of the United States employment service.

Even the large number of strikes during 1935 could be viewed with some satisfaction by her, for she said they were "due in part to the natural expectation of labor to share in the early fruits of business improvement."

For the future Miss Perkins envisioned a minimum wage law, a short work week of perhaps 40 hours, compensation insurance, and strict regulation of machinery to prevent industrial accidents.

Budget Message Shows Billion Dollar Deficit

IN HIS message to congress submitting his approved budget for the 1937 fiscal year, beginning July 1 next, President Roosevelt followed the double system of accounting his administration has always employed—one set of books for regular expenditures and income and another set for emergency spending and appropriations. He asserted that receipts from all sources in the next fiscal year will aggregate an estimated $5,654,000,000. Expenditures for all regular government departments are estimated at $5,649,000,000. So the "regular" budget will be in balance, with a surplus of $5,000,000.

But the message went on to say, after explaining that the regular government books will show fiscal affairs in the black, as to income and outgo, they will show red to the extent of $1,103,000,000 in works-relief spending, less the $5,000,000 "surplus," this leaving the new appropriation for further works-relief open for at least two months.

That figure of $1,103,000,000 represents the President's estimate of unexpended balances on July 1 from the $4,880,000,000 and previous emergency appropriations. It does not take into account probable new appropriations for similar purposes yet to be determined.

Guffey Coal Act Again Is Declared Invalid

ONCE more the Guffey coal act has been declared unconstitutional, this time by Federal Judge John P. Barnes of Chicago. He granted to a local coal company a temporary injunction to restrain federal officials from collecting a portion of the taxes imposed under the law.

The injunction is to remain in force pending a ruling by the United States Supreme court on similar suits brought by the Carter Coal company in Washington, D. C., and by the Tway Coal company in Louisville, Ky.

With the Minnesota Lawmakers

Legislative interest in unemployment insurance wavered perceptibly as the proposal was subjected to a day of stiff debate in both houses and the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation in a formal resolution urged its rejection. Although house proponents clung steadfastly to a hope they can corral enough votes to pass it in the lower branch the plan was attacked from so many angles in the senate that its chief sponsor, Senator Gerald T. Mullin of Minneapolis, admitted a grave concern over its outcome.

Two co-authors, Senators Karl G. Neumeier of Stillwater and Val Imm of Mankato, took their names off the bill because of the exemption of employes from contributing to the fund. In the house, however, proponents beat off numerous efforts to alter its provisions, although it was forced into much acrimonious debate. The state farm bureau federation resolution was thrust before the legislators in the midst of the senate arguments. Representatives of 72 county bureaus approved it during a session at the Lowry hotel.

It pointed out rural opposition to unemployment insurance because it will require a 3 per cent tax on pay rolls, totaling $10,000,000 a year which will be paid by the consumers in an increased cost of the goods they buy, and the benefits will be limited to a small percentage of the people of the state and the burden borne by all the people. The resolution went on to assert that only nine states have adopted an unemployment insurance act, with eight states refusing. "There is no immediate necessity for the present enactment of this law," the resolution said, explaining that should it become necessary, it can be postponed to the 1937 session.

A six-week time extension for the deadline upon which all Minnesota motorists must pay their 1936 automobile license fees was proposed to the state house of representatives by Representative John A. Weeks, Minneapolis. The present deadline is February 15.

The house unanimously passed a bonus claims bill. The bill calls for payment of $42,500 to conscientious objectors during the World war. It now goes to the senate.

Salaries for legislators called into special session would be paid by the state under a bill approved and advanced to the calendar by the house. Introduced by Representative Albert Kueffner, St. Paul, the measure provides for payment of $10 a day for each working day the legislators are in session. Under existing laws, members cannot be paid for special sessions. The bill would be effective February 1, 1937.

The Minnesota house sub-committee working on the unemployment insurance bill expects to get the measure ready for presentation shortly. The group re-defined an employer as one who hires eight persons for 20 weeks of the year. Under the first senate draft of the measure an employer was one hiring four persons for 13 weeks of the yar. The re-defining of the term was a concession by the house group. In exchange, those who objected to the original definition conceded an amendment changing from January 1, 1936, to May 1, 1936, the date of which employees would start making contributions to the unemployment insurance fund.

The house advanced to the calendar, subject to amendment, the Walter Liggett reward bill, which already has been passed by the state senate. It provides for payment of rewards of $2,500 for each of three convictions, payments to be made at the discretion of the district judge upon conviction of the slayer or slayers of the weekly newspaper publisher. Mrs. Liggett is eligible to receive a reward under the house version of the measure, which, as passed by the senate, provided only for a lump sum of $7,500 to be paid the person aiding in the conviction of the slayer.

Legislative fears that old age pension costs will run into monumental figures from the start were allayed in assurances from statisticians that the outlay until July 1, 1937, will not exceed $6,300,000. This figure was presented to the senate tax committee in connection with consideration of the old age pension bill tossed to it recently just as the senate was to take its final roll call. The committee promptly referred it back to the main body with a recommendation for passage.

Income tax returns of taxpayers could be examined by county auditors, assessors, county commissioners and members of the legislature under a bill introduced in the house.

Pensions for needy adult blind in the state were approved by the house when it passed the measure under which eligibles can receive $30 monthly. Representative Henry Horwitz, St. Paul is author of the bill. It simply placed needy adult blind persons on a pension basis instead of on a relief basis as now. Under existing statutes only $15 a month is paid

3,000 MILES ROADS WERE IMPROVED IN MINNESOTA IN '35

Commissioner Elsberg Releases Summary of Year's Work

The Minnesota highway department improved the condition of more than 3,000 miles of trunk highways in 1935, according to a summary of the year's work announced by Commissioner N. W. Elsberg.

The improvements included: Grading, 228 miles; regrading, 42 miles; new graveling, 162 miles; re-graveling, 450 miles; new bituminous treatments, 318 miles; bituminous re-treatments, 1,440 miles; bituminous shoulder treatments, 85 miles; plant mix bituminous surfacing, 78 miles; concrete paving completed or under contract, 103 miles; subgrade treatment, 87 miles; gravel lifts, 10 miles; dust laying treatment, 130 miles.

The department also constructed more than 50 bridges and eliminated 39 railway grade crossings.

More than 60 roadside development projects increasing the beauty and safety of the highways were carried out. These were largely done as relief labor projects or with other special federal funds. Civilian Conservation corps camps co-operated with the department in a considerable amount of this work.

The projects included obliteration of construction scars, widening of shoulders, flattening and seeding of slopes, construction of roadside parking areas and co-operation with local communities in developing park sites along highways.

MARSHALL MAN IS ELECTED AS HEAD OF FARM BUREAU

Biggest State Convention Concluded in St. Paul Last Thursday

Frank W. White, of Marshall, was elected president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation at the 17th annual convention, which was concluded in St. Paul on Jan. 9. Mr. White succeeds A. J. Olson, of Renville, who has been president since 1928. Mr. White was born at Marshall in 1886, graduated from the School of Agriculture in 1906 and the College of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, in 1911. He helped to organize the Lyon County Farm Bureau and served as its secretary until his election to the state legislature in 1929. In his four terms in that body he has won a position of leadership in farm legislation. He is a member of the major agricultural committees of the house.

Interested in all farm co-operative activities, Mr. White is a director of Land O'Lakes Creameries, serving District 12. He is a member of the Lyon county Corn-Hog committee, and has taken an active part in local administration of the AAA program.

Mr. Olson, the retiring president, has been an officer of the Minnesota Farm Bureau since its inception, serving as vice president until 1928, when he became president. He was elected successively for the next annual terms. He is a member of several national agricultural committees and a regent of the University of Minnesota. Ole A. Flaat, Fisher and H. M. Sword, Deer River, were re-elected first and second vice presidents, respectively. J. W. Stevenson, Winnebago, and George Schwartau, Red Wing, were re-elected to the executive board.

The convention was the largest ever held by the Farm Bureau, 69 counties being officially represented. Attendance at the four-day session was estimated at 3,000. Hundreds of township units sent in delegates.

HOUSE APPROVES BONUS ACT; COMES TO UPPER HOUSE

Leaders Foresee Enactment of Bill to Pay in "Baby Bonds"

Clear sailing toward a quick and favorable senate vote on the new coalition bill to pay the soldiers' bonus in cashable "baby bonds" was predicted Tuesday by administration leaders.

Chairman Harrison of the senate finance committee expressed a belief the bill would receive committee approval after Secretary Morgenthau had been questioned in executive session as to the soundness of its financing provisions.

The eventual cost to the government is estimated at $2,491,000,000, but backers of the bill say the immediate expense would be only $1,000,000,000.

It may come up in the senate today. Both administration and veterans' leaders predicted the house would concur with the plan in view of that branch's passage last Friday of a bill which is similar except for the method of payment. The house bill had no specific payment provisions.

Major veterans' organizations have swung into line behind the bill. The attitude of President Roosevelt was not expressed, but senate leaders, who took part in negotiations that led to agreement on the bill, were known to have been animated by the hope they might win Mr. Roosevelt's approval.

Annual Premium List Given Out by Manager John Saugstad

An attractive Winter Shows premium list dressed in the Winter Shows colors, green and yellow, has just been forwarded to prospective exhibitors by John Saugstad, business manager. In addition to general information, rules and regulations, the 56 page publication contains photographs of the Red River Valley Livestock association buildings in which the Winter Shows exhibits will be housed, group photographs of the Board of Managers and sponsoring organizations, together with department officials.

Mr. Saugstad states that all industrial space has been engaged, while department superintendents anticipate increased entries in all departments. O. M. Kiser reports more entries in the livestock department on January 10 than ever before so far in advance of the show. It has been necessary to limit entries in the livestock sale which will be held during the week as a total of 50 head had been consigned by the first of the year. Greater interest is likewise evident in the crops and poultry departments according to supervisers R. S. Dunham, T. M. McCall, and Harold Thomforde.

Copies of the premium list may be obtained by writing John Saugstad, Crookston, or the Northwest School. Officials are working on the final printed program which will be available well in advance of Winter Shows Week, February 3 to 7.

Over forty speakers and judges have been engaged to address the various meetings and make the awards. Outstanding among the speakers will be M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.; Upton Close, New York City, who will discuss the Japanese situation; Dean W. C. Coffey, Dr. E. C. Stakman, Dr. H. K. Hayes, and Professor Henry Schmitz, chief of the forestry department, and W. H. Peters, all from University Farm; Miss Gratia Countryman, Minneapolis city librarian, and others.

Minnesota Virtually Has Won 'Hopper Fight, Says Campaign Leader

Minnesota virtually has conquered the grasshopper plague, according to a report received by the state executive council from A. G. Ruggles, state entomologist. There is no danger of serious harm from grasshoppers in any counties next year excepting Kittson and St. Louis, the report emphasized.

The warfare against the grasshopper scourge started in 1931 when the executive council provided a war chest of which $465,011 has been used in five years. The administrative expense has been only 2.5 percent, the report stated.

Minnesota farmers have benefited from a saving from crop damages of $28,000,000 during the five years, the report emphasized and only 30,000 of an original 5,000,000 acres in 1932 now need attention. During the past year 391 tons of bait were used.

See Total Attendance of 400 at N. W. School

A new attendance record was established at the Northwest School last week when a large group of new students brought the total for the year to 389 as compared with the previous record of 358 during the year 1929-30. As additional students are expected to report this week, registrar J. W. Mlinar anticipates a total of over 400 for the year. The marked increase in attendance has overtaxed the available dormitory and classroom accommodations. Winter term activities include the many contests and meetings in which Northwest School students will take part during Winter Shows Week February 3 to 7; School of Agriculture triangular debate contests; basketball tournament, and weekly assemblies and special entertainments. The winter term will close the last week in March.

FINDS $20 IN BILLS RETURNS TO OWNER

Houston.—Anyone with experience will tell you that newspaper advertising pays, but even this valuable medium usually fails when the advertiser requests the return of unidentifiable currency that has been lost on the street. More credit to John E. Benson, of Houston, who like the rest of us, reads the advertisements, but is much more honest than most of us. Finding two $10 bills on the street, Mr. Benson hastened home to pick up the village paper and run thru the classified columns to find the owner. Sure enough, an optimistic citizen had inserted a want ad in the paper and Mr. Benson hastened to call on the party and return the currency, refusing to accept any reward, altho one had been offered.

Order on Hearing on Petition for License to Sell, Mortgage or Lease Land

State of Minnesota,
County of Pennington,
In Probate Court

In the Matter of the Estate of Grace Bruggeman, Decedent.

The petition of Henry L. Bruggeman as representative of the above named decedent, having been filed in this court, representing, among other things, that for reasons stated in said petition, it is necessary and for the best interests of the estate of said Grace Bruggeman and of all persons interested therein, to sell certain lands of said Grace Bruggeman in said petition described, and praying that license be to him granted to sell the said land:

It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard by this court, at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the City of Thief River Falls, County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, on the 31st day of January, 1936, at 10 o'clock A. M., and that the citation of this court issue to all persons interested in said hearing and said matter, and that such citation be served by the publication thereof in the St. Hilaire Spectator according to law.

Dated January 3, 1936.

CREAMERY MEETING SET FOR FEBRUARY 3

Annual meeting and election of officers of the St. Hilaire Co-op. Creamery Association will be held at the local hall Monday afternoon, Feb. 3. If favorable weather prevails at the time of the meeting, a larger attendance than usual is expected. The board of directors of the creamery met Monday afternoon to transact routine business for the month, and to prepare reports for the annual meeting next month. Checks to patrons for cream delivered during December are being issued and paid this week.

U. S. SENATE PASSES SOLDIER BONUS BILL

The United States Senate this week passed a bonus bill which provides for payment of adjusted compensation certificates with "baby bonds" which will be cashable after June 15. The measure passed the Senate by a vote of 76 to 16. Enactment of the measure into law is practically assured even if President Roosevelt should veto it as both houses of Congress have sufficient favorable votes to pass it over a veto. Payments to veterans will be made in bonds of $50 denominations bearing interest at 3 per cent. Those who do not care to cash their bonds, may retain them and draw interest until 1945.

RETURN FROM CALIFORNIA

Fire caused by a defective chimney, destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wyland on Tuesday afternoon. They managed to save most of their household effects. They are staying at the Henry Carpenter home for the present until other arrangements can be made.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Skatrud and daughters motored down Sunday from Argyle and spent the day visiting at the V. G. Brink home and with other friends.

BIG STORM HITS EAST

With temperatures at subzero levels, a combined snow, hail, sleet and rain storm swept down thru the entire length of the New England states last Sunday causing much suffering and more than a million dollars in property loss. The storm is said to be the most severe that has swept the Atlantic seaboard for many years. Snow to a depth of seven inches fell as far south as in Georgia, and freezing temperatures damaged a vast amount of fruit and shrubs in Florida.

ATTEND CROOKSTON DEMOCRAT DINNER

Harold Holmes, M. H. Jackson, M. Highland, Marvin Olness, Vernon Lindquist, Frank Sweet, Thos. Larson, Joe Patton, Lester Olson and A. Bilden as representatives of the St. Hilaire Democratic Club, attended a district Jackson Day dinner given Tuesday night at Crookston. J. R. Landy, Collector of Internal Revenue at St. Paul, as well as prominent Democrats from Baudette, Foston and other points were the principal speakers on the program. About two hundred persons from all parts of northwestern Minnesota attended the meeting.

DECORATING CAFE

A travelling artist has been engaged the past ten days at decorating interior of Walter Olson's cafe. Some very fine scenes are being painted on all walls of the place giving the place a splendid appearance. The artist is the same man that decorated the new Palm Garden Cafe at Thief River. Samples of his work may also be found at Red Lake Falls, Goodridge and other towns in this section.

TOO FAST FOR BUNNY CATCHES RABBIT'S TAIL

Benson.—The jackrabbit has always been emblematic of speed and the cottontail is not exactly slow, but one Bensonite showed a burst of speed New Year's Day that was too much for even a rabbit. Wm. Gustafson started the New Year right by taking his trusty gun on a stroll through the fields to pot a few rabbits. One smart cottontail hid in the brush, but for the eagle-eyed William the tip of the rabbit's tail sticking up out of the brush was tell-tale evidence. He made one headlong dive for the tail and came up with the rabbit. And now the cottontail has joined Mr. Gustafson's colony of tame rabbits and is no longer free to roam the woods or hide in the brush.

P. T. A. MET FRIDAY

Regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association was held last Friday evening at the school building. A little playlet entitled "Safety" was put on by the grade children, and was very well received. Following this feature, Rev. Cooke of Thief River Falls gave an interesting talk on causes for automobile accidents, and what might be done to avoid them. Some over a hundred people attended the program and partook of lunch which was served following the program.

ADULT MEETING MONDAY EVENING

Next meeting of the Adult Education class will be held at 8:00 Monday evening at the school. A brief history of adult education will be given at this meeting. Phases of education to be taken up and discussed will be Parlimentary Law practices and uses; Public speaking, Economics, Current World Events. If enough can be interested, starting of a shorthand class is a possibility. Anyone 15 years of age and over may attend these classes.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Regular meeting of the village council of St. Hilaire held at 8:00 P. M., Jan. 7th, 1936, at the council room. Meeting called to order by the president. All members present.

The following committees were appointed by the president:

Finance—W. A. Corbet and S. M. Olness.

MERCURY HITS 40 BELOW WEDNESDAY

The coldest day officially recorded in this section of Minnesota for over twenty years was Wednesday morning when the mercury went down to 40 degrees below zero. Some local thermometers showed even lower than 40 degrees, but the official reading at Grand Forks, where temperatures are similar to those here, was a little less than 40 below. A brisk northwest wind blowing yesterday morning when lowest temperature was noted, made it almost impossible for people to be out any length of time. As almost everyone puts in a good supply of fuel for just such an emergency, no suffering from cold has been reported in this locality.

McNULTY SPEAKS HERE

J. B. McNulty, extension economist of University Farm, addressed a gathering of farmers at the local hall Tuesday afternoon. Due to extremely cold and unfavorable weather, only a few farmers were able to be present to hear Mr. McNulty who gave a very interesting and instructive talk. A representative of the farm credit administration was present and explained the various kinds of credit available to farmers from the different federal loaning agencies. It is to be regretted weather conditions prevented so many from attending the meeting as the subjects discussed were of much importance to everyone engaged in farming.

RETURNS TO OREGON

After spending about a month here at the homes of her father, brother and sister, Wm. Novak, Rawlins Novak and Mrs. H. L. Holmes, Mrs. Hazel Swadburgh left Friday enroute to her home at Portland, Oregon. This was Mrs. Swadburgh's first visit home in several years.

Head Hunting Becoming Thing of the Past in the Philippines

Still Persists in the Remote Areas, but Loses Its Appeal Elsewhere.

The biggest and busiest native market in all the Philippines is situated in Baguio. Sunday marks the high point of any week's trading. All day Friday and Saturday the mountain trails for miles around are dotted with natives coming to market, bringing their products for sale and having in mind the purchase of things they need.

Baguio is the most beautiful and most healthful resort in the Far East, with wild mountain scenery, and cool forests of stately pines spreading out in every direction. It is the "summer capital" of the Philippines; Americans predominate the population.

Sunday crowds at the market are estimated to number from four thousand to seven thousand. Some come in carts drawn by caraboa or bullocks; some by bus; a few in automobiles so old and broken that one wonders if they will hold together for the return trip; others on freight trucks, but the majority walks.

Let the Women Do the Work.

The women are the burden carriers and they bring to market the products of garden, field, and jungle in large baskets carried on their backs and supported by a wide feather head strap resting across their foreheads. Another type of basket is carried on top of the head.

In addition to the foodstuffs displayed in the market there are many examples of native handcraft—home woven fabrics, coarser, and not beautifully embroidered as is the pina cloth of the South; silver jewelry, wood carvings, including book ends for the tourist trade, curios, brass and metal work, and rattan and wicker baskets of many sizes, shapes, and styles.

The Dog Market.

A short distance into a ravine leading to the market is the stockyards of the Philippines, where pigs and hogs to the number of a hundred are tethered to stakes while awaiting buyers. Beyond the pig market is the spot where horse trading takes place. And beyond this, until recently when the white residents of Baguio protested against its continuance, was found the dog market.

Roast dog is a prized delicacy among Igorrotes. The protest was not based upon ar fastidious objection to dog eating, but the Igorrotes stuffed the poor animals with rice while alive and then beat them to death with clubs, thus assuring tender meat. So the dog market was moved. It is now in the hills back of the principal hotel, and at dawn the howls of the tortured and suffering canines render the morning hideous.

Good roads have accomplished much toward abolishing the former popular pastime of head hunting. In the old days villages of different tribes, though only a few miles distant from each other, regarded each other as enemies. It was the old story of "hating the stranger." Good roads brought them together, they got acquainted, and became less hostile, if not friendly.

Head Hunting Not Popular.

Head hunting still persists in the remote areas of Luzon, but is almost obsolete in the mountain province. The custom originated in the desire of the surviving members of a family to provide companions for a dead chief's spirit on the mysterious journey from earth to the Igorrote heaven. The quickest way to provide good company for the departing one was to remove the heads of a few members of an adjoining tribe. This done, reprisals were in order. Thus head hunting became an honored institution.

The taking of a head or heads was the occasion of a great feast in celebration of the event, and all the men, women, and children participating in the feast were entitled to the decoration of tattooing as a distinguishing mark. It is worthy of note that three in every five adult natives at the Baguio market bear the tattooed designs on the arms, indicating participation in a head hunting feast.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted

BY WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—The dictionary says the word confusion means mixed indiscriminately; disordered, deranged; perplexed; bewildered, or disconcerted.

Confusion Is the Word

There probably is no better word to describe the situation in Washington over the past three weeks than the word confusion. If one keeps an eye half open, one cannot help seeing all of the things mentioned in the dictionary definition of the word. There might be an addition. If I were to expand the definition and make it just a little more applicable to the circumstances in the national Capital, I would add "running around in circles."

The reconvening of congress always is a signal for commotion, and confusion and taut nerves. The opening sessions, nevertheless, usually have been mild for a few days. The climax was reached by a gradual building up of excitement to the moment of the annual message of the President on the state of the Union. This time, however, the climax came quickly and instead of a subsidence, as we usually have seen, the crest of the wave of excitement continued. If this is a barometric prediction of what we may see in the forthcoming political campaign, there will be, indeed, a battle.

That the picture of Washington confusion may be pieced together, let us review in briefest form some of the things that happened:

Congress reconvenes at noon on a Friday—orders go from the White House to the Capitol that the President desires to deliver his annual speech on the state of the Union immediately—arrangements are made promptly for a night session (the second of its kind in history)—President Roosevelt delivers a masterful discourse on international affairs, virtually naming names of autocratic rulers throughout the world and demanding that they cease arbitrary programs leading to war, and follows that with a plain political speech regarding domestic affairs, challenging New Deal opponents to undo what the New Deal administration had done—Republican National Chairman Fletcher bitingly attacks the political phases of the Roosevelt speech on the state of the Union and demands that radio broadcasting companies give New Deal opponents the same time and the same stations for broadcasting a political answer—broadcasting company replies show a desire to be fair with radio time and toss back to Mr. Fletcher the difficult task of selecting individuals to answer Mr. Roosevelt.

Rail at Supreme Court

The Supreme court in a momentous decision invalidates the Agricultural Adjustment act, key measure of New Deal reform—Mr. Roosevelt declines comment on this decision but New Deal spokesmen otherwise settle down around the ears of the nine justices with vitriolic comment—New Deal critics of the court and the institution move swiftly to revise the Constitution to fit New Deal theories and to curb the power of the judiciary, preventing it from interfering in their determination to remake America—Agriculture Secretary Wallace and Agricultural Administrator Davis call farm leaders to consider ways and means for reviving or superseding the "gentle rain of checks" that was AAA—the annual budget of estimates for expenditures from July 1, 1936, to June 30, 1937, carrying $6,752,606,000, is sent to congress—relief appropriations are omitted; result, no one can tell yet how large the next year's expenditures will be—house and senate agriculture leaders scurry hither and yon, hold conferences, discuss political repercussions from the invalidation of AAA and get nowhere very rapidly.

At $50 Per Plate

Wheelhorses of the Democratic party rush through plans for and hold the annual Jackson day dinner on the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans. Word leaks out that Postmaster General Farley, who is also chairman of the Democratic National committee and chairman of the New York State Democratic committee, has fixed a price of fifty dollars per plate to those joining in the No. 1 Jackson day dinner at which the President spoke—the American Liberty league charges Mr. Farley with violating the corrupt practices act which says in effect that no government official may solicit or cause to be solicited funds from government jobholders—the answer of the Democratic National committee is that Mr. Farley has no part in ticket sales—Liberty league officials cite the committee's own press statement quoting Mr. Farley's conversation with 48 state presidents of Young Democrat clubs that they should charge enough per plate to help defray the deficit of the Democratic National committee besides the cost of their dinners in the various sections of the country—Democratic National committee meets and selects Philadelphia as the site of the Democratic National convention, fixing June 23 as the date after Philadelphia, with a certified check of $200,000, outbids all others to be host—Republican Chairman Fletcher issues denial that the Republican National committee had anything to do with the use of stamp stickers ridiculing the New Deal.

Lobbyists for the ex-service men reach an agreement on the type of legislation for immediate cash payment of the bonus and the legislation passes the house—Senator Nye and his publicity seeking Senate Munitions Investigating committee take the partners of the house of Morgan over the grill in an attempt to show that this great financial institution led the United States into the World war—Morgan's answer links officials of President Wilson's administration with the development of sentiment favorable to American participation on the side of the Allies—Senator Nye gains much publicity for himself and the neutrality bill which he sponsors in the senate—many new representatives of business arrive in Washington, open offices, prepare to fight against further New Deal encroachment upon private business, and everyone runs around in circles.

Looks Like Rough Battle

At the outset of this discussion, I suggested that if events of the last several weeks form a proper criterion, the political campaign that is now under way is going to be rough. I base that prediction upon the view taken of it by Postmaster General Farley, the king-pin Democratic politician and the reactions that have come editorially and in news columns to the President's Jackson day dinner speech and the political phases of his message on the state of the Union. Mr. Farley made no bones about the prospect. He foresees all kinds of mud slinging, misrepresentation and personal attacks.

Aside from his statesmanlike discussion of international problems, Mr. Roosevelt's message to congress descended to the point where he was definitely cataloging all opposition to the New Deal as "greedy and selfish" men and women. Every one of them, in the President's opinion, has a personal ax of avarice to grind. He intends, apparently, to make that his theme song.

Whether his conclusions are right or wrong is not in question here. The point is that since Mr. Roosevelt has opened the fire in that manner, he can naturally expect the same type of fire to be returned. In the language of the twelve-year-old ruffian: "He asked for it." There was another striking thing about the Roosevelt speeches to congress and to the Jackson day diners. For the first time since he has occupied the White House, he gave every evidence of being nettled and nervous. He spoke in a voice that appeared to be tired; there was lacking that buoyancy, that smile, when he spoke that used to characterize his expressions. You will recall undoubtedly that for a long time in the early part of his administration he was wholly unmindful of his enemies, ignored them completely, and plowed straight ahead with a determination that won him many friends. Lately, however, there has been unmistakable evidence of a martyr complex in his manner.

Laying His Lines

Referring again to the two speeches, I have heard any number of observers comment, first, on his almost tearful appeal at the conclusion of his speech to congress, and secondly, to his thinly veiled comparison between himself and President Jackson when he spoke to the Jackson day diners.

I am not making any predictions as to where this trend will lead. It is important to note, however, that it is an old political trick to impugn the motives of the opposition. Such was the mood into which former President Herbert Hoover fell when in 1931 it became apparent his political life was on the skids and slipping fast. When he was "on his way out" Mr. Hoover became so picayunish that even his own associates found it difficult to do the things he wanted done in the way he desired. This condition continued to develop until he began to complain personally about the "hair shirts" that he had to wear. The "hair shirts" incident probably was the best tip-off to the sinking feeling that had begun to permeate Mr. Hoover's outlook at that time. The rest is history.

As to the course which Mr. Roosevelt is following in impugning the motives of his opposition, one can hardly take objection because it has been done so often and for the further reason that neither Mr. Roosevelt nor Mr. Farley is a political novice. I believe that Washington observers generally give each of these men credit for being thoroughly versed in politics and since Mr. Roosevelt is "dimly conscious that a campaign is under way and an election is scheduled," he naturally is laying his lines. They will be pulled from time to time with a resultant display for public view intended to convince the person of small means or no means at all that he is their savior; that he intends and seeks at all times to protect them from those selfish and greedy groups who seek to grind down the population for the sake of profit.

With each house of the Minnesota legislature standing pat on its own particular version of the old age pension plan, a thorn was projected into the previously smooth progress of the special session. To a conference committee, composed of five members from each body, the bill was handed for redrafting and agreement.

Comprising the conference committee were: Senators H. C. Stiening of Moorhead, K. G. Neumeier of Stillwater, A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota, O. J. Finstad of Windom, and B. G. Novak of St. Paul; and Representatives Andrew Finstuen of Kenyon, R. G. Johnson of Forest Lake, L. M. Hall of St. Cloud, George MacKinnon of Minneapolis, and Warren E. Hastings of Two Harbors.

Necessity for such action arose when the senate repassed its own bill after the house had sent over its version of the measure. When the house received the senate bill again, it promptly voted rejection, and called for a conference committee.

Principal differences to be settled concern the senate proposal to have counties pay one-fourth of the total pensions within their boundaries while the house proposed one-eighth, the degree of responsibility to which children of pensioners shall be held, and the amount of property that pensioners may own. Also is the date for putting the pensions into effect.

Turning its attention to other major problems, the house passed the unemployment insurance fund bill, which the senate had previously killed. The upper body is prevented by parliamentary law from considering the subject again at this session, but it was indicated that a resolution would be adopted calling for an interim study for preparation of a new insurance bill for the 1937 session.

An appropriation of $1,800,000 for the financing of the pension plan was also voted by the house. The senate passed the house measure permitting owners of tax delinquent property to pay off in installments, but amended it to exclude 1934 levies. At the same time, a joint committee prepared a special bill designed to furnish relief authorities with approximately $14,000,000 for distribution to the needy up to July 1, 1937.

In the face of opposition from Hennepin county and Minneapolis school officials, legislative tax reformists hoped to get favorable action in the senate tax committee consideration of the measure to permit owners of tax delinquent property to pay off their indebtedness in installments. The bill, already passed by the house, is designed to bring $35,000,000 in delinquent taxes into the state treasury. Hennepin county officials objected to the bill on the grounds that it would supersede the 1933 law permitting tax delinquents of 1926 and since to pay off on a 50 per cent basis.

Among other objections to the bill was that expressed by Lynn Thompson, member of the Minneapolis school board, who criticized the provision that all returns from the new law be used to pay off existing indebtedness. Such a plan, he said, would prevent the educational system from obtaining $600,000 a year which it now receives from payment of back taxes, which now are divided among the various governmental departments.

Measures designed to finance the pension bill, in the meantime, found their way into the house chambers. Rep. Warren Hastings, Two Harbors, suggested authorizing the state highway department to issue $3,500,000 in bonds, of which amount, $1,800,000 is to be paid to Minnesota's general revenue fund. This measure received immediate committee approval.

The sum is owed the revenue fund by the highway department for the cost of issuing automobile licenses in former years. Instead of permitting the department to repay the money over a period of six years, the legislature decided to obtain it at once, making another direct appropriation for the pension fund.

The committee placed its stamp of approval, also, on an appropriation of $35,000 for repairs and remodeling of the house chambers. Another bill recommended provides for appointment of an interim commission of three house members and two senators to study and recodify the state's criminal code. A $4,000 appropriation is necessary to carry on the recodifying work.

A $5,000 fund to finance the attorney general's prosecution in the murder case of Walter Liggett, slain Minneapolis publisher, was given final legislative approval by the house after it had received a bill providing for a 10 man commission to investigate crime and lawlessness in the Mill City. The bill previously had been put into law by the house, but returned from the senate chambers with an amendment stating that the $5,000 should be taken from the attorney general's contingent fund for next year.

Hezikiah Brown, colored, lost a foreclosure action to a Topeka bank. The judgment gave the bank title to 19 of the 20 acres in Hezikiah's plat adjoining Shunganunga creek. Kansas law permits a defendant to retain one acre of his own choosing as his homestead, the only string being it must all be in one piece.

Hezikiah chose a 15-foot strip starting at the creek bank and running around the outer edge of the property back to the creek. To reach their land, the bankers must row a boat across or wade up the Shunganunga.

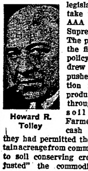
Farm Leaders Insist on Crop Control Legislation

FARM leaders summoned to Washington to help in devising a new farm program decided to remain there and "picket" the halls of congress until legislation is passed to take the place of the AAA destroyed by the Supreme court ruling. The proposal that was the first plank in the policy platform they drew up and that is pushed by administration men centers on production control through subsidized soil conservation. Farmers would get cash grants, provided they had permitted the transfer of certain acreage from commercial production to soil conserving crops, or had "adjusted" the commodities on certain land.



Howard R. Tolley

Administration leaders were considering a plan to raise the half million dollars a year necessary for this scheme by enacting most of the old processing taxes as excise levies. The farm leaders favored this, and also recommended:

"Retention and strengthening of all positions of the AAA act not declared unconstitutional.

Foremost among the agricultural experts who took part in the conferences was Howard R. Tolley, director of the Giannini foundation in California. He has been described by administration officials as the leading agricultural economist in the United States, and was hurriedly called from the West coast to Washington.

Lawyers acting for a Philadelphia real estate dealer filed a suit in the Federal District court there to restrain government executives from interfering with the operation of the AAA until its constitutional status has been determined by referendum.

Process Tax Refund Ordered by Supreme Court

PROCESSING taxes amounting to $200,000,000, impounded by the courts, must be refunded to the tax payers, according to a unanimous ruling of the Supreme court of the United States. The decision did not go into the question of whether processors must prove they had absorbed the tax before they could recover, though this was one of the main points at issue. Presumably this will first be passed upon by a district court. The case was brought by Louisiana rice millers.

The nine justices all agreed that the review of the Bankhead cotton act case, which had been allowed on a 6 to 3 vote, had been "improvidently granted" and so they refused to pass on the validity of the act at this time. Another case involving this law, filed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, a Roosevelt administration foe, will give the court another opportunity to rule on it.

The expected ruling on the validity of the Tennessee Valley Authority act was not forthcoming.

Protects WPA Workers From "Chiseling" Employers

HARRY L. HOPKINS, WPA administrator, has sent to state administrators a set of regulations intended to protect WPA workers from "Chiseling" employers and to keep up wage standards. In his letter to the state officials Mr. Hopkins said:

Harry L. Hopkins

"I want to make perfectly clear the policy of the works progress administration relative to private employment or employment on contract jobs under the direction of other federal departments which may be offered the WPA workers.

"It is expected that WPA workers will accept available jobs in private employment, whether of a permanent or temporary nature, provided:

"(1) That the temporary or permanent work shall be a full-time job.

"(2) That such work shall be at a standard or going rate of wages.

"(3) That such work shall not be in conflict with established union relationships.

"(4) That workers shall be offered an opportunity to return to the WPA upon completion of temporary jobs."

Raskob Is Angered by Government Tax Suits

JOHN J. RASKOB is angry, and so probably is Pierre S. duPont, for the government has filed with the board of tax appeals a brief charging that these two gentlemen agreed to create fictitious losses through security sales to each other in 1929 and thus improperly reduced their net taxable incomes. "Tyranny and cheap politics" was the way Raskob characterized the action, and he intimated that the brief was timed to appear before the American Liberty league dinner January 25 at which Alfred E. Smith will be chief speaker. Both Raskob, a conservative Democrat, and duPont are liberal backers of the Liberty league, which has been saying many severe things about the New Deal.

In its latest output the Liberty league attacks President Roosevelt's interpretations of the fiscal situation as "misleading and deceitful," and urges that congress investigate "the entire governmental structure."

Puerto Rican Sugar Estates Will Be Broken Up

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ICKES, making a brief visit to our Caribbean possessions, told representatives of the sugar interests in Puerto Rico that the great sugar estates of that island would be broken up, because they are in violation of a law forbidding the corporate ownership of more than 500 acres of land. He explained the lands will be homesteaded to get thousands of landless persons back to the soil. It is not known whether Mr. Ickes did anything about the general dissatisfaction in Puerto Rico with the policies of certain of the government's representatives there.

Democratic Convention Goes to Philadelphia

AUCTIONED off to the highest bidder, the Democratic national convention of 1936 was sold to Philadelphia by the party's national committee. The price was $200,000, plus some prizes and concessions. Chicago and San Francisco also bid for the convention. The former offered a certified check for $150,000. The California city made the same bid and later raised it to $202,500.

During a brief recess Chairman Farley telephoned, presumably to the White House, and Vice President Garner moved among the members of the committee urging the selection of Philadelphia. Therefore the City of Brotherly Love won the prize. The opening of the convention was set for June 23.

Hauptmann Still Fights Against Execution

BRUNO HAUPTMANN, due to die in the electric chair January 17 for the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby, continued, through his legal counsel, his fight to save his life. If the attitude of Governor Hoffman of New Jersey was rightly reported, there was a possibility that the condemned man would at least obtain a reprieve; but the state court of pardons, of which the governor is a member, had unanimously refused to commute the sentence to one of life imprisonment after examining the alleged new evidence in Bruno's favor. Defense counsel were said to be preparing to try to persuade the United States Supreme court to take some action in the case.

Bruno Hauptmann

When Hauptmann was told by C. Lloyd Fisher, one of his lawyers, that the court of pardons had rejected his plea he displayed no emotion.

"Your only chance now is to directly involve some one else in the kidnaping," Fisher told Hauptmann.

"I can't change my story," Hauptmann replied, according to the prison warden. "I have told the truth all along. There's nothing more to tell than I have told. I haven't the least idea where Fisch got that money from."

Hauptmann referred to Isador Fisch, German furrier, who died in Bavaria about a year after the kidnaping. The prisoner has steadfastly insisted that the ransom money found in his possession when he was arrested had been left with him by Fisch.

Bonus Measure Is Pushed Through the House

NO TIME was lost in putting through the house the bonus measure that had been agreed upon by veterans' organizations and approved by the ways and means committee. It carries the name of the Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill and is a compromise that authorizes immediate payment of the bonus but offers no definite plan for raising the money. It would provide 3 per cent interest until 1945 for veterans refraining from cashing their adjusted service certificates at once, and cancel all interest still due on loans on the certificates.

In the senate Pat Harrison introduced a compromise bonus bill providing for payment in $50 bonds that may be cashed upon demand.

Miguel Gomez Elected President of Cuba

IN AN astonishingly tranquil election, Miguel Mariano Gomez, coalition candidate, was chosen president of Cuba, defeating Gen. Mario G. Menocal, former president, by a rather slender margin. Gomez, who is forty-five years old, was formerly mayor of Havana. He was supported by the army. The lack of disorder at the polls was due in part to the fact that the women of the island republic for the first time took part in an election.

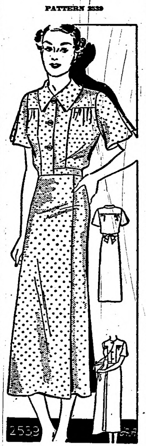
PATTERN 2539



Does household routine demand that you be the first downstairs in the morning? Then here's a frock that makes it possible. A jiffy wrap-around, with smart shirtwaist air, is grand for general utility wear from early morning until you've time to change. Easy to make, it slips on as smoothly as a coat, opens out flat for ironing, and no petticoat is necessary with it due to the generous over-lap in front. Unequaled for comfort and slenderizing effect.

Pattern 2539 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 16 takes 3⅝ yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Killing of White Rhino Highly Arouses Natives

Illegal killing of a white rhinoceros, one of the rarest species of animals in the world, in Mahlabatini has aroused all that part of South Africa and an extensive hunt for the culprits started as soon as officials were informed.

The killing, for which natives are believed to be responsible, has caused considerable official interest, because of the recent killing of numbers of game, including hippopotami. It is believed that the rhino, which was one of a comparatively small herd of less than 200, was shot at close range, and that the poachers were disturbed at their work. As soon as the killing was known steps were taken to preserve the carcass which is valuable.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Great Fires of History; Millions Become Smoke

The greatest fires in the world's history are: Tokyo, 1923 (following the earthquake)—damage $1,000,000,000. San Francisco, 1906—damage $250,000,000. Paris, 1871—damage $160,000,000. Moscow (fired during Napoleon's campaign, 1812)—damage $150,000,000.

The Great Fire of London caused damage estimated at $45,000,000. Each year, the damage caused by fires in Britain now exceeds that amount.

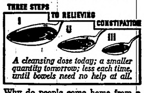
Success Your Legitimate Ambition; Belief Will Win

Be positive instead of negative, my friend. Claim your birthright—success is your legitimate ambition. Think only of success. Believe success is coming to you.

Work for success. And you will be surprised how quickly conditions will change for you. It is the inexorable law. You can if you think you can!

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:



A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

25 Years Ago

Miss Huldah Gigstad was taking a commercial course at the new business college at Thief River Falls.

John Dahl bought the old Patterson residence, located south of the former American Hotel lots, and was moving it to his farm.

Otto Sonsthagen, who had travelled thru here for twenty five years for Koehler & Heinrichs of St. Paul, died that week at Fergus Falls.

Mike Fricker received word that his father-in-law, John Meier, had died at his home near Star City, Sask., Can. Mr. Meier was at one time a prominent farmer in Sanders township of this county.

The state supreme court handed down a decision in favor of Thief River Falls in connection with the county division election matter. It was expected this would end the controversy between the two counties, Red Lake and Pennington.

TRACKS AND KILLS 25 IB. LYNX CAT

Battle Lake—Otto Pearson shot and killed an animal which seems to be a cross between a lynx and a bob cat. Pearson and Hugh Miles were fishing on Lake Clitherall and saw the tracks of an animal which were strange to them. After leaving the lake, Pearson secured his gun and followed the tracks, which led him into the Corliss woods near Clitherall lake. He finally located the animal and when he came close to it, shot it in the hind leg. The animal turned and started toward him, and he shot it in the chest and killed it. It has not been definitely decided whether it is a bob-cat or lynx, as it appears much like both, or a cross between the two. The animal was quite large, weighing 25 pounds and measuring six feet in length, being dark grey in color with short pointed ears and large paws.

RED LAKE INDIAN AFFAIRS SUBJECT OF BEMIDJI MEET

Substitution of a drive to reduce the rent on the Red Lake fisheries property in place of the campaign by the Red Lake Indian Reservation to acquire control of the entire shore of the lake appeared likely after a meeting in Bemidji Thursday in which the Red Lake controversy was aired fully says the Bemidji Sentinel.

The discussion was held at a meeting of the board of Beltrami county commissioners attended by Fred Dennis of Detroit Lakes, attorney for the Red Lake band of Chippewas, Peter Graves, leader of the band, representatives of the Bemidji Civic and Commerce Association, local sportsmen and others.

During the discussion it developed that one of the major grievances of the Red Lake Indians is the high rent charged them for the state-owned fisheries property in which the Red Lake fishery is operated. When the commissioners and others present offered to lend every possible assistance in an effort to secure for the Indians a low rent and long term lease to the property the Indian representatives appeared agreeable to the suggestion that they drop their efforts to secure a mile wide strip of land around the north shore of Red Lake to be added to the present reservation area.

The opposition of the Bemidji association, the commissioners and local sportsmen to the acquisition of that strip of land by the Indians was reiterated and was not measurably changed by the discussions. The unfairness of the treatment accorded the Indians by the conservation department was recognized by all those present, however, and promises were given that every effort would be made to secure a reduction in the rent of the fisheries property.

187 PLANES, 18 GLIDERS LISTED FOR MINNESOTA

Minnesota had a total of 187 air planes and 18 gliders as of January 1, reports of the department of commerce disclosed this week. Of the airplanes, 134 were licensed and 53 unlicensed. The state also had 232 pilots, divided as follows: 155 transport, 28 limited commercial, 38 private and 11 amateur.

COUNTY GROUP TO SPUR ATTENDANCE AT WINTER SHOWS

Unusual Interest Is Shown in Event at Crookston February 3-7

Attendance committees which have been appointed in thirteen Northwestern Minnesota counties report unusual interest in the educational program which has been arranged for the Northwest School Farmers' Week and Red River Valley Winter Shows to be held February 3 to 7.

Members of the attendance committee from Pennington county include the following. Additional information may be secured thru these committee members. Owen Weckwerth, Hazel; J. W. McCrum, Thief River Falls; P. H. Wright, Kratka; Mons Engelstad, Thief River Falls.

Farmers are keenly interested in the addresses to be given by M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Upton Close, New York City, world traveler and authority on the Japanese situation; Dr. E. C. Stakman and Dr. H. K. Hayes, co-discoverers of Thatcher wheat; Dean W. C. Coffey; Professor Henry Schmitz, chief of the Forestry division, University Farm; Director F. W. Peck; Professor W. H. Peters; and S. H. Rutford, Director, Minnesota Rural Rehabilitation division.

Leading speakers on the women's programs include Miss Gratia A. Countryman, Minneapolis city librarian; Miss Esther Thompson, chief of home economics, University of Manitoba, Canada; Mrs. J. J. Stewart, Crookston; Dean W. C. Coffey; Professor Henry Schmitz and Dr. E. C. Stakman. One day is being devoted to one-act plays with women's clubs from a wide area participating.

The Word "Bead"

The word "bead' is derived from the Saxon verb biddan, to pray. Originally associated with the beads on a rosary, it has been extended to mean almost any pierced object that can be strung.

Christmas Tree Waste Cut Thru Operation of 1935 Law, Says Conzet

The usual annual waste of Christmas trees through indiscriminate cutting was nearly eliminated as the result of the Christmas tree law passed by the 1935 legislature, according to a statement issued by Grover M. Conzet, director of forestry.

Preliminary estimates indicate that approximately 1,800,000 Christmas trees were cut in Minnesota in 1935. Of this number approximately 1,200,000 were exported to other states and 600,000 were used in Minnesota; 450,000 trees were subject to the tax imposed by the Christmas tree law, while 150,000 trees, used by municipalities, were tax exempt.

The Christmas tree law, passed by the 1935 Legislature, required all trees cut or sold in Minnesota to bear official evergreen tree tags.

OLD PIONEER DIES, WAS 102 YEARS OLD

Winthrop — Mrs. Wilhelmine Muchow, Sibley county's oldest citizen, both in years and time of residence, died at her home in Winthrop last week at the age of 102 years. Born in Germany in 1834, she immigrated to America on the same boat with her future husband, locating in Wisconsin in the early 50's. Shortly after, they started the trek westward, being the first to establish their permanent home in Sibley county. During the Civil war Mrs. Muchow carried on active pursuits on the farm and cared for her three children.

DOUBLES MONEY AT LOW INTEREST

Eveleth—Some people don't believe in putting their money out at bank interest rates, and are always looking for "quick money". An interesting bit of information relative to a depositor's faith in his home-town bank and the growth of a savings account through the semi-annual addition of interest payments is revealed by J. R. Schuknecht, cashier of the Miners National Bank at Eveleth. One of the bank's customers opened an account on September 18, 1911, with a deposit of $187, and from that time until April 25, 1915 interest and additional deposits brought the account to $1690.89. Since the latter date no deposits or withdrawals have been made, but the interest payments have accrued to the extent that on December 31, 1935, the account had reached a total of $3003.78.

REEMPLOYMENT OFFICE IS ACTIVE

Statistical analysis of the National Reemployment Service activity for 1935 released from the district office at Thief River Falls for District No. 1 reveals increased interest in the use of employment offices in this territory. The district office reports 3,140 placements made by offices in this district and 19,051 contacts made by applicants seeking employment during the past year.

Out of a total of 4,197 persons referred to jobs, 583 were placed on public works (contract jobs), 121 on non-relief Emergency Relief Administration jobs which were in operation previous to the present works program, 51 in other governmental jobs other than proposed employment projects, 346 on present operating works program relief jobs, 490 in other works program contract jobs and 1549 in miscellaneous private employment.

Out of the total placements made, 522 were women. A total of 203 persons were taken off relief rolls and placed in employment not requiring relief status. Two hundred twenty-two ex-service men with dependents were put to work in various types of employment. The service placed 1,693 persons in regular employment lasting one month or longer and 1447 persons on temporary jobs of less than one month.

As many as 1,678 men and 699 women who had not registered previous to 1935 placed their applications for employment. Over 3,800 persons who had registered previous to 1935 reappeared at the offices. Periodic revisits by applicants seeking employment during 1935 exceeded 12,860.

In addition to employer contacts by correspondence and other means of communication, employment office interviewers made 2,619 personal contacts with private employers seeking jobs for those registered with the National Reemployment service.

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY FRIDAY EVENING

Imagine a girl's sorority house on the campus of a well known University. It is Saturday night and the girls are ready to go out for the evening. Some are wishing they could stay in, when suddenly one of the girls is taken ill. She has scarlet fever and the house is quarantined for two weeks. When one knows that several of the boys who have been working in the house are quarantined also, one can readily visualize the many screamingly funny complications and mix-ups that follow. This is the basic plot of "Campus Quarantine" the whirlwind comedy to be presented by the Junior class of St. Hilaire high school on Friday evening, Jan. 31st, at the high school auditorium. The cast is as follows:

Gloria Smith, a sorority girl	Doris Hagglund
Mrs. Smith, the house Mother	Edna Prestby
Beryl Shepard, the house aristocrat	Hazel Huff
Edythe Rhodes, her chum	Dorothy Kirkconnel
Deborah Mercer, the plain girl	Evelyn Gigstad
Lela Dunn, a nurse	Ruth Brink
Elliot Maxim, the Campus Adonis	Maitland Carter
Finlay Carruthers, his pal	Floyd Prestby
Ronny Steele, a college waiter	Arlo Jacobson

BONUS BILL PASSED OVER F. D. R. VETO

Congress voted Monday to override the presidential veto of the soldiers' bonus bill, thus ending a 15 year battle for payment of the bonus to veterans of the World War. Immediately upon passage of the act, orders were issued to the government printing plant to speed work so application blanks could be placed in hands of veterans at earliest possible time. Payment of the adjusted compensation certificates will be made in baby bonds which will be cashable after June 15th this year. The bonds will mature in 1945 and bear interest at the rate of 3%, and it is expected many veterans will retain them as an investment. Total payments to veterans in Pennington county will be nearly $200,000.00, and in Red Lake county about $130,000.00.

LEGISLATURE ENDS SESSION

Minnesota's seventh special legislative session ended Saturday morning when members of both house and senate met to approve such action as was taken the previous day. Among the most important measures passed at this session was the Old Pension law, the $7,625,000 relief appropriation bill, repeal of the 1933 law providing for exemption of household goods and farm machinery from taxation, and passage of a bill which will allow payment of delinquent taxes in installments over a period of ten years. The latter measure has much merit, and is expected to bring in many millions of dollars to the state's coffers.

ADULT MEETINGS TO BE HELD TUESDAYS

Fourteen persons were present at the meeting of the Adult Education class held at the school building last Monday evening. It was decided at this meeting to call the class the St. Hilaire Forum, and that meetings hereafter would be held Tuesday evening of each week. At the next meeting the newly enacted Old Age Pension law will be discussed, and its provisions analyzed. All persons in the community who are over 65 years of age, and who may be interested in getting a clear understanding of the new law, are cordially invited to attend the meeting. Regular subjects will be taken up for benefit of others who are present.

Elaborate plans have been made for the opening of the twenty-sixth annual Northwest School Farmers' Week and Red River Valley Winter Shows at Crookston next Monday. Professor O. M. Kiser, secretary of the Red River Valley Livestock Association, reports unusual interest in the livestock department. The number of exhibits is expected to pass all recent records while the demand for sale catalogs has greatly exceeded expectations. This combination sale, which is the first to be held since the depression, reflects the marked improvement in conditions prevailing throughout this area.

Early entries also indicate that the poultry and farm crops entries will tax the exhibition buildings to capacity. John Saugstad, business manager, states that all industrial exhibit space has been engaged for some time.

Over forty speakers and judges have been engaged to address the various meetings and make the awards. M. L. Wilson, assistant secretary of agriculture, Washington, D. C., will address a mass meeting Tuesday evening, while Upton Close, New York City, international authority on the Japanese and far Eastern situation will speak Wednesday evening. One evening during the week will be devoted to music. A mass chorus of 150 male voices from eleven scattered communities will present a special festival under the direction of T. W. Thorson. The chorus will be assisted by a string quartet from the St. Cloud Teachers College.

Other speakers include Dean W. C. Coffey; F. W. Peck, former cooperative bank commissioner, Washington, D. C.; W. H. Peters, Dr. E. C. Stakman, and Dr. H. K. Hayes, co-developers of the rust-resistant Thatcher wheat; Professor Henry Schmitz, chief of the forestry division; S. H. Rutford, state rural rehabilitation director; A. M. Foker; Miss Gratia Countryman, Minneapolis city librarian; Mrs. J. H. Lindal, barrister and home maker, Winnipeg, Canade; Mrs. J. J. Stewart; T. A. Erickson, state club agents; A. J. Kittleson, club assistant, and others.

Judging contests, 4-H club demonstrations, organization meetings and banquets will be held throughout the week. Copies of the official program may be secured through the Northwest School, Crookston.

Bells Have Played a Great Part in History of the World

Served as Harbingers of Both Good and Bad Tidings.

"Bells have played no small part in history," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Among the many renowned bells whose ringing has ushered in new chapters in the story of mankind is the Liberty bell, most beloved historical relic of the United States," the bulletin continues. "Prior to its cracking, the Liberty bell had a very active 'voice' in the affairs of the nation. Its most far reaching utterance was that of July 8, 1776, when it announced the public reading of the Declaration of Independence which had been formally adopted by the Continental congress on July 4, 1776.

Liberty Bell Hidden Under Floor.

"Threatened with British capture, it was removed from the tower of Independence hall on September 18, 1777, and hidden beneath a church floor in Allentown, Pa., for almost a year. Rehung in the tower, it pealed for festivals and anniversaries until its fatal accident in 1835, when it cracked as it was being tolled for the funeral procession of Chief Justice John Marshall.

"Other historic bells treasured by Philadelphia are the chimes which ring from the steeple of old Christ church.

"In Sicily, in the Thirteenth century, nearly 8,000 Frenchmen listened stolidly to the ringing of the Sicilian vespers, unaware that the bells were signals for their cold-blooded massacre. In the Sixteenth century France, clamor of bells cried the beginning of the murder of thousands of Huguenots.

Bells Warned of Floods.

"Among England's most appealing legends about bells is that of the Bow bells in London. When young Dick Whittington, hungry and destitute, was leaving London to seek his fortune elsewhere, it is said the bells of this old church rang out and seemed to say: 'Turn again Whittington, thrice lord mayor of London.' It is a familiar tale of how, cheered by them, he returned, found work and later actually became lord mayor.

"William the Conqueror enters the history of bells through being the first to strictly enforce the rule that all lights and fires should be extinguished when the warning bell rang at eight o'clock. As late as the Nineteenth century, in many European towns, ringing of the curfew (couvre-feu or 'cover fire') was simultaneous with the squealing of numerous door hinges as shopkeepers hastened to obey the law.

"But bells used to strike terror to the hearts of people in the Netherlands. When, in the silence of the night, bells jangled madly from the sentinel's watch tower, soldiers swarmed to repel approaching invaders, or townspeople rushed to repair a breaking dyke.

"Ship captains today, plowing through a heavy sea, listen for the ominous clanging of bell buoys, rocking in the heavy surf, which warn of dangerous reefs.

Bells Given as Rewards.

"In Russia, during whirling snowstorms that blot out house lights villagers ring bells to guide lost travelers. Siberian carriages and sleighs are drawn by teams of three, or even seven horses, the midde horse galloping beneath a big wooden arch from which hang numerous bells.

"Although old Russia was called 'The Land of Bells,' it did not have a monopoly on them. Our pioneer forefathers rambled over the prairies in Conestoga wagons to the lilting chimes of bells swaying above their horses' shoulders. These bells frequently served as rewards. If a wagon broke down, its driver often gave its bells to the wagoners who assisted him."

All-Occasion Frock That Is Flattering

PATTERN 2388

King George Is Dead; Edward Takes Throne

GEORGE V, king of Great Britain and emperor of India, died in Sandringham house, peacfully and painlessly, in his seventy-first year. Immediately on his passing, his eldest son, Edward Albert, who had been prince of Wales, succeeded to the throne, which by British law, is never vacant. Next morning the state council, consisting of the queen and her four sons, which had been created by a decree which George signed a few hours before his death, proclaimed the accession of the new ruler as Edward VIII. His first official act was to notify the lord mayor of London of his father's demise.

King Edward VIII

King George, who had been on the throne almost twenty-five years, was the best loved and most democratic of the world's monarchs, always just, solicitous for the welfare of his subjects, and living a simple and almost faultless domestic and official life. The new king, a confirmed bachelor, knows his vast empire intimately, having visited practically every part of it, some regions many times. Decidedly different from his father in his tastes and ways of life, he still, as the prince of Wales, has been a great favorite of the people, and in recent years, realizing that he would soon have to mount the throne, he steadied down and took an increasing interest in the affairs of the empire. He is especially liked by the laboring classes, in whose welfare he often has shown deep sympathy. That he never married has been a disappointment to the British people. Now for the first time since the reign of William IV there is no prince of Wales. Next in the line of succession is the king's brother, the duke of York, and second comes the duke's little daughter, Princess Elizabeth. There will be six months or more of official mourning for George's death, and Edward VIII will not be crowned for about one year.

The body of the dead ruler was removed from Sandringham house to the little church of St. Mary Magdalene in Sandringham. Thence it was to be taken to Westminster abbey, there to lie in state. Interment is to be in the Albert Memorial chapel at Windsor, beside the tombs of George's father and mother. It was believed the state funeral would not take place for two weeks.

Death of Rudyard Kipling, Famed British Poet

RUDYARD KIPLING, poet and story writer who best embodied in his literary work the ideas of British imperialists, died in London following an operation for perforated ulcer of the stomach. He was seventy years of age and in recent years had written very little except as a propagandist. He was a vigorous and bold writer and a master stylist. His best work was done long ago when he wrote numerous poems and stories about India, its natives and the British soldiers there.

Senate Passes Bonus Bill, 74 to 16

BY A vote of 74 to 16 the senate passed Senator Harrison's compromise bonus measure which provides for the payment of $2,237,000,000 to veterans in baby bonds and cash. The action was taken despite warnings from the treasury that the national debt would be swollen to $35,500,000,000 in eighteen months. The senate rejected an amendment for discretionary currency inflation.

Sen. Harrison

It was considered certain the house would accept the senate bill, for it was backed by the veterans' organizations. Belief was general that President Roosevelt would veto the measure, but its proponents felt sure the veto would be overridden in both house and senate.

Two Treasury Officials Resign Their Posts

UNDERSECRETARY of the Treasury Thomas Jefferson Coolidge resigned his position suddenly and unexpectedly, because he did not agree with all the policies of the administration. At the same time Assistant Secretary Lawrence W. Robert resigned. President Roosevelt accepted both resignations. It was understood there was no connection between the two withdrawals. Mr. Robert had been expected for some time to quit his post.

In his treasury position Mr. Coolidge, long a New England banker, has been in charge of such government financial affairs as the huge borrowings of money to meet heavy government expenditures. He was understood to be in accord with most Roosevelt policies but felt he was unable to give his full support to the general New Deal program.

Supreme Court Orders Process Tax Return

SUMMARILY overruling the government's petition for a rehearing of the Louisiana rice millers' cases, involving the refund of some 200 million dollars in processing taxes held in escrow, the United States Supreme court issued its mandate ordering the return of the funds to the taxpayers.

The court also issued its mandate in the Hoosac mills cases, in which the Agricultural Adjustment act was held unconstitutional and thereby closed the door to petitions for a rehearing in that case. In a third action the court ordered arguments on February 4 on the New Deal's motion to dismiss a suit brought by the state of Georgia to test the constitutionality of the Bankhead compulsory cotton control act.

Ellsworth and His Pilot Rescued in Antarctica

ALL the world rejoiced over the news that Lincoln Ellsworth, noted explorer, and his pilot, Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, had been found safe and well in Little America and were on board the rescue ship Discovery II which was sent jointly by the British and Australian governments. The two men had been missing since November 23 when they started on a bold airplane flight across the Antarctic continent. In this they succeeded, but they ran out of fuel and were forced to land at the bay of Whales.

Nye Arouses the Wrath of Fellow Senators

GERALD P. NYE, the radical senator from North Dakota, apparently upset his own apple cart when he accused the late President Woodrow Wilson of having "falsified" with respect to his knowledge of secret European treaties at the time the United States entered the World war. One after another Democratic senators arose to denounce this charge and to promise no more money would be appropriated for the investigations which Nye's munitions committee has been carrying on.

Senator Nye

Carter Glass, the fiery old Virginian who was Wilson's secretary of the treasury, was especially bitter in his attack on the North Dakotan and by skillful indirection managed to express his opinion of his fellow senator without violating the senate rules. Said he:

"If it were permissible in the senate to say that any man who would asperse the integrity and veracity of Woodrow Wilson is a coward; if it were premissible to say that his charge is not only malicious but positively mendacious, that I would be glad to say here and elsewhere to any man, whether he be a United States senator or not, because the charge would be not only destitute of decency but it would be such a shocking exhibition as never has happened in the 35 years I have served in the congress of the United States."

The attacks on Senator Nye were not confined to his charge that President Wilson was a falsifier. He was accused of exploiting his position as chairman of the munitions committee for his political enhancement, for the sake of newspaper headlines, and for his personal profit.

Thirty-Hour-Week Bill Prepared by Committee

CONGRESSMAN CONNERY of Massachusetts, chairman of the house labor committee, says that body has approved a bill designed to impose the 30-hour week on industry operating in interstate commerce, and that he hopes it will have the support of the President. The measure would license all interstate business and withhold licenses from firms which work employees more than 30 hours a week, fail to provide a wage sufficient to maintain a decent and comfortable standard of living, deny workers the right to join unions or bargain collectively, or employ persons under sixteen years of age.

Bill to Enlarge Trade Commission's Powers

INTRODUCED in the house by Chairman Rayburn of the interstate commerce committee is a bill for the purpose of increasing the powers of the federal trade commission to prevent unfair and deceptive trade practices. It proposed these four major changes in the present law:

1. Declares "deceptive acts and practices" unlawful in addition to the "unfair methods of competition" now specified.

2. Includes "trusts" in the scope of the law along with corporations.

3. Gives the Circuit Court of Appeals power to restrain practices involved in a commission proceeding pending final court decision.

4. Limits to 60 days from the date of a commission order the time in which application may be made to the Circuit court for review of the order.

Farm Program Based on Soil Conservation Act

THERE will be no new legislation to continue the aims of the AAA, if the plans of the administration are adopted, for it has been found by officials that the soil conservation act of 1935 will permit the undertaking of about everything in the bill that the house and senate agricultural committees were drawing up.

Sen. Robinson

In a White House conference the new program was agreed upon by President Roosevelt, Senator J. T. Robinson, majority leader; Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Attorney General Cummings, Chairman Ellison D. Smith of the senate agriculture committee, Chairman Marvin Jones of the house agriculture committee, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, Senator John H. Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), AAA administrator Davis, and M. G. White of the AAA.

The administration will work out a system of granting farm subsidies to farmers restricting acreage under authority of the soil conservation act of 1935. In connection with the program the administration will make provision for obligations incurred under the AAA.

Final Returns in the Literary Digest Poll

LITERARY DIGEST'S Presidential straw vote has been concluded, and the final returns indicate a growing opposition to the New Deal. A total of 1,907,681 ballots was received, and of these 62.66 per cent were cast against the President's policies and acts, and 37.34 per cent were for the administration.

Thirty-six states gave majorities against to eleven still in favor of the President and his policies. Among the pro-Roosevelt states was Utah. The other were classified in the release as "southern and border" states.

Of the different sections of the country, New England cast the heaviest "No" vote, going 77.98 per cent against the administration. The Middle Atlantic states from New York to West showed 68.89 per cent of the voters against Mr. Roosevelt and his recovery schemes, while the Middle Western states in the farm belt and the Rocky Mountain states indicated a ratio approximately the same as the nation at large—3 to 2 against. The three Pacific coast states totaled 58.04 against the New Deal.

Seventeen Persons Die in Airplane Crash

SEVENTEEN persons met a tragic fate in the worst airplane accident that the United States has had. A big transport plane of the American Airlines, en route from New York to Los Angeles, crashed in a swamp near the village of Goodwin, Ark., and its 14 passengers, two pilots and stewardess were killed. With great difficulty the bodies of the victims were brought out of the marsh where their bodies were found scattered among fragments of the shattered plane. Officials of the government and of the airline company immediately started an investigation, but the cause of the disaster could not easily be determined.

Hauptmann Is Reprieved by Gov. Hoffman

LESS than thirty hours from the time when he was to die in the electric chair, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted kidnaper and slayer of the Lindbergh baby, was given a thirty-day reprieve by Governor Hoffman of New Jersey. This means he will have at least sixty more days to live, because he will have to be re-sentenced. The governor did not give specific reasons for his action. He did say: "A reprieve is an act of executive clemency rather than judicial clemency. I am not required to give a reason, but I might say that there are grave doubts in this case, not only in my mind, but in the minds also of our citizens."

Bruno Hauptmann

There will be only the one reprieve, "unless the evidence should warrant" another, the governor said. If Hauptmann is to be finally saved it must be through the presentation of sufficient new evidence to warrant Justice Trenchard granting a request for a new trial, or for a new plea for clemency to the state pardons court.

Italo-Ethiopia War Again Before League Council

MEMBERS of the League of Nations council assembled in Geneva and opened their ninetieth session, to resume their efforts to settle the Italo-Ethiopian conflicts. Diplomats present believed further sanctions against Italy might be imposed, but it was generally believed the plan to declare an embargo on oil was dead, at least for the present. This was due to uncertainty as to the course the United States would follow in that regard.

Italians in Geneva asserted flatly the embroglio with Ethiopia could be settled only along Italian lines, but added they had no peace proposals themselves and knew of none to come from others.

Intensified Nazi activities in the free city of Danzig were reported officially to the League of Nations by Sean Lester, high commissioner of Danzig, at a private meeting of members of the council.

I FEEL FINE

Mothers read this!

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

Headline Hunting

Washington.—Headline hunting—a term originated by the distinguished writer, Floyd Gibbons—has long been a senatorial pastime. It is a practice, a game, which has been used by some senators over and over again to obtain for themselves personal publicity, usually at the expense of private interests which always is smeared in senatorial investigations whether justified or not.

Lately, however, headline hunting, as a pastime, took an awful blow on the chin. And when headline hunting was the recipient of a flare-back from its own devices, it caught two well-known senate figures in the whirlpool of the reaction. Probably one of the senators was largely responsible for the terrific explosion that took place and he caught the full force and effect of his own statements as they came in reverse gear.

The incident to which I refer occurred in connection with the investigation of munitions makers and bankers by Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, and the special committee of which he is chairman. This investigation has gone on for some fifteen months and has cost approximately $193,000, $68,000 of which came out of funds appropriated to feed the hungry of New York city. It has disclosed some questionable practices by some of the small dealers in munitions. But as a whole, I believe the consensus in Washington is that Mr. Nye's investigation, called a fishing expedition by many newspaper correspondents, has added little or nothing of a constructive character.

The Great Flare-Back

Once before in these columns I reported to you how Senator Nye was proceeding about the country making speeches in which he charged munitions makers and international bankers and even aircraft and shipbuilders with being instrumental in promoting war. Indeed, he asserted numerous times that bankers and munitions makers had forced the United States into the World war. He and investigators, employed by the committee, were constantly engaged in telling capital correspondents of terrible things which the investigators had dug up while they mulled through private files of banks and business houses. These brought plenty of headlines, but now that the munitions investigation is virtually over, one can hardly agree in making a fair appraisal of the committee's work that the charges have been substantiated.

Senator Nye is an advocate of peace and he had many opportunities, therefore, to appear in the roll of a peace leader in speeches before various organizations interested. It developed, however, that he received honoraria, gifts of money or fees, for the speeches.

But to get back to the headline hunting and how it flared back, the climax of the munitions inquiry was the investigation of the gigantic New York financial house of J. P. Morgan and company. It was while the Morgan partners were on the witness stand that the explosion came—and it did not involve Morgan in any way. The incident around which the storm blew hardest came when Senator Clark of Missouri, a son of the distinguished late Speaker Clark, read into the committee record documents showing how President Wilson had diplomatically evaded informing a senate committee of the existence of treaties among the allies by which there would be a division of the colonies of Germany and Austria-Hungary if the allies won the World war. Subsequently, documents showed that Mr. Wilson was aware of those treaties and when this was disclosed, Senator Nye charged in a committee hearing that Mr. Wilson had falsified the records.

There followed the explosion. Word reached the floor of the senate, then in session, and Senator Connolly, Texas Democrat, blew off the lid. He openly accused Senator Nye of besmirching the names of Mr. Wilson and the late Secretary of State Lansing, and charged at the same time that the North Dakota senator was a publicity seeker. Senator Clark was criticized also and the inference was cast out in the vicious senate debate that the Missouri senator was indirectly biased because his father had lost the Presidential nomination to Mr. Wilson in that famous and bitter 1912 Democratic convention. Thus Senator Clark got caught in the mess but not to such an extent as did Senator Nye because Senator Glass, the Virginia Democrat and a leader in the Wilson administration, also took up the cudgels and lambasted the youthful North Dakotan without the benefit of gloves. On top of this, Senator Pope of Idaho, and Senator George of Georgia, both stalwart Democrats, withdrew from the Nye committee proceedings. In doing so they read a statement explaining their position which, though tactful, was none the less direct in expressing their dissatisfaction.

In the meantime, the Morgan partners, headed by J. P. Morgan himself, sat in the witness chairs with nothing to do. They sat for three days with virtually no questions being put to them.

From their standpoint, I believe their climactic appearance as witnesses was quite fitting. The committee that had started out with bales and bales of records from which the investigators were going to prove how terrible was the House of Morgan had found it was giving them a rather clean bill of health. They found that the committee, instead of proving that they had brought on the war, was proving for the House of Morgan that it had served the United States government; that its policies were of more value to this country than they ever had been publicly shown to be before and that in the end they had enabled the governments of Great Britain and France to maintain their strength and fight off the Central Powers until the men and money from the United States were brought into play.

Through the long years that J. P. Morgan and company has operated in New York, the name has been synonymous with Wall Street. It was synonymous with Wall Street because demagogues and those politicians who profit by baiting big business as a popular sport had created that impression. Always when it was profitable for a representative or senator to conjure up a picture to win votes for himself you could find allusions to the "mighty power of Morgan."

It will be recalled how in recent years two former senators, Brookhart, Republican of Iowa, and Heflin, Democrat of Alabama, made mince meat of the "money changers of Wall Street." Always, the "money changers" were headed up by the house of Morgan. I mention these two former senators because their attacks are typical. There are those in the senate today who do the same thing and for exactly the same purposes.

The committee investigation of the House of Morgan showed that the institution had profited by acting as commercial agents for the allies and that in handling about three billion dollars in purchases of wheat, cotton, coal, oil, shells and other munitions of war for the allies, a commission of 1 per cent had been paid to the House of Morgan. The inquiry also revealed the extent to which Morgan and company had taken bonds of the French and British governments and had sold them here. Evidence showed that after the United States entered the war, the United States government took over the job of financing those nations whose business and financial transactions had been handled by the House of Morgan prior to April 6, 1917.

So, the munitions investigation, instead of smearing the House of Morgan, apparently has told for the first time the details of how it functioned during a period when the United States government could do nothing, a period when the vast majority of our citizens were proved to have been sympathetic with the allies against the central powers.

* * *

Senatorial Inquiries

At the outset I said this investigation had flared back on its sponsors. Time alone will tell how significant this explosion has been, and time alone disclose whether it will have the effect of reducing the number of senatorial excursions into the affairs of private business.

The senate has vast powers and they are susceptible to abuse. There are many unbiased students of government who hold the conviction that there have been unwarranted investigations by the senate and that these investigations amount to persecution of private business. Obviously, some inquiries have turned up real dirt. Take the oil scandal that came out of the Harding administration, for example. The facts in that conspiracy probably never would have been disclosed except for the vigorous job done by the late Senator Walsh, Montana Democrat. There are other illustrations of the truth of the statement that some investigations are valuable. On the other hand, it seems to me that headline hunting as such, represents a game somewhat outside of the rules of fair play.

If the bitter feeling that was developed from the situation centering around President Wilson's war-time actions serves as a lesson for the future, I feel sure that there will be fewer senatorial inquiries. It shows, or ought to show, that there should be some basis established before a senate committee goes whole hog after the hides of any business men, whether they be great or small.

Birth of Holmes

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Boston's famous physician, author and wit, father of the late justice of the same name, was born August 29, 1809, and, it seems that when born, he was treated as but a mere trifling incident by his own father. For, on the leaf of an old almanac, opposite the date, August 29, his father put an asterisk* and at the foot of the page, "*Son b." and that is all.

With the Minnesota Lawmakers

Lacking only the formality of a signature to turn it into law, the passed old age pension bill was dispatched to Governor Olson, the house and senate having finally agreed on a comproimse plan. As passed, the bill provided for a maximum of $30 per month to needy persons over 65 years of age.

Children and near relatives of pensioners were held, under terms of the compromise bill, to be at least partially responsible for their support. Applicants of pensions were limited to property valued at $3,500 in addition to household goods, furniture, clothing, and a cemetery lot. The federal government would pay half the pensions, the state 33 1-3 per cent, and the counties 16 2-3 per cent.

But the passing of the pension bill, after stormy debate in the house, did not entirely smooth the course of the special session, as had been expected. Rural opposition to the enlargement of the 1936 relief fund tied a new knot into the already thoroughly kinked chain of legislation.

Rural opposition to the enlargement of the 1936 emeryency relief fund tied the state legislature into a knot, after the old age pension bill had been passed by both houses and plans had been made to adjourn Friday, January 24. While the house pushed through a bill appropriating $3,750,000 in new funds for relief, the senate frowned on the idea, failed to take action, and proposed that the legislators stay in session at least another day to thresh out the matter of relief funds.

Senate leaders felt that $1,500,000 would be enough in new funds for relief and balked flatly at the sum set up in the house bill; but indications were that a compromise could be worked out on some figure between the two extremes. When the statemate became apparent, there were a number of suggestions that the two houses remain in session throughout the night in an effort to reach agreement. Majority opinion, however, swung in favor of postponing the final battle of the session until Friday night. It was made clear, however, that the remaining bills must be pushed through, or into the wastebasket in time for adjournment on Saturday noon.

The old age pension bill, as finally passed and sent along for the signature of Governor Olson, provides a maximum of $30 a month to needy persons over 65 years of age. As given to Governor Olson, the pension law require schildren and near relatives to be at least partially responsible for support of pensioners. Applicants for pensions are limited to property valued at $3,500 in addition to household goods, furniture, clothing and a cemetery lot. The federal government would pay half the pensions, the state 33 1-3 per cent and the counties 16 2-3 per cent.

While the pension craft was encountering stormy weather, other pieces of special legislation moved toward a more tranquil conclusion. The $83,000,00 delinquent tax bill, prepared by a conference committee also, slid through the house with but one dissenting vote. Under terms of the bill, property owners who have not paid their 1933 taxes may pay the delinquency in installments over a 10 year period. Conferees ironed out a large wrinkle in the bill when they deleted the provision stating that collected delinquent taxes would have to be applied on the bonded debt, substituting the clause that such funds collected would be used for the same purpose for which they were levied.

The state senate labor committee approved a resolution calling for an interim investigation of social security legislation with emphasis on unemployment insurance systems in other states. The proposal calls for a committee of 10, equally divided between the houses in membership, and an allowance of $10,000.

Creation of the Minnesota commission of interstate co-operation, composed of 5 house members and 5 senate members to be selected by the governor, was advocated in a joint resolution to both bodies. It was advanced that the board would encourage and arrange conferences with officials of other states and formulate proposals for co-operation between Minnesota and its neighbor states.

Both members of the senate and house will be doubly glad to get home at the end of the session, especially since new low temperatures have been recorded throughout the state.

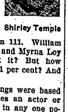
In efforts to solve the arguments arising over the provision concerning the proportion of the pension fund to be paid by the state and the county, the conference committee had decided that the federal government should bear 50 per cent of the cost, the state 33 1/3 per cent, and the county 16 2-3 per cent. Originally, the senate had proposed that state and county pay 25 per cent, while the house had suggested a 37½ per cent levy on the state and a 12½ per cent levy on the county.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

HERE is an even more authoritative report on the standing of the movie stars at the box office than was submitted to you in this column last week. It comes from the independent exhibitors, through the courtesy of the Motion Picture Herald, a weekly publication devoted to the news of the industry. Here it is.



Shirley Temple

(1) Shirley Temple. (2) Will Rogers. (3) Clark Gable. (4) Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. (5) Joan Crawford. (6) Claudette Colbert. (7) Dick Powell. (8) Wallace Beery. (9) Joe E. Brown. (10) James Cagney. Even more interesting (to me, at least,) is the standing of some of the other players. Shirley Temple is rated at 874 per cent; against that rating Jean Harlow gets 164, Norma Shearer, 139, Katherine Hepburn 111. William Powell is rated at 205, and Myrna Loy at 76. Startling, isn't it? But how about Greta Garbo at 41 per cent? And Carole Lombard at 2?

Of course, these ratings were based on the number of times an actor or actress was mentioned in any one position in the questionnaires filled out by the exhibitors. And some of the players did not make many pictures in 1935. Even so, I find myself going around in a daze, muttering "Ronald Colman, 15 per cent; Miriam Hopkins, 8 per cent. And Patsy Kelly got only 1 per cent, and she's being starred now."

Have the mighty fallen!

Well, American men can rest on their laurels now; Wendy Barrie has come out with the statement (or her press agents have come out with it for her,) to the effect that she's always liked American men better than she liked the British, "because they're more romantic." But she came to this country, according to all reports, with the avowed intention of marrying one of our young millionaires who is frequently mentioned in the public prints, only to discover that he wasn't matrimonially interested. Well, perhaps that's romance!

Jane Withers certainly owes Shirley Temple a debt of gratitude. Due to Shirley's zooming into stardom, everybody wants pictures staring a child, and Jane came along just in time. She has a new, long-term contract with Twentieth Century-Fox, and her next picture will be "The Matron's Report."

Once again Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., has Hollywood all agog. At the moment it looks as if the romance between him and Lady Ashley is a thing of the past, which, of course, revives rumors that he and Mary Pickford will re-marry, and brings up assertions from some of those who work with Mary, to the effect that she will marry Buddy Rogers. Fairbanks has sent word to have a studio dusted off, and says he is all set to begin work on "Marco Polo." It will be a costume picture, of course, and not so long ago producers wouldn't touch a costume picture with a ten-foot pole. Now you fall over them wherever you go.

Richard Dix is busy saying "No" these days. He said it emphatically when he was asked to let his twins make a nice sum of money by appearing in a picture, and he said it again when he was invited to go to Australia to make one.

Jim Cagney

No sooner is one dispute betwe James Cagney and his employers settled than another one bobs up; it looks very much as if the two-fisted James wanted to end that affiliation. They've squabbled over salary, over his right to have the final say on his pictures, and the most recent argument (to date) is over how many more pictures he's to make on his contract, which has two years to run. He says six, the company says eight. He does some of his best work in the latest release, "Ceiling Zero," a real thriller. It probably will coin money, which puts him in a good spot to make trouble.

Don't see "A Night at the Opera," the Marx Brothers' latest, unless you like completely goofy pictures. It's quite mad. The only sane thing is the lovely singing by Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones, the young man who, it's said, will forge straight ahead.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Errol Flynn seems to be set as a star; his picture is breaking a lot of attendance records. . . . Gladys Swarthout and Fred Astaire, ignoring that little matter of high taxes, are building in Hollywood . . . The motion picture colony in Hollywood lost its heart to Governor Allred, of Texas, as soon as it met him. How do you like Bing Crosby's variety show, on the air, in the spot that used to be Paul Whiteman's? . . . They say we'll see more all-color pictures than ever this year.

THE BONUS

There is a lot of moaning today over the passage over the Presidential veto of the soldiers' bonus bill.

Had there been half as much protest over the profiteering which went on during and after the war, this protest would have been to the point. At least it would not be open to the charge of hypocrisy which is so often brought against it.

Be that as it may and admitting that politics played a big part in this matter, the fact remains that enough sentiment in behalf of the measure was in existence to bring about an overwhelming vote.

Meanwhile the deed has been done. The money will have to be found to carry out the mandate. Even if the cost is as high as some of the opponents state, it is not going to break the nation, though it comes at a time when other expenses are out of proportion.

It may do a lot of good, especially if it stimulates business and also encourages some of the former soldiers to build up a nest egg for the future.—St. Paul Daily News.

CREAMERY MEETING HELD HERE MONDAY

Annual meeting of stockholders of the St. Hilaire Co-op. Creamery Association, and election of officers for the coming year, was held Monday afternoon at the Young & Olsen hall. A very good attendance was noted despite the cold weather. Report of the secretary shows the creamery enjoyed a very successful year during 1935. A good increase in output was made during the year, and the report shows the association is out of debt, with a neat cash balance on hand. Present indications are the creamery will have an even better year during 1936 as receipts of cream have already begun to increase, a month earlier than was the case last season.

Dividend checks to stockholders will be issued in the near future. The dividend will be six per cent as has been the custom in former years.

As the election of officers, Emil Larson, president; Anton Johnson, vice president, and Fred Erdmann, secretary, were re-elected.

Rawlins Novak was elected a director to succeed John Maakrud, and Loyd Johnson was elected treasurer to succeed W. P. Wilson who retired after about sixteen years in that office.

Following the meeting, lunch was served by the Nor. Luth. Ladies Aid from the club rooms in rear of the hall building.

M. CONVERSE OF RED - LAKE FALLS IS DEAD

Funeral services were held Tuesday at Red Lake Falls for Milton Converse who died Sunday at a Grand Forks hospital following a brief illness. Mr. Converse, who was chief of the fire department at Red Lake Falls, had been a resident of that city for thirty-eight years. For many years he was employed by the Hunt Bros. hardware company, but in recent years operated a plumbing shop of his own. "Con", as he was usually known, often visited St. Hilaire and was well known thruout this territory. He had a host of friends in both Pennington and Red Lake counties who will miss him and his cheery greetings. Mr. Converse was a son of the late I. D. Converse, who was connected with this paper about twenty-three years ago. He is survived by his widow and five children.

TRAIN KILLS HORSE IN FREAK ACCIDENT

Benson.—Death swooped down on two Benson farmers at the rate of 70 miles an hour recently, only to be cheated when a horse was stripped of its harness and carried 100 feet up the railroad track, leaving the other horse, the sleigh, and two men unharmed. L. Reihsen and Otto Puchulske were driving their sleigh into town and did not see the fast mail train, three hours behind schedule and trying to make up time. With the train almost on top of them, Puchulske swerved the team to the right and away from the train. This move brought the sleigh and its occupants out of danger, but the engine struck the horse on the left side. The animal, instantly killed, was hurled completely out of its harness 100 feet down the track. The remaining horse escaped injury, and no appreciable damage was done to the sleigh or the two men, who leaped to safety.

ARVID M. ANDERSON DIES

Mr. Arvid M. Anderson, a former resident of St. Hilaire, passed away at Sunnyside, San Diego County, California, Jan. 21, 1936.

He was born in Kirkhoven, Minn., in 1881 and moved to St. Hilaire district with his father, A. S. Anderson, a few years later. He spent his boyhood days at St. Hilaire.

In 1905 he moved to Wadena, Sask., Canada with his brothers, Albin, Edward and Edwin. He resided in Wadena until 1930 when he moved to California.

Funeral services were held in the Little Chapel of Roses at Glen Abbey Memorial Park near Sunnyside, Calif., at 2 P. M. Jan. 27, 1936. Rev. Dashler of the Sunnyside Friends church officiated.

He is survived by his wife, Esther Anderson, a son, Averell Anderson, a daughter, Mrs. Ialeen Francis, all of Sunnyside, Calif., a step-mother, Mrs. A. S. Anderson of Bemidji, Minn., brothers, Albin Anderson of Hendon, Sask., Anton Anderson of Seattle, Edward Anderson of Chula Vista, Calif., Emil Anderson of Sunnyside, Calif., Edwin Anderson of San Diego; sisters: Mrs. Beda Hagen of Atwater, Minn., Mrs. Martha Evenson of Moorhead, Minn., Mrs. Carl Swanson of Plummer, Minn., Mrs. Tecla Hanson of Winnifred, Mont., Mrs. Edith Lane of Bemidji, Minn., Miss Hildur Anderson of Harlam, Mont.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Miss Alice Skottem, who teaches at Climax, was home last week-end for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sever Skottem.

Friends here will be pleased to know Theo. Skatrud has improved so much after his recent illness that he was able to return this week to his home at Argyle after being a patient for about a week at a Crookston hospital.

Mrs. Emil Just returned Saturday from Cando, N. D., where she was present at the funeral of her sister-in-law, Catherine Evensizer. Enroute home, she spent a couple of days at the home of her son at Larimore, and over night with friends at Grand Forks.

Ole C. Johnson of Moorhead, who travels for the Fairmont Creamery Company, was here Monday evening and Tuesday morning for a call on old friends and former neighbors. While here he attended the meeting of the B. M. club of which he was one of the organizers, and also first president.

Regular monthly meeting of the village council was held Monday night to transact the usual routine business.

Last Sunday was, according to the calendar, Groundhog Day. Most people in this section are of the opinion that the groundhog did not even venture out that day. If he did, he did not have to go far before his ears were frostbitten. Had any of our long-distance weather forecasters been kind enough to tell us what brand of weather was to prevail Feb. 2nd, it would have been possible to rush a bill thru special session of the legislature advancing Groundhog Day a month for this year. At any rate, most people would feel happy if they could be assured winter would last only six weeks more.

WATCH REPAIR MAN LEAVES WITH CUSTOMERS' WATCHES

Lake Wilson.—An itinerate watch maker and repair man has "tinkered" with the watches of residents of Lake Wilson a little tooo much, and is being sought by authorities. E. L. Bliss, who makes his living traveling from town to town repairing clocks and watches, dropped in on Lake Wilson and at Iona and Avoca, nearby. His work was guaranteed, he said. Anyone who entrusted a watch to his expert hands would never have to worry about it again. It is true that his customers have been relieved of the worry of whether their time-pieces would keep good time, but they have been left with the worry of wondering where their watches were. Bliss apparently decamped with a collection of time-pieces and cannot be found. One of the watchess was valued at $40.

BOYS SNOWSHOE TO REACH SCHOOL

Virginia.—Old-timers talk about the hardships involved in getting to and from the Old Red Schoolhouse, but they have nothing on four sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Neal of the East Bay Fishing camp on Crane lake, northern boundary water. Chester, 17, Raymond, 15, Charles, 9 and Glen, 8, all snowshoe one mile morning and night over the ice of the windblown lake to meet the school bus, and they never miss it, no matter how cold the weather. From the point they meet the bus, they are taken along with other Crane lake children to the school in Buyck, which is 13 miles from Nelson's. In the spring, during the thaw, the boys get up at four o'clock in the morning, and with books and lunch pails under their arms, hike down a narrow trail about two and one-half miles around the lake. When the lake is open the boys use a boat and motor to get across.

FIVE MILES OF GRAVELLING IN KRATKA LET

H. P. Lund & Sons Get State Contract Approved by County Board

At a special meeting of the county board Monday, a state highway department contract let to H. P. Lund & Sons of this city for the gravelling of five miles of county aid road, was approved. The improvement will be made on county aid road No. 23 in Cloverleaf and Kratka townships, extending from Trunk Highway No. 1 south to the river. The contract price was $2,240.00, of which $1,554.00 will be paid from federal funds. The balance will be paid by the county in addition to furnishing the necessary gravel.

At the regular meeting of the board Tuesday, all bids for seven miles of gravelling on county aid road No. 9, in Star Township, were rejected, and the state highway department was asked to readvertise the job. This action was taken in the hope of securing more favorable bids. The Star township improvement would extend seven miles south from Trunk Highway No. 1 on county aid road No. 9.

Other business transacted by the board at its regular meeting consisted largely of routine matters. Several applications for tax abatements were acted upon, besides allowing the usual monthly bills.

OLDE-TYME BASKET SOCIAL

Is there more nourishment in the hole of a doughnut than in the fragrance of limburger cheese? If you want to hear this question debated, come to the Bilden & Olsen hall, Wednesday evening, Feb. 12, at 8:00. The debaters will be Rolf Wollin, Hall Widsten, Myles Jackson, Elroy Johnson, Marvin Olness and Klemens Gigstad, with Chas. Kundert as chairman. JUNIOR CLASS PLAY WAS GIVEN FRIDAY

The Junior class play entitled "Campus Quarantine" was presented to an audience which filled the high school assembly last Friday night despite the cold weather prevailing at that time. The play was full of rollicking incidents from start to finish, and created a very favorable impression with all who saw it. All members of the cast played their parts exceptionally well and are to be commended for their efforts. Pleasing musical numbers were rendered between acts.

LAW SUPPLEMENTS WITH THIS ISSUE

A copy of all laws and resolutions passed by the special session of the Minnesota legislature at the session which commenced December 2nd, 1935 and concluded January 25th, 1936, is furnished to readers of the Spectator with this issue. Since they are of interest only to people of Minnesota, none will be mailed out of the state. Complete text of the Old Age Pension act, and various other laws of importance are in the supplement which should be preserved for future reference.

Silent Moments in Which We May Review Our Deeds

Real action is in silent moments. The epochs of our life are not in the visible facts of our choice of a calling, our marriage, our acquisition of an office, and the like; but in a silent thought by the wayside as we walk—in a thought which revises our entire manner of life and says, "Thus hast thou done, but it were better thus."—Emerson.

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only liquid laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true.

Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. Doctors use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

I II III

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Washington Digest

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED

By William Bruckart

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Liberty League Steps Out

Washington.—The American Liberty league has laid aside its swaddling clothes and has put on long pants in the field of politics. Although comparatively new as a group and promoted consistently as non-partisan, the league can now be said to have plunged headlong into the political warfare. If its first big rally can stand as a criterion, its influence is due to be felt in an important way in the forthcoming national elections.

This rally that really marked the league's campaign debut was a picturesque thing. It was picturesque first because of the time and the place and the very nature of the thing and the manner of approach to the voters of the country but it was more picturesque and more important as well because the headline speaker was Alfred E. Smith, one time Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and by all odds the most colorful and pungent speaker of the present day. It was a dinner of more than 2,000 persons—from every state in the Union—and it was held in exactly the same rooms of the Mayflower hotel here where two weeks earlier President Roosevelt had addressed about the same number of persons at the Jackson day $50-a-plate dinner. As a further note of interest, attention might be called to the fact that the meeting was presided over by Borden Burr, a lifelong Alabama Democrat, and the other speakers were Dr. Neal Carothers, a Southern Democrat, long head of the economics department of Lehigh university in Pennsylvania, and former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson of Louisville, Ky., a Republican.

I referred above to Mr. Smith as being a colorful speaker, and from all of the comments I have heard, it seems to be the consensus that never has he justified the description better than in his league speech. He was introduced by Mr. Burr as "Al Smith of America," and proceeded to assure his audience that included millions listening by radio that he placed patriotism above party, that he was a candidate for no office under the sun, that he had no ax to grind and that such critical shots as he might take were without personal animosity for anyone. But he did not pull his punches when he pilloried the New Deal and he showed no mercy when he drew the deadly parallel between the Democratic platform of 1932 and the policies which Mr. Roosevelt had carried through. I believe it may be said that he reached the peak of his speech when he laid on the speaker's stand copies of the Democratic platform of 1932 and the Socialist platform of the same year and in his best East side twang he challenged anyone to deny that Mr. Roosevelt had been elected on a Democratic ticket and had carried out the Socialist promises.

The President's "breathing spell" utterance, his message to congress on the state of the Union, his staff of advisers, his monetary policies formed other meaty subjects which the former governor of New York picked to pieces in his own inimitable way. He begged congress to assert itself again and quoted from the Bible in his plea it should return to the father's house and be again one of the three branches of the federal government. He said it took courage for a lifelong Democrat to say the things he was saying, but there is no gainsaying he displayed what it took.

Through the speech was Mr. Smith's chosen theme that a great danger lies ahead, a danger that the New Deal will destroy everything which he held had made America the outstanding nation that it is. He accused the President of having arrayed class against class and asserted that what the nation faces is the most gigantic tax burden ever known. To this he added that it will not be the rich who will pay, nor the poor, but "that vast army of individuals with incomes from a hundred dollars a month to five thousand dollars a year."

Finally, in conclusion, Mr. Smith said:

"Let me give this solemn warning: There can be only one capital, Washington or Moscow.

"There can be only one atmosphere of government, the clear, pure fresh air of free America, or the foul breath of communistic Russia. There can be only one flag, the Star and Stripes, or the flag of the godless union of the Soviets. There can be only one national anthem, 'The Star-Spangled Banner' or 'The Internationale,' there can be only one victor. If our Constitution wins, we win. But if the Constitution—stop, stop there—the Constitution cannot lose."

The Smith Walkout

But what of the significance of the league dinner and the Smith speech? Prior to the dinner, the league's executive council met in secret. Whether it committed the league to a definite stand was not formally announced, yet surely there are grounds upon which to base a statement that it means to support candidates and platforms on the conservative side.

With equal emphasis, it can be said that Mr. Smith has walked out on that section of the Democratic party that sticks by Mr. Roosevelt. He said it was a choice either to "put on the mantle of hypocrisy or we can take a walk." He explained it probably would be the latter course. And frankly it seems with the personal following that he has, a walkout by Mr. Smith cannot be described as otherwise than serious to the party from which that group is defected. It has all of the earmarks of an interesting political situation.

Immediately after Mr. Smith had spoken, quite a few Democrats in congress fired back at him and in defense of the New Deal. Men like Representative Doughton of North Carolina, a Democratic wheelhorse as chairman of the powerful ways and means committee; Speaker Byrnes, and a flock of others. They insisted generally that the Smith barrage was more helpful to the Democrats than campaign speeches they themselves could make. Administration leaders in the executive departments are beginning to fire also, but they are smart enough to let the enthusiasm aroused by the speech die down before they attempt to upset arguments advanced by Mr. Smith.

I have no doubt, from the signs even now cropping up, that an effort will be made in congress to discredit the league. It looks like Senator Black, Alabama Democrat and chairman of the senate lobby committee, probably will dig into the league's files to show how it was financed to a large extent by such wealthy men as the Duponts, among others. Such an investigation likewise will carry an undercurrent of a movement to do away with political influence of such men as John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman, a league director, and Jouett Shouse, former executive chairman of the Democratic national committee and the league president. If that fight gets started it will be a mudslinging beauty.

So, summarized, the picture resulting from the league's dinner is that of a major feud, as well as a major political movement, because there is a really bitter fight between personalities in sight as well as the possibilities of a third party movement.

In the situation as it now stands, however, the Republican party holds the key. Smith and his following and the league membership generally can be counted in definite opposition to the New Deal and most all of its works only on condition that a candidate and a platform, viewed by them as sound, are put forward by the Republicans. If the Republicans turn too far to the radical side in their efforts to match the Democratic position (which necessarily must be in support of everything the President has done), then, there is likely to be a third party, which would make predictions of the outcome worthless.

Digging Up Secrets

Congress frequently goes off on a tangent in which it will set about exposing this or that or the other among the practices of private business. In the last several years it has been particularly active in exposing to public view secrets of corporations and individual representatives and senators have blown off much steam concerning salaries paid business executives and they have directed criticism at private business as well for some of its other expenditures.

A few years ago Senator Norris of Nebraska, among others, spoke at great length in criticism of our government's diplomatic service because of the salaries paid and the expenditures allowed for operation of our foreign diplomatic offices. The Norris attack apparently did considerable damage to the diplomatic service because it made many capable men fearful of entering that field where highly trained men are necessary.

But all of the time during which criticisms have been leveled at private business on account of salaries paid business executives and because of other expenses, the senate itself has been going ahead from year to year using taxpayers' money to suit its own purposes. For instance, Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the senate, lately has made public his annual report covering senate operations and it shows that the taxpayers' money to the extent of $3,296,852 had been spent for maintenance of that one branch of congress. There are 96 senators, each of whom has an office staff; there are some 30-odd committees in operation, each with a staff, and there is the regular senate organization with a large personnel. Consequently, salaries alone take up a considerable chunk of the total outlay, but Colonel Halsey's report disclosed that general "contingent expenses" of the senate had eaten up $701,000. Included in this total of "contingent expenses" was an item of $236,000 for the cost of senate investigations in the last year. Almost half of this amount was used by the munitions investigation committee headed by Senator Nye, Republican of North Dakota, who lately was made the subject of criticism on the senate floor because of his committee's attitude.

Toy Railroading Is Rapid Growing Hobby Among Men

Nearly every large city has its miniature railroad society whose members own elaborate systems ranging in cost from about $30 for small electric lines to $10,000 for real models which run under their own steam over a mile of track, hauling ten tons at 30 miles an hour.—Collier's.

Here's Record That'll Make Holmes Do Highland Fling

One of the greatest detectives alive is a native of French Indo-China, who is known as "The Bloodhound." His captures average one murderer every 25 days for the past 28 years.

He is credited with taking 400 of the 1,200 men who are now serving life sentences for homicide on Pulo Condore, the French "murderers' isle" in the China sea, from which no one has ever escaped.—Collier's.

Here's Very Fast Way to "Alkalize" Acid-Indigestion Away

Amazingly Fast Relief Now from "Acid Indigestion" Over-Indulgence, Nausea, and Upsets

If you want really quick relief from an upset or painful stomach condition—arising from acidity following over-eating, smoking, mixtures of foods or stimulants—just try this:

Take—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a full glass of water. OR—2 Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets, the exact equivalent of the liquid form.

This acts almost immediately to alkalize the excess acid in the stomach. Neutralizes the acids that cause headaches, nausea, and indigestion pains. You feel results at once.

Try it. AND—if you are a frequent sufferer from "acid stomach," use Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after meals. You'll forget you have a stomach!

When you buy, see that any box or bottle you accept is clearly marked "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

SIGNS WHICH OFTEN INDICATE "ACID STOMACH"

PAIN AFTER EATING — SLEEPLESSNESS
FEELING OF WEAKNESS — INDIGESTION
NAUSEA — MOUTH ACIDITY
LOSS OF APPETITE — SOUR STOMACH

Honey Is Again Used for Wounds As in Days of Pliny

Honey as a dressing for wounds was popular at one time in the Middle ages. Still earlier, during the Roman empire, it enjoyed a certain vogue; and Pliny refers in a certain passage to fish fat and honey as making a good ointment for wounds. It may well be that the fish fat he refers to was cod-liver oil.

Now honey has been re-discovered as a remarkably effective ointment. In a Red Cross hospital in Hamburg, Germany, tests have been carried out with honey during the past half year, and it has been found that even much soiled wounds quickly become cleaner under its influence. But though it cleans a wound, it does not seem to make it heal more quickly than before. As cod-liver oil promotes rapid healing, it has been combined with honey in an ointment so as to achieve the double purpose of cleansing and healing.—Science Service.

Dandruff Formed in Big Flakes

Scalp Itched Badly—Quick Relief with Cuticura

Miss K. was in constant misery for over a year with dandruff. Then she tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment . . . Read her own words:

"I was annoyed with big flakes of dandruff and an itchy scalp. It itched day and night for over a year. The dandruff scaled off and could be seen on my clothing.

"I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment after seeing an advertisement. I am now entirely free from the condition and my hair looks fine." (Signed) Miss E. Kennedy, 267 Grand St., Pasadena, Calif.

For skin or scalp complaints of external origin—pimples, rashes, itching and burning of eczema—Cuticura relief is promptly soothing. Never smarts. Soap 25c, Ointment 25c. Buy BOTH today. FREE samples. Write "Cuticura," Dept. 18, Malden, Mass.—Adv.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay? Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

Baby Bond Bonus Passed Over President's Veto

PAYMENT of the veterans' bonus by means of baby bonds payable on demand was enacted into law by congress, and the money for the ex-soldiers will be available on June 15. The Harrison compromise bonus bill that went through the senate and house easily, was vetoed by President Roosevelt. The house immediately and enthusiastically repassed the measure. The senate was a little more deliberate, but within three days it, too, had overridden the disapproval of the Chief Executive, and the bill was made law. The vote in the senate was 76 to 19. In the house it had been 324 to 61.

It was a notable fact that all the senators—95 in number, for Huey Long's successor has not yet taken his seat—were present and voting. Notable, but not strange when one remembers this is an election year. Fifty-seven Democrats, 16 Republicans and 3 Radicals—La Follette of Wisconsin, Shipstead and Benson of Minnesota—voted for the bill, while 12 Democrats and 7 Republicans voted against it.

The galleries were filled and there was wild cheering when the vote was announced. Republican senators amused themselves and the spectators by twitting the Democrats on their failure to stand by their chief, the most voluble of the twitters being Senator Hastings of Delaware.

Informed of the vote, President Roosevelt at once ordered government departments to prepare for payment of the bonus certificates as quickly as accuracy will permit. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said that the payment would be the most difficult mechanical task the treasury had faced in its history. He said the treasury would need $2,500,000 and the veterans' administration $5,000,000 to increase the force to take care of the job. More than seven million interest calculations will be necessary.

Al Smith's Indictment of the New Deal

"WE CAN either take on the mantle of hypocrisy, or we can take a walk; and we'll probably do the latter."

Al Smith

These words of Alfred E. Smith in his speech at the American Liberty league dinner in Washington were perhaps the most interesting and significant of his utterances on that occasion, for he professed to be speaking for "the disciples of Jefferson. Jackson and Cleveland" and concerning their action in the Democratic national convention next June when the delegates are asked to indorse the doings of the Roosevelt administration. There could be no misunderstanding Smith's meaning, and he must now be considered the leader of the conservative Democrats in their revolt against the policies of the New Dealers. The concern of the administration Democrats is now as to how extensive will be the bolt; and whether the conservatives will put up their own ticket, support the Republican nominee or merely stay away from the polls. Of course in any case the Republican cause will be aided materially, unless the guesses of its leaders are all wrong.

New Deal Democrats were quite undismayed by the Smith speech, which they declared was weak and ineffective. They announced that Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson of the senate would deliver the official reply in a radio address, and unofficial answers to Smith's denunciations came from various sources. One of the latter, by Donald Richberg and Melvin D. Hildreth on behalf of the National Progressive league, dug up this quotation from one of Smith's speeches in the 1928 compaign:

"'The cry of socialism has been patented by the powerful interests that desire to put a damper on progressive legislation. Failing to meet arguments fairly and squarely, special interest falls back on the old stock phrase of socialism . . . To refer to the remedies for all these evils as state socialism is not constructive statesmanship, it is not leadership; and leadership is what this country is hungry for today."

The Richberg statement continued: "If Governor Smith was right in 1928, then by that same token and by his own once powerful arguments Alfred E. Smith must be wrong today, when he is giving aid and comfort to the opponents of progressive policies which he formerly espoused."

Mr. Smith in his Liberty league speech never once named President Roosevelt but he specifically put on that gentleman the full blame for repudiation of most of the planks in the Democratic platform of 1932, which he declared was the best ever put forth in this country.

"Millions and millions of Democrats just like myself, all over the country, still believe that platform," he shouted. "And what we want to know is why it wasn't carried out. And listen. There is only one man in the United States of America that can answer that question."

Stately Funeral of England's Late King

FOR two minutes Tuesday afternoon (London time) there was silence throughout all the vast British empire. In St. George's chapel at Windsor the last rites were being performed over the remains of the dead king, George V, by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the archbishop of York and the bishop of Windsor. The late ruler's body had been lying in state for two days in Westminster hall, London, and thousands upon thousands of mourning Britons had passed sadly by the bier, while other throngs filled all the churches at special services. In the funeral procession King Edward VIII walked behind the catafalque wearing the uniform of an admiral of the fleet. With him were his brothers and after them came innumerable representatives of foreign nations, these including kings and princes. The United States was represented by Norman Davis, ambassador-at-large.

Albert Sarraut Becomes Premier of France

FRANCE'S new government, under Albert Sarraut as premier, it is hoped will stand up until the spring elections. If it does, the results will not be happy for Italy for it will take a much stronger stand in support of the League of Nations than did that of Laval. The new foreign minister is Pierre-Etienne Flandin, noted for his pro-British tendencies; and Joseph Paul-Boncour, no friend of Mussolini, is the minister of state concerned chiefly with league affairs. In other respects there is nothing especially notable about the Sarraut cabinet. Regnier is retained as finance minister, and he is committed to the Laval policy of defending the franc.

Albert Sarraut

Flandin went to London for the funeral of King George, and it is rumored in Paris that he would sound out British bankers on the subject of a loan of three billion francs which the French treasury sorely needs. With Laval in the discard, the British might look on this suggestion with favor.

Leaders of Jewry Plan Exodus From Germany

IF PLANS announced in St. Louis by leaders of world Jewry are carried out, there is to be another exodus, this time from Germany where the Jews are greatly oppressed by the Hitlerites. Sir Herbert Samuel, eminent British Jew, attending the national council of Jewish federations and welfare funds, said a definite method would be formulated soon to provide for the gradual emigration of at least 100,000 of the German reich's estimated 430,000 Jewish population. The undertaking will be financed by a fund of about $15,000,000 raised by English and American Jews.

As many refugees as possible will seek haven in Palestine. Others, as immigration laws permit, will be taken to America, Canada, England and European countries free from anti-Semitic restrictions.

Three Convictions in Morro Castle Case

A JURY in the United States District court in New York returned verdicts of guilty against acting Capt. William F. Warms and three co-defendants in the criminal negligence trial resulting from the disastrous fire that swept the Morro Castle off Asbury Park, September 8, 1934, taking a toll of 134 lives.

Besides Warms, those convicted were Eben Starr Abbott, chief engineer of the burned ship; Henry E. Cabaud, executive vice president of the New York & Cuba Mail Steamship company, operators of the Ward Line, and the New York & Cuba company itself.

Charges of negligence and cowardice on the part of officers and crew of the liner were made by survivors testifying at the trial. Abbott was shown to have scrambled into one of the first lifeboats put overboard after ordering an assistant to go below and investigate the progress of the fire. Warms was accused of delaying the sending out of an SOS until it was too late.

Six Army Flyers Killed in Plane Collision

DURING night formation flying near Honolulu, two army planes collided above the Hawaii military air base and fell in flames. Six of the flyers were instantly killed; two escaped by bailing out. The dead were:

Lieut. William G. Beard, twenty-eight, San Francisco, pilot of one of the planes; Staff Sergt. Bernard F. Jablonowsky, thirty-three; Private John B. Hartman, twenty-seven, Chicago; Private Bruce Taylor, twenty-six, Puyallup, Wash.; Private Truman J. Gardner, twenty-seven, Olney, Ill., and Private Gordon M. Parkhurst, forty-three, Yorkville, N. Y.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Minneapolis—The annual winter indoor circus, sponsored by the Shriners, will be held in the municipal auditorium the week beginning February 10.

Waterville—Mr. and Mrs. John R. Smith of Waterville are starting their sixty-fifth year of married life. They were married at Logansport, Ind., December 31, 1871, moving to Waterville in March, 1883. They lived for years on a farm, then moved into town 24 years ago.

Rochester—Governor Olson, far along the recovery road following his operation of a month ago, let it be known in his hospital room here that he will be back fighting next fall and that his quest for election to the United States senate will be far more than a radio campaign.

St. Paul—The deadline for purchasing automobile license plates without a penalty is February 15th. Approximately $7,000,000 was collected in 1935 by the state for the largest year of motor vehicle registration in the state's history, Mike Holm, secretary of state, announced.

Montgomery—Sewer gas explosions injured two women and wrecked two homes. Mrs. Mary Peterka, 82, was rushed to a New Prague hospital for treatment of serious burns. Mrs. Mary Novotny also is in serious condition. The home of Anton Schlie was jarred from its foundation.

St. Paul—Definite action to curb drinking among WPA employes was taken by Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, with issuance of a bulletin ordering the discharge of employes guilty of non-support and of those who absent themselves from work due to drunkenness following pay day.

Pipestone—E. S. Gandrud, Pipestone county agent, has issued a warning to all farmers to have corn they gathered for seed thoroughly tested. Some of the farmers have found that corn selected for seed last fall will not grow properly. The farm bureau is making plans for establishment of a corn testing station so that farmers may have their seed tested.

Minneapolis—Lowell (Red) Dawson, backfield coach at the University of Minnesota, has signed a four-year contract as head football coach at the University of Tulane. He will receive $7,500 a year. He announced that Glenn Seidel, brilliant Gopher quarterback for the past three years would be his backfield assistant with Bill Bevan, who played with Minnesota for two seasons, as his line coach.

St. Paul—Minnesota citizens contributed $49,346,369 to the federal government in income and excise taxes in 1935, internal revenue officials report. This is a reduction of $9,000,000 from the 1934 collections, the drop being due chiefly to impounding in federal court of AAA taxes. Federal income taxes totaled $14,844,134 or $3,500,000 more than in 1934. State income taxes were $3,400,808, approximately $4,000,000 more than 1934.

Minneapolis — With applications rushed to Minneapolis from Washington by air mail, veterans organizations are ready to aid veterans collect their bonus. C. A. Zwiener, state adjutant of the American Legion, said their office is at First avenue N. and Eighth street. The Veterans of Foreign Wars are taking bonus applications at 211 Lumber Exchange building. Veterans applying for bonus payment were urged to bring their discharge papers and either the bonus certificate or the "pink" slip in case a loan has already been made.

Minneapolis—John R. Coan was appointed as postmaster here, as the government confirmed 29 other Minnesota postmasters. Others are: Lloyd A. Ahles, Albany; Lindley B. Hanna, Austin; Edward E. Vig, Belgrade; Alfred E. Rickson, Bronson; Arthur Elmer Imsdahl, Brooten; Bertha H. Anderson, Byron; Lucy M. Bexszyk, Clarissa; Olger B. Welbye, Eagle Bend; Herman Ten Cate, Edgerton; Virgia Poole, Effie; Norman O. Nelson, Fertile; Herman Frajola, Gilbert; Sam Bogen, Hendricks; LeRoy S. Burnett, Hewitt; Oscar A. Going Out of Ourselves to Refresh Our Thoughts

Doctor Richardson tells us there is nothing so wholesome for an active mind as to secure rest by variety of work. A man can do five or six times more than he expects if he varies his work. I have found that to be so in my own life. By varying his work a man obtains fresh spirits, and renewed powers for the duties of daily life.

There is so much that is discouraging and depressing in the world, that we must sometimes go forth, as it were, out of ourselves for fresh thoughts and fresh air. The greatest workers, when they go out for a holiday, are not idle; they find rest by change of occupation. Life is too short to admit of idleness in anybody.—Erskine Clarke.

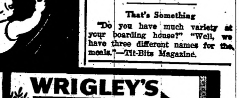
YOU CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON WRIGLEY'S QUALITY



Illiterate Persons in U. S. Number More Than 4,000,000

Illiteracy is commonly understood to mean the inability of adults to read, write, or both. In some countries the basis of the calculation is the number of men and women married who cannot sign the register; in others the ability of army recruits to read; there is therefore no trustworthy method of making comparisons between different countries on this question. In the United States, a person is technically called illiterate by the census bureau if over ten years of age and unable to read and write.

Recent figures for the United States are those for the 1930 census. At that time the total number of illiterates in a population of 98,723,047 ten years of age or over, was 4,283,753. Of the total the native white illiterates numbered 1,103,134, foreign born, 1,304,084 and negroes 1,513,892.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

The year 1936 may be a break for the girls, but to the pedestrian it is just another leap year.

The season is at hand when we shall see some of our most esteemed citizens and some not so highly esteemed, either "viewing with alarm" or "pointing with pride."

While Safety slogans will help in making our streets and roads safer, we're going to have to go much farther than that.

B. C. Forbes, financial writer, points out that one Chicago business firm pays $10,000 in taxes every day, while another has to dig up 25,000 iron men as their daily tax subscription. Seemingly those business houses pay it, but the customer foots the bill in the long run so no wonder we are all wondering where it will finally end.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father who passed away three long years ago, Feb. 9, 1933.

We long for the time to meet you, all dear ones gone before,
To the land where we never say goodbye
No sad partings and no more tears, for none shall ever die.
We shall sing the old, old story, and we shall wear
the crown of glory,
In the land where there are no good-byes.
We shall say "good night"
here, but "good morning" forever up there.

Sadly missed by us all.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear wife, daughter and sister, Lydia Peterson, who passed away one sad year ago today, February 6, 1935.

Sincere and true in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind
For all of us she gave her best
God grant her eternal rest.
A happy reunion awaits us 'n the heavenly home.

WINTER SHOWS HAVE LARGEST DISPLAY EVER

In spite of a fire which burned away portions of the stall partitions and second floor of the livestock barn of the Red River Valley Winter Shows at Crookston January 31, the shows opened on schedule February 3 with a larger list of livestock, crops, and poultry entries than in any year since 1930. Attendance at the event is being held down by extremely cold weather.

More than six hundred head of cattle, hogs, sheep and horses are on display this week, and the crops entries, in spite of the severe scourge of rust last summer, number more than four hundred. In the poultry division, more than five hundred birds have been entered and the Northern Minnesota Poultry association sponsoring the show has had to refuse entries totalling about two hundred birds.

In the corn classes, T. G. Glesne of Underwood, Otter Tail county, was named openclass sweepstakes winner and his son Anton was awarded a similar honor in the 4-H club class.

In the open classes of small grains, the following sweepstakes were awarded: wheat, Mrs. Elise Walberg, Fosston; oats, Daniel Soltis, Warren; barley, George Burau, Fergus Falls; flax, Joseph Kopecky, Angus; and rye, Earl Sulerud, Gary.

In the judging contest for students of sub-collegiate schools of agriculture, the Northwest School, Crookston, won championship in the judging of crops and the North Central School of Agriculture, Grand Rapids, championship in livestock judging. The contest was held on the opening day of the show, February 3. Other judging contests held, and the name of the organization winning championship of each, were as follows: adult farmers' livestock judging contest, Roseau county; adult farmers' dairy cattle judgin gcontest, Beltrami Boosters' club, West Polk county; 4-H club livestock judging contest, Running Brook 4-H club, Mahnomen county; high school livestock judging contest, Gilbert High school, St. Louis county.

The list of speakers engaged to address the Northwest School Farmers' Week and Winter Shows meetings included such celebrities as M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who spoke Tuesday night; Upton Close, New York City, eminent authority on the Japanese question, who spoke Wednesday evening, and Dr. Preston Bradley, Chicago, honorary president of the Izaak Walton League, who is scheduled to speak Thursday evening. On Friday evening the Northwestern Minnesota Singers' association will present their fifteenth annual song festival in the Crookston armory.

Climaxing an interesting series of programs for women, six Polk County women's organizations will present one-act plays on Friday afternoon. Four of these plays have been written by Polk county women.

Prominent speakers on the afternoon programs for men have included W. C. Coffey, dean of the University Department of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul; F. W. Peck, state director of Agricultural Extension work; E. C. Stakman and H. K. Hayes of University Farm, who developed the rust-resistant Thatcher wheat; Henry Schmitz, chief of the Forestry division, University Farm; T. A. Erickson, state 4-H club leader, and A. J. Kittleson, state 4-H club agent.

The Red River Valley Livestock association, Red River Valley Development association, Northern Minnesota Poultry association, Northwestern Minnesota Red River Valley League of Municipalities, and District 4 of the Minnesota Creameries and Managers association are all scheduled to meet at the Winter Shows Thursday. On Friday, the Northwestern Minnesota Singers' association and Red River Valley county superintendents are scheduled to meet. The annual Red River Valley Rural School spelling contest will also be held Friday.

WYANDOTTE GIRL COUNTY SPELLING CONTEST WINNER

Despite the prevailing extremely cold weather a good attendance was registered at the annual Pennington county rural school spelling contest held Saturday in the court room at the court house under the supervision of A. C. Matheson, county superintendent of schools.

The outcome of the contest was exceedingly close, three girls being nearly tied for first place. A tabulation of the standings revealed that Doris Carlson of Wyandotte, 13 years old, was the winner with a standing of 99.8 per cent, followed by Vivian Jesperson, also of Wyandotte, 99.5 per cent; Ruby Breiland of District 11 in the Hazel community, 99 per cent; and Elsie Skaar of District 135, 96 per cent.

The three leaders each attained a perfect score in the written test, and finished with very little difference in the oral spell-down. As a result of her victory Doris Carlson will represent Pennington county at the Red River valley spelling contest to be held Friday in Crookston in connection with the Valley Winter Shows.

PENNINGTON CO. FINANCES ARE IN GOOD SHAPE

The net bonded indebtedness of Pennington county was reduced 74,500 during 1935 from a total of $538,500 at the beginning of the year to $464,000 December 31, it is revealed in the annual financial statement prepared by County Auditor A. M. Senstad and published in this issue of the Times. Included in the total of outstanding obligations at the end of the year were $347,000 ditch bonds, $92,000 road and bridge funding bonds and $25,000 poor relief funding bonds.

All of the various funds are shown to have been in good condition as the year closed, each having a credit balance except the county revenue and road and bridge funds, and small overdrafts in these two were taken up shortly after the first of the year. Total receipts from all sources are shown to have been $781,461.70, while disbursements, including remittances of tax funds to the various subdivisions of the county, aggregated $644,123.26.

Tax receipts for the year, including delinquent taxes and penalties, are reported at $301,818.32, a slight reduction from the total of $316,785.79 for 1934 and about the same as the $302,491.98 received in 1933.

A total of 160 residents of the county received old-age pensions at an average rate of $5 a month, the aggregate expenditure on this account being $7,360. Mothers' pensions amounting to $3,885 were paid to 48 residents, while in 1934 the total was $3,625. With the abandonment of the county system of poor relief, expenditures of county funds on this account aggregated only $4,340.21 in 1935.

Expenditures on state aid roads in the county last year amounted to $33,206.45 exclusive of payments of bonds and warrants, the total including $5,407.10 of new construction. For county aid roads a total of $21,976.20 was spent including $11,856.33 of new construction compared to $17,352.37 in 1934.

RURAL ELECTRIC COOPERATIVES FORM NEW GROUP

To Act as Central Agency for Aid'ng Units in Northwest Region

Representatives of over 25 counties and about 20 rural electrification cooperatives in Minnesota and Wisconsin met Saturday, January 25 at Minneapolis, and organized the Federated Electric Cooperative, an organization which will act as a central agency for rural electric cooperatives in the central Northwest, through which they may secure expert engineering, financial, auditing and other services. It will also act as central purchasing agent for such materials as the various members may need.

The organization of the Federated Electric Cooperative climaxes many months of activity on the part of individuals throughout this area in setting up cooperative associations for rural electrification. Several of these associations have already made application to the R. E. A. in Washington for funds wherewith to build their lines to furnish electricity to farm homes. It is estimated that $6,000,000 will be loaned for this purpose in Minnesota alone.

WORKMAN ON WPA PROJECTS MUST SUPPORT FAMILY

Discharge of WPA workmen who fail to support their families and of those who absent themselves from projects due to drunkenness following paydays was ordered this week by Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator.

Declaring reports that a number of WPA workmen have been spending their earnings for drink instead of actual necessities for their families, Mr. Christgau issued the following bulletin to all district directors:

"The WPA program is the Federal government's contribution toward the unemployment relief problem. Its primary purpose is to provide employment to those employable persons who would otherwise be receiving relief, and thus relieve the local communities and states of the responsibility of providing subsistence to them and their dependents. This purpose is defeated in those cases where WPA employees fail to support their dependents.

"All cases of alleged non-support should be referred to the district supervisor of unemployment, who will in turn request the assistant supervisor to investigate the charges. It is suggested that valuable information and assistance can be obtained from county relief workers and relief officers.

"If the charges are substantiated, the non-supporting employe should be advised that continual failure on his part to care for his family will result in termination of his WPA job.

"In cases where recurrent absence from a project following pay days is due to drunkenness and the man, single or married, has been warned, the same procedure will be followed and the man will be discharged.

"County relief workers should be advised of each development in such cases, so that, if the employe is discharged, his family will not suffer."

In a previous bulletin, Mr. Christgau ordered the discharge of any WPA worker reporting to his job intoxicated or drinking in the course of his job.

VETERANS MAY NOW GET BONUS BLANKS

Blanks for making application for cashing of soldier's adjusted compensation certificates have been received by county officials of the American Legion. While many veterans have already called for their blanks, there is a large number in the county who have not received them. It is necessary to have the army, navy, marine corps or aviation division serial number of the adjusted service certificate when making application.

STOCK SHIPPERS TO MEET

Annual meeting and election of officers of the St. Hilaire Livestock Shipping Association will be held here Monday, Feb. 24th, at 1:00 P. M. A speaker from the Central Commission Company will speak at the meeting. At close of the meeting, lunch will be served as has been the custom at previous annual meetings.

Ed. Christensen returned last week after attending a meeting of Gamble agents at Bismark, N. D. Included at the convention were agents from Montana, North and South Dakota, and western Minnesota.

BLACK RIVER NEWS

Messrs Harry Johnson, Carl Anderson and Hilding Adolphson attended the Farm Crop Show at Crookston on Tuesday.

Mrs. Victor Sandberg and daughter, Margaret of Alberta, Can., were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs Harry Winter on Friday.

Mr. Gunard Lindquist and Vivienne were Thief River Falls callers on Friday.

Mr. William Strom of Calumet, Mich., who has been visiting relatives here and also attended the funeral of his sister the late Mrs. A. Husby, returned to his home at Calumet, Mich., on Tuesday.

Mrs. Selmer Rosette visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lars Rosette over the week-end.

A group of young folks were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Anderson Saturday evening.

Mr. Art Durheim was a Thief River Falls caller on Friday.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CREAMERY PUBLISHED

Annual statement of operation and financial condition of the St. Hilaire Creamery Association is published in this issue. The statement shows the creamery made a nice gain over last year, and is in very fine condition. By saving the issue containing the statement, stockholders may compare it with future statements.

NAME COMMITTEES OF FARM BUREAU

At a meeting of the Pennington County Farm Bureau held Monday at Thief River Falls several committees were appointed to attend to various activities thruout the county for the coming year. Mrs. V. G. Brink was named chairman, and Frank Bothman and Mrs. Lloyd Johnson members of the 4-H Club committee. On the entertainment committee for Farm Bureau meetings are; Mrs. O. Weckwerth, chairman, and W. McCrum, M. H. Jackson, V. C. Noper, Anna Hegerness, C. H. Toomey and R. A. Werner. The membership committee are Nick Schalz, chairman, Wm. Kruse and R. J. McKercher. L. A. Nelson was appointed chairman, and W. Quist and P. H. Wright members of the legislative committee. Other committees are to be appointed later.

CROOKSTON CHURCH BURNED

A Norwegian Lutheran church at Crookston, burned to the ground last Sunday in a fire caused by an overheated furnace. While going to turn in a fire alarm, the janitor of the church suffered a heart attack which delayed getting the alarm in until the fire had gained such headway that the building could not be saved. A residence adjoining the church was badly damaged by the blaze.

Another Lutheran church at Crookston burned from the same cause three weeks ago.

MAKING HIVE EQUIPMENT

Albert Brink and August Berglund have had their bee hive manufacturing plant in operation this week cutting out interior equipment for several hundreds of hives which will be made latter in the season. The plant has a capacity of many thousands of pieces per day.

Your Creamery

The creamery, organized and built by the people of this community because they saw a need for co-operative marketing of their farm products, can grow and prosper only in the same proportion as it is patronized by the people of the community. Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

A meeting of the B. M. Club will be held at the club rooms at 8 o'clock next Monday evening.

There is a scarcity of news this week which is due, undoubtedly, to the fact that most people are staying close to their own firesides.

There was good attendance at meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association last Friday evening despite cold weather. A very nice program was given, and lunch was served.

Nobody disputes the Groundhog's prediction that there are to be six weeks more of winter after Feb. 2nd, but all agree those six weeks could be a little more moderate.

A meeting to discuss the seed situation for the coming spring was to be held here this week, but was postponed until a later date because of road conditions and cold weather.

State snow moving equipment has been busy in this part of the state the past few days clearing small drifts which hampered traffic on the roads. The county equipment has opened most of the main county aid roads.

The cold spell has made inroads on the supply of hay and feed in this section. As there was a larger than usual supply on hand last fall, it is not anticipated there will be any shortage the coming spring.

The matter of setting up a plan for handling of the Old Age Pension Act in this county, which becomes effective March 1st, is to be acted upon by the county board at a special meeting to be held soon.

Manford Dahle, medical student at the University of North Dakota, passed his spring examinations with flying colors this week. He will finish at North Dakota the coming summer and intends to enroll at Rush Medical school at Chicago next fall.

While cold weather has prevailed here for over three weeks, this section was fortunate in escaping the terriffic blizzard which swept North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, and the southern part of this state last week-end. A small amount of snow fell here, but there was little or no wind most of the time.

The mercury went above the zero mark today for the first time in several weeks. A light snow fell during the day. If a brisk wind sets in before the snow has a chance to pack, many side roads will become impassable for auto traffic. Some difficulty was experienced by the school buses in making their routes today.

SCHOOL BOARD PROCEEDINGS

Board of Education of School Dist. 102, held its postponed regular meeting Wednesday evening, Jan. 22, 1936, at 8 P. M.

All members present except Mrs. N. Beebe and H. F. Hanson. Mrs. Eleanor Hansen presided.

Minutes of last regular and special meetings approved as read.

On motion the following bills were allowed:

Art. Peterson, 15 cords wood	$ 41.25

—42 HERE YESTERDAY

Those who were of opinion that the cold spell was about over, were rudely jarred Wednesday morning when they discovered the mercury was down to 42 below zero. This makes the fourth week the mercury has been in sub-zero depths, and weather forecasts do not promise any early change. There is a good supply of coal on hand with local dealers, and a plentiful supply of wood can be secured in this vicinity so there is no danger of suffering from lack of fuel.

DECLAM CONTEST HERE ON TUESDAY

The subdistrict declamatory contest will be held at the St. Hilaire high school auditorium next Tuesday evening, February 18, at 8 o'clock, Supt. M. S. Graham announced today. Schools competing include Plummer, Red Lake Falls, Goodridge and St. Hilaire.

NRS OFFICE SEES MORE PROJECTS

In anticipation of the largest employment program to be handled by the National Reemployment service this year officials of the district office in Thief River Falls urge all workmen seeking employment to contact the NRS office in person at their earliest convenience.

Contracts approved and awaiting approval for this district by the bureau of public roads and the Works Progress Administration will exceed past construction lettings. A large percentage of these jobs will demand skilled labor.

The selection of skilled workmen will be based upon their qualifications to perform the duties involved. In order that proper selections may be made by the NRS, sufficient information must be furnished by the applicant. Therefore, it is necessary to make personal application at the office. Early appearance will give the office ample time to verify qualifications and facilitate the preparation of employment lists which must be furnished the contractor.

Applicants in Pennington county are again reminded that a representative of the NRS is stationed in the Thief River Falls Auditorium and takes interviews from 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. daily.

SOCIAL A SUCCESS

A crowd of over a hundred people turned out for the old time basket social held last evening at the local hall under auspices of the Women's Club and the B. M. Club. The debate put on by six local young men brot out some interesting facts concerning the question "Is there more nourishment in the hole of a doughnut than in the fragrance of limburger cheese?" Decision was reserved until next party to be held probably a year hence. After this feature was concluded, V. C. Noper of Thief River Falls proceeded to auction the lunch baskets. Spirited bidding prevailed during the sale. Following lunch, the keno stand was put in operation, and dancing was indulged in by those who wished. The entertainment was successful from every viewpoint, and a neat sum was realized for each of the clubs which sponsored the affair.

How to Build up
Bank Credit

The other day a successful business man had occasion to offer advice to a young man starting out in life.

"Son," he said, "as soon as you can, open a checking account in a good bank. Keep several hundred dollars in it and hold it as an emergency fund."

"Don't let your balance get so low you wonder if your checks are going to clear. Make no obligations you can't meet promptly and some day when you want to borrow you'll find your banker more than glad to say yes."

Washington Monument Has Defied Lightning for Years

High winds and electrical storms invariably bring calls to the weather bureau from citizens wondering if the Washington monument is still intact. People wonder why no serious damage has been done to the monolith by the heavy static discharges. Capping the 55 feet of granite is a pyramid of aluminum, 5.6 by 8.9 inches in size, and weighing 100 ounces. This was the largest single piece of aluminum cast up to that time—1884. Except for sporadic strikes which have run down the rods harmlessly, no bolt has ever left its calling card on the face of the column despite the great conductivity of aluminum.

The aluminum tip was placed over the projecting point of an iron rod, to which are attached wires leading to the ground as lightning conductors. The ground wires end in a 40-foot well immediately below the elevator shaft, thus precluding all possibility of damage.—Washington Post.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

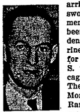
New Federal Reserve Board Takes Office

FIVE of the members of the new federal reserve board were inducted into office with due ceremony. A sixth, Ralph W. Morrison of Texas, was to arrive later and be sworn in. The seventh member had not yet been named by President Roosevelt. Marriner S. Eccles, slated for chairman, and M. S. Szymczak of Chicago, were holdovers. The others besides Morrison are Ronald Ransom, Atlanta banker; John McKee of Ohio, former chief bank examiner for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Joseph A. Broderick of New York.



Marriner S. Eccles

The reserve board, which has been called "a supreme court of banking," has powers unparalleled in American financial history. Among these is authority to double present margins that member banks are required to maintain against deposits; the dominant voice on the open-market committee—which charts the system's participation in the government bond market, and over which it had no authority under the former law; power of veto over the heads of the various reserve banks which insures the selection of a president who will co-operate with the board, and the power to fix margins governing relations between banks and brokers.

President Asks Repeal of Three AAA Acts

IN A surprise message to congress President Roosevelt recommended the prompt repeal of three acts auxiliary to the AAA. These are the Bankhead cotton act, the Kerr-Smith tobacco act and the potato control act. The first named is the only one whose enforcement has been attempted and its validity is up for decision by the Supreme court. In view of the court's decision invalidating the AAA it was agreed by everyone that there was no value in keeping the three auxiliary acts on the books.

New Farm Program Bill Comes Up in Senate

WHAT is known as the Bankhead-Jones bill for soil conservation, the administration's substitute for the AAA, was given the hesitant approval of the senate agricultural committee by a vote of 15 to 2, although Chairman Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina said he "personally had some doubts" as to its constitutionality. The measure would enable the secretary of agriculture to remove 30,000,000 acres from cultivation and give him even wider powers than he had under the AAA. It was evidently headed for a hot debate on the senate floor.

Dickinson Also Has Program to Save the Farmer

EVERY Presidential possibility these days must have some plan for the salvation of the American farmer. Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, often mentioned for the Republican nomination, now brings out his permanent farm program which he says would divorce the farm problem from "bureaucratic control" in Washington. His plan would embrace erosion control, soil conservation, and restoration of fertility of lands. Administration would be handled jointly by the states and the federal government in a manner similar to highway construction.

Senator Dickinson

The Dickinson program, similar to that advocated by former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, includes payment of the balance due signers of AAA contracts, a higher tariff on farm products, continued corn loans, and extension of farm mortgages at a low rate of interest.

Inflationists Ready for Battle in Congress

INFLATIONISTS in congress, led by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma and Representative Patman of Texas, were all prepared to wage a great battle to force the printing of new money. They were just waiting for the introduction of a new tax program, declaring they would try to block such legislation if it were attempted. It was believed that, if the tax issue were not raised soon, the fight would start over the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgaging refinancing bill.

The forces behind this bill, which calls for the refinancing of farm indebtedness on easy terms through the issuance of up to $3,000,000,000 in new money, had succeeded in getting 215 signatures on a petition to force a vote in the house. Only 218 were needed and its backers were pressing for the three names.

Administration leaders were confident they could defeat the inflationists by a wide margin.

The tentative tax program being considered by the administration calls for 500 millions of excise taxes for subsidies to the farmers and 230 millions of taxes of an undetermined character to "amortize" the soldier bonus in ten years. The 500 millions of excise taxes are not considered "new" taxes for the reason that they would take the place of the processing taxes levied under the defunct AAA.

United Mine Workers Defy William Green

The A. F. of L. president opened his speech before the 1,700 delegates from the coal pits with a plea for co-operation to prevent a split in the ranks of American labor. The A. F. of L., which favors the craft (or skilled worker) unions, had ordered the miners, led by John L. Lewis, to abandon their committee working for industrial unions.

But as he warmed up to his subject, Mr. Green clashed more directly with the views of the miners and the scattered applause which had greeted his remarks changed to boos and shouts of opposition.

When Lewis arose to reply to Green he was given the support of almost every delegate in the hall.

Eastman Plans to Unify Terminal Facilities

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN, co-ordinator of transportation, is trying to wipe out an estimated annual waste of $50,000,000 in railroad terminal operations, and announced that he would soon order the unification of terminal facilities in eleven cities. This, he figures, will save the affected railroads at least $800,000 annually. Mr. Eastman had tried unsuccessfully to have the carriers make the changes voluntarily.

J. B. Eastman

The unifications will be ordered at Worcester, Mass.; Mechanicsville, N. Y.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Montgomery, Ala.; Meridian, Miss.; Freeport, Ill.; Des Moines, and Council Bluffs, Iowa; Beaumont, Texas, and Ogden, Utah.

After the first group of orders, Eastman said that, if necessary, he was prepared to compel "other steps of increasing magnitude," but would "stand aside if railroads are able to produce their own momentum."

Unless extended by congress, Eastman's office will expire in June. He has recommended that it be continued at least five years.

Neutrality Bill Seared by J. Bassett Moore

ENCOURAGEMENT was given opponents of the administration neutrality bill by the severe castigation of the measure by John Bassett Moore, former member of the World court. His statement was presented at a secret meeting of the senate foreign relations committee but was made public by Senator Johnson of California, who doesn't like the bill.

Calling it "a curious blend of homicidal with suicidal mania," Mr. Moore caustically denounced the bill, which would continue the present mandatory embargo on arms and munitions shipments to belligerents, but give the President discretion in limiting certain other exports to peace-time levels.

"The homicidal mania," Moore said, "glares in the proposal to try to starve other peoples who engage in war; the suicidal mania gleams in the proposal to demoralize and destroy our commerce in order that peoples at war may not be nourished by what we produce."

Especially vehement was his attack on the section giving the President discretion to curb the shipment of such war materials as steel, oil and cotton.

Kansas Republicans Offer Landon for Nomination

KANSAS Republican state committee members, the Kansas Day club and many party leaders from the Missouri valley region, celebrating Founders' day in Topeka, presented to the country Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas as their choice for the Republican Presidential nomination. In a speech to the banqueters the governor told what he hoped to do for the nation if he were nominated and elected. Refraining from "substituting epithets for arguments," he offered a program for ending federal extravagance and restoring prosperity.

Gov. Landon

Replying to the query "What would you do?" Mr. Landon proposed relief for agriculture through a soil conservation program with the honest purpose of saving the fertility of American farms and not merely that of providing a blind for further dispensation of AAA checks.

Constructive Suggestions or Complaints: Which Get Results?

First Method Fosters Good Will; Second Causes Annoyance.

There are two ways of accomplishing things which one has to get done. One is to complain that things are not as they should be. The other is to make constructive suggestions and request that they be followed out. The first method is apt to annoy the person conferred with. The second appeals to his sense of justice, and, if the suggestion is a good one and within reason, it is generally heeded. Assuming that, in both cases the thing gets done, in the first instance, annoyance prevails, while in the second, good will is fostered. You will remember the old adage that you can catch more flies with molasses, than vinegar. In other words you can get more accomplished by keeping good tempered and sweet, than by getting annoyed and sour tempered.

Getting Things Accomplished.

It is well to remember these methods for family use, and for civic purposes. It does not mean that one can get things done merely by being good natured. There must be a plus to it. There must be continual effort in the right direction, until the point is won. And when there has been no hard feeling created, and the matter is seen to, there is likely to be a feeling of satisfaction on the side of both parties, each being pleased that a good thing has resulted.

It was by the recommended method that a woman succeeded in getting a bench put on a waiting station platform. She appealed to the correct authorities, telling of the genuine need for such a bench, as tired persons found it almost more than they could endure to stand from ten to twenty minutes, more or less, according to the connection of one car with another at this junction. At first, came a note stating that her request had been noted, and formally thanking her for letting them know of her wish; nothing more, and nothing was done.

A Restful Bench.

It was only after repeated appeals, and continued assertions that the company would be treating their patrons with consideration by putting the bench at the place suggested, that finally she succeeded. And now, not only are her own trips to the city made less tiresome, but hundreds of other persons daily find the seat a blessing.

Another instance comes to mind. Repeated accidents of major and minor severity occurred at a certain city corner, by autos colliding. A woman requested the city to install STOP BEFORE CROSSING signs by the curb at each corner of the cross street. Since her request was heeded, fewer catastrophes have occurred, and there need be none, if only motorists would heed them. She did not complain, but she made a good suggestion in a good way, and won her point to the comfort of all but the reckless.

GIVING CHILD UNKNOWN REMEDIES WITHOUT ASKING DOCTOR FIRST

GIVING your child a medicine or remedy you don't know all about — without asking your family doctor first — is a bad risk for any mother to take.

Doctors and child authorities say health, and sometimes life itself, depends on this.

So — when you're offered a "bargain" in a remedy for your child; ask your doctor before you buy it. Do this for your child's sake and your own peace of mind.

Ask him particularly about the frequently used "milk of magnesia" — about Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. He will tell you that for over 60 years physicians have endorsed it as SAFE for your child. The kind of remedy you want your child to have.

Remember this when you buy, and say "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" to your druggist. Comes now, also, in tablets that taste of peppermint, that children like to take.

Safety for You and Yours

NOW, ALSO IN TABLET FORM

You can assist others by refusing to accept a substitute for the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Do this in the interest of yourself and your children — and in the interest of the public in general.

OF COURSE, you know that children should never drink coffee. But do you realize that the caffein in coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?

If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . caffein may be to blame.

Isn't it worth while to try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too . . . and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods.

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—much pleasanter to take than liquid. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system, and insure regular, complete elimination without pain or effort.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Money Dominates

Washington.—If ever there were a time other than when the nation was at war when money dominated the situation at Washington, it assuredly is now. One can go where he chooses about the government departments, to the White House or to Capitol Hill and the subject under discussion is or soon will be money.

A year or so ago, we heard a great deal about money. We heard of it in connection with an appropriation of $4,880,000,000 — the greatest single peace-time voting of money in our history. And, likewise, we heard money discussed when the President used his power to devaluate the dollar in its relation to gold.

Now, however, the subject of money is discussed in a slightly different vein. The question that is paramount is how can the government get the money it needs. In other words, we are now getting around to the question of taxation, and it is a question that neither the President nor his lieutenants in congress like to face. It is an election year and a tax increase in election year is not what the politicians would call smoothing the highway of a campaign.

Passage of the legislation providing immediate payment of the veterans' bonus brought conditions to a head. The President vetoed the bonus bill and congress promptly overrode that veto. So the President promptly told congress that something had to be done about it; that the only funds the treasury could muster would be by borrowing and that since congress had yielded to the vocal minority represented by the greatest lobby ever to populate the Capitol, it thereby captured for itself a problem of raising the money.

Of course, the President must assume some responsibility even though he vetoed the bonus for the reason that some of the funds which must be raised will go to pay the crop control benefits or bonus resulting from invalidation of the processing taxes and the Agricultural Adjustment act. The President, as well as the political leaders in congress, want to continue that payment and they also want to pay farmers on commitments previously made because they regard them as moral obligation under the AAA contracts. Yet the country is likely to think in terms of the bonus for the war veterans and pay little attention to the smaller amount scheduled to go to the farmers and, indeed, the veterans' bonus is almost six times that which the administration desires to pay to the farmers.

"It's Up to Henry"

There was in this situation a development to which I believe attention should be called. Through many years congress has been an easy spender. Through the same years it has avoided at every turn laying taxes to offset the money it voted out of the treasury. Under the Roosevelt administration the peak of easy spending has been reached and congress has gone along with a vociferous "aye" on every spending proposal sent to the Capitol from the White House. The congressional attitude to which I have referred came up in bulk at the time of the bonus vote. Every time a bonus opponent inquired where the government would get the money to pay the two and one-half billion to the veterans, the answer from the bonus supporters was, in effect, "It's up to Henry."

I can recall a familiar slogan, current when I was a boy, that was used always when some one desired to shift responsibility—to pass the buck. It was "let George do it." In the bonus controversy, Senator Bankhead, Democrat of Alabama, was the first member of congress whom I heard say "It's up to Henry." He meant that the job of raising the money belonged to Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury, but Senator Bankhead spoke more than his own feelings when he made the statement. He put into words a thought which permeated the minds of a vast majority of unthinking representatives and senators.

Perhaps I should not say unthinking because those men were, in truth, thinking very deeply. Their thoughts, instead of turning to song in the spring, were turning to votes in November. That was the reason for passage of the bonus. Senators and representatives seeking re-election were afraid to go into the battle for nomination and re-election this summer and have war veterans drag out the skeleton of a vote in opposition to immediate payment of the bonus.

It will be a long time before those who voted for the bonus can live it down. A keen political maneuver has something in it that calls for admiration but an obvious political maneuver such as was the passage of the bonus did not give any reason for commendation except, perhaps, the justification that if the Roosevelt administration was committed to passing out hundreds of millions of dollars on boondoggling and other more or less useless projects, then the war veterans were entitled to be paid now the sums which congress promised them would be paid in 1947. That really is a powerful argument but if Roosevelt supporters make that argument they are at the same time damning the New Deal spending policies, so I fancy that such an argument will be rarely advanced.

May Be No Tax Bill

It is entirely probable that there will be no tax bill this year unless the President's letter to Speaker Byrns pointing out the necessity for raising revenue causes an unheard of number of senators and representatives to do a flip-flop. No imagination is required to see that a representative or senator is in a tough spot when he goes back home asking the suffrage of his constituents and must tell them at the same time that he added to the tax burden which they must pay.

Well, if that be true, how is "Henry" going to get the money? It will have to be borrowed and it will have to be borrowed on government bonds which add up into an increasing government deficit. It means that instead of a deficit of around three billions in the next fiscal year, the treasury will be confronted with a deficit of more than five billions and the public debt, in the meantime, will have been correspondingly increased. It means, in addition, that the banks of the country will have to pile more government bonds on top of the government bonds they have thus far absorbed in financing a policy of spending our way out of the depression.

The tragedy of the situation in congress that brought about Senator Bankhead's remark of "it's up to Henry" is that it indicates that congress has been looking upon the treasury as a source of revenue. It is not and it never has been. Government is nonproductive. It can get funds only by taxation, by taking them away from the people—or by borrowing and if it borrows it has to pay back. In either event, new taxation must come and if congress doesn't have the nerve to pass tax legislation in this session, it must lay taxes in the next session.

Campaign Starts Early

The newspapers throughout the country have been full of reports concerning the early start of the political campaign. The Al Smith speech, coming from the man who made it, brought about a sudden expansion in the political fire. It really opened up the fight and henceforth we are due to be surfeited with this claim or that, this charge and that denial or countercharge, as the various leaders marshal their forces.

Thus far, in addition to President Roosevelt's Jackson day speech to the $50-a-plate diners and Mr. Smith's Liberty league dinner outburst, we have had active campaigning by former President Hoover, by Governor Talmadge of Georgia, by Senator Borah, the Idaho Republican; by Governor Landon, the Kansas Republican, and by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, who spoke in reply to Mr. Smith. Others are in the offing for the Republican and Democratic national committees are engaging radio times in a big way.

As speeches and statements increase in number, and as fanfare grows louder, I find myself getting a bit callous to them all. I have been wondering whether the American people have lost their sense of humor completely, because the situation really has a humorous side. Unless the people's sense of humor has been dreadfully seared, it seems to me they ought to be highly amused over ridiculous statements now being made on one side of the fence or on the other. Take, for instance, Mr. Roosevelt's handwritten bonus veto message. It presented something a bit unusual because in my time in Washington it had happened only once before that a President vetoed a bill with a handwritten message to congress. Of course, it was intended to be dramatic—and it was. But the point is this: A year ago when congress passed the bonus the President made a personal appearance in the halls of congress and read his own veto message. He made his vigorous fight and he rallied his supporters in line to sustain his veto. There has been so much talk around Washington since the handwritten message went to congress that the President really was not vigorously opposing passage of the bill over his veto that I am coming to believe that was true. In other words, he thought that immediate payment of the bonus was wrong but he had a weather eye out for the forthcoming campaign and the votes the bonus might bring.

Then consider the activity of Senator Borah. I believe the Idaho senator is too smart to feel that he can be the Republican nominee against Mr. Roosevelt, but he is going through all manner of gyrations just the same. He has purposes and objectives in mind, obviously, but they are not the Republican Presidential nomination as he leads his various audiences to infer. It is to be recalled that Senator Borah has not at any time actually said he was a candidate. We have also the circumstance of Senator Robinson replying to Al Smith over the same radio and through substantially the same number of broadcasting stations.

Staples—Twenty-five guests were routed from their rooms at a hotel here by smoke from a fire which destroyed an adjoining grocery building.

Albert Lea—Mrs. Nellie Roach, 52, who apparently went into a rural church to pray was found frozen to death when the janitor opened the church for mass.

Virginia—It was 27 below zero here on election day when Oscar Tamte was declared the new mayor. It was discovered that 6,186 of the town's 6,848 registered voters cast ballots during the day.

Clinton—Water sold for a nickel a glass during the extremely cold weather here. A water main burst and the village's supply was cut off for two days. Water on hand was sold at a premium.

Hutchinson—Charter members of the Gopher Campfire club, statewide organization of sportsmen were honor guests at the club's twenty-fifth midwinter dance and frolic at the national guard armory here.

Duluth—Local opposition to plans of the state department of conservation to remove deer from Itasca State Park resulted in the abandonment of the project, E. V. Willard, commissioner of conservation announced.

St. Paul—State taxation policies in Minnesota resulted in decision by the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company of St. Paul to establish a branch factory at Detroit, Michigan instead of continuing expansion of a rapidly growing business here.

Crookston—T. G. Glesne of Underwood Otter Tail county, won the grand championship of the open classes of corn at the Red River Valley Winter shows and his 20-year-old son, Anton, won grand championship of the 4-H Corn club classes.

Cloquet—A $3,000,000 plant will be boarded up, it was decided, and 800 men and women must look elsewhere for work as a result of failure to reach an agreement in the three-month-old labor dispute involving the Berst-Forster-Disfield match plant here.

Rochester—Treatment of Governor Floyd B. Olson in St. Mary's hospital, will be completed February 23, his secretary, Herman Aufderheide, announced. This will permit the Governor's return in time for a meeting of the state pardon board March 16, 17 and 18.

Hewitt—Fire swept through a lumber yard and coal shed here, with an estimated loss of $10,000. Fire departments from Hewitt and Bertha, handicapped by 25 below zero weather, had difficulty in keeping the blaze from spreading to the railroad station and other downtown buildings.

St. Paul—Hampered by intense cold, the whole state began digging itself out of snowdrifts that had practically isolated most sections of southwestern Minnesota. The blizzard was reported the worst in 20 years, completely halting all rail and highway travel. Schools in most sections were closed until the blocked roads were opened.

Minneapolis—Dallas Ward, Marshall high football coach, and Sheldon Beise, All-American backfield star at Minnesota last fall, have been appointed to positions on the University of Minnesota football coaching staff. With the recommendation of Head Coach Bernie Bierman and Athletic Director Frank McCormick, Ward will be freshman football mentor and Beise will be assistant to Bierman on the varsity.

Fairmont—Lashing snows and the sting of bitter cold have played havoc with Martin county's pheasant population. Several observers reported birds dead on the drifting prairies. Others described birds helplessly disabled by the storm, their wings cluttered with snow and ice. Lack of cover is combining with a food shortage, sportsmen assert, to jeopardize the bird supply on the greatest scale in many years.

St. Paul—Minnesota counties will be alloted their share of the $7,625,000 state relief fund voted at the recent special session of the legislature, in quotas based on a percentage of the county contribution and the needs of each county, the state executive council has decided. The monthly quotas of state funds will be controlled by a maximum to avoid over-expenditure and will be subject to revision as conditions change.

Minneapolis—A $5,000 model home, to be erected in the city's residence district, designed to demonstrate progress made in new materials and methods of construction, has been announced as a project of the Builder's Show, Home Beautiful Exposition, and Flower Show scheduled for the municipal auditorium March 9-14. The exposition this year will feature a garden of 50,000 blooming flowers, 200 trees, and hundreds of shrubs. With a 50 per cent increase in building expected during 1936, many new exhibitors have contracted for space at the show.

St. Paul—Fred A. Thielen, formerly general sales manager of the Minneapolis Brewing company, has been appointed treasurer and general sales manager of the Yoerg Brewing company here. The Yoerg outfit, oldest brewery in Minnesota, has long been known for its huge ageing caves which are hollowed out of a high white sand cliff above the banks of the Mississippi. Tradition says that these same caves, smaller in size, were used by early Twin City settlers as hiding places during Indian attacks.

There Is No "Bad Luck" in Cake Making and Baking

It Is All in Knowing How, Says Food Expert; a Cake Batter Test.

Have you ever heard a woman sigh, "Oh, dear, I have had bad luck with my cake today?" I always feel sorry for a woman who makes that kind of a remark, because I know what good materials have probably gone into the cake, and how much time she has spent for nothing. I also know that she need not have had "bad luck" because there is really no such thing in cake making and baking. It is all in knowing how, says a well-known food expert.

Here are a few of the "hows": Use cake or pastry flour when possible. In case bread flour is used the mixture may be slightly thicker and may need a little extra liquid. Sift flour before measuring.

Cream the butter and sugar thoroughly to make the texture of the cake fine.

As eggs differ in size and as flour differs in power to take up liquid, it is not possible for a recipe to be absolutely accurate so far as liquid is concerned. It may be necessary to add more liquid to make a batter to proper thickness. To test a cake-batter for thickness: If the batter breaks at the edge of the spoon when held above the bowl, it is too thick. If it runs all the way down without breaking, it is too thin. If it breaks halfway between the spoon and the bowl, it is just the right thickness.

If yolks and whites of eggs are beaten separately, the texture of the cake will be light. If they are beaten together, the texture will be closer, but the cake will keep moist longer. If only the whites of the eggs are used, the cake will be rich and moist.

Although the use of generous quantities of butter and eggs produces a rich cake with good keeping qualities, the amounts may be lessened if the cake is to be eaten at once.

Divide the time for baking into three parts. First part: The mixture should rise. Second part: The mixture should finish rising and begin to brown. Third part: The mixture should finish browning and shrink from the sides of the pan. To test for a thorough cooking, touch the center lightly with the finger, and if the crust does not recede, take from the oven and "listen." When completely done there will be no singing sound which is characteristic of a baking mixture. If it is not done, it may be returned to the oven at once and left for a few minutes with the fire turned out. This test does not apply to sponge cake nor to angel food.

I am giving you one standard recipe. You may change this by adding spice or other flavorings.

Standard Layer Cake.

½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup milk
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Cream the butter well and beat in the sugar gradually. Beat the egg yolks and stir into the creamed butter and sugar. Mix and sift the flour and baking powder together and add alternately with the milk, beating well with each addition. Beat the white of the eggs stiff and fold into the batter. Flavor and pour into layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 25 to 30 minutes. When cool, put chocolate frosting between and on top of the layers.

Boiled Frostings.

2 cups sugar
¾ cup water
3 egg whites

Boil the sugar and water until when tested it will hang from the spoon by a long thread (238 degrees F.). Pour it over the beaten whites. Beat well and place the bowl in hot water. Beat until fluffy. This frosting will not run.

Soft Chocolate Filling.

4 squares chocolate
1 cup sugar
½ cup cold water
1½ cups milk
5 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons butter or other shortening
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cut chocolate into four or five pieces and put with water in saucepan. Stir over direct heat until smooth. Add sugar and milk and bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly. Mix flour with water and add slowly to the first mixture, stirring until thickened. Remove from the fire; add butter and vanilla. Cool and spread.

Alvarado was outplayed thruout the game. Our boys kept the lead first half, but could not maintain it against referee competition. Seven personal fouls were called on the local quint, none against Alvarado. Then with spotting them one basket which the referee gave the opponents, which he afterward admitted did not count, but must stay on the scorebook because he called it.

The boys showed good sportsmanship by taking the unfair treatment from the referee without quibbling, but they would like another game with Alvarado. Final score was 19 to 15. Jacobson, Huff and Nelson made the scoring points. Carter made a field goal in the few minutes he played.

Mr. Berger has appeared on the Orpheum Circuit a number of years, and is originator of many of the tricks he performs. As this feature costs double the others, we desire good attendance, and can assure all who attend, a solid evening's enjoyment. Admission has been set at 10 cents for school children, and twenty cents for adults. All who are interested in good entertainment, should plan to attend this, the best of the Assembly series.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
Sixth Division No. 881 Law

On January 10, 1936, libel of information was filed in the above-named Court on behalf of the United States against one 1934 Chevrolet Coach, 1934 Minn. License No. B 254-291, Motor No. 4513530, upon a seizure thereof, setting forth the said seizure and praying the condemnation and forfeiture of the property seized to the use of the United States for violation of Section 3450 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (26 U. S. C. A. 1181, 1182).

Pursuant to the monition of said Court herein, I hereby notify all persons claiming said goods, wares, and merchandise, or having any interest therein, to appear before said Court, in the Federal building at Fergus Falls on February 25, 1936 at 10 o'clock A. M., provided the same shall be a day of jurisdiction, otherwise the next day of jurisdiction thereafter, at which time and place the process will be returnable and the trial had, and to interpose their claims and allegations, or they will be defaulted and said property condemned.

Dated February 6, 1936.

JOHN J. FARRELL,
United States Marshal.

George F. Sullivan,
United States Attorney.

Ordered, That the above Notice of Seizure be published February 13th and 20th, 1936, in The Spectator, a newspaper published and printed at St. Hilaire, Pennington County, in the State and District of Minnesota.

Dated February 6th, 1936.

RED LAKE FALLS DECLAIMERS WIN

St. Hilaire entertained the Declamation teams of Red Lake Falls, Plummer and Goodridge on Tuesday evening this week at the sub-district declamatory contest which was previously scheduled to be held at Plummer. Red Lake Falls took first in each of the three divisions, Plummer was placed second, St. Hilaire third, and Goodridge fourth places.

Misses Olson and Tandberg and Mr. Montague of the English department of Thief River Falls high school were the judges.

A large crowd attended, there being about seventy-five persons present from out of town. Lunch was served after the contest to contestants, superintendents and coaches of the visiting teams.

There was a fine showing of talent and the judges said many of the contestants were close competitors. The winners will go to the district meet at Warren Tuesday, Feb. 25.

FORMER RESIDENTS TO MEET MARCH 21

At a meeting held recently at Curtis hotel at Minneapolis, it was decided to have the annual re-union of former residents of St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls communities at the Curtis Hotel on Saturday, March 21st at 8:00 P. M. All former residents of both Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire, who now reside in the Twin Cities area, as well as people in the two towns mentioned who may be interested in meeting old friends and former neighbors, are cordially invited to attend the reunion. There will be entertainment, dancing and refreshments. The committee states 35 cents per person will be charged to help defray expenses.

Ben Berger, Master Magician, will appear at the school assembly tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Berger comes recommended as a magician of unusual ability. He will give a complete program of seemingly impossible feats of magic. No one should fail to see the famous entertainer.

WM. HOUSEMAN KILLED

Word was received here Wednesday, says the Red Lake Falls Gazette, of the tragic death of William Houseman, former Red Lake county resident, who was accidently killed by a falling tree near his home at Delhi. He was born in the southern part of the state and came to Red Lake county when a young man. He was married to Miss Elsie Zutz, June 6, 1920. She survives him as do four children ranging in age from 5 weeks to 14 years.

Mr. Houseman often visited St. Hilaire during the years he resided in Red Lake county, and was well known to those who lived here at that time.

SELECT BOYS FOR FARM BOYS CAMP

The state 4-H department at University Farm this week selected two delegates from each of 85 counties for the 1936 farm boys camp to be held at the Minnesota State Fair next fall. The boys selected from each county have been outstanding in 4-H club work during 1935. Carl Lindbloom of Wylie and Elmer Ona of Thief River Falls were selected to represent Pennington County.

BENSON FOR GOVERNOR

Elmer A. Benson, now serving by appointment as U. S. Senator from Minnesota, this week announced that he was a candidate for the endorsement of the Farmer-Labor party for Governor of Minnesota.

In his statement Mr. Benson said Governor Floyd B. Olson definitely would be the Farmer-Labor candidate for United States Senator. Mr. Benson also stated that it was his honest desire that not one member of the party should feel that either he or the party owed him the nomination. Personal ambition, he said, had no place in the present picture, and he was not seeking the party endorsement because he felt it owed it to him. He thought the party should select as its candidate for Governor a man who, it believes, can best lead it to victory and faithfully administer the office when elected. Mr. Benson further states "Should the Farmer-Labor Party feel that I am that man, I shall be honored to have it place my name before the voters of Minnesota as the Farmer-Labor candidate for Governor."

Your Creamery

The creamery, organized and built by the people of this community because they saw a need for co-operative marketing of their farm products, can grow and prosper only in the same proportion as it is patronized by the people of the community. Work and boost for the creamery. The more you patronize it, the greater your profits will be

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

For the first time in several weeks, the mercury was above the zero mark here Tuesday noon.

This office still has a few copies of the community calendar. If you did not get a copy, call soon as only a half dozen remain.

Norman Bergh, who is attending the short course for buttermakers at University Farm, is expected home the latter part of this week.

After spending several weeks at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Peterson in Wyandotte, Mrs. E. E. Lyon returned recently to her home at St. Paul.

Orville Gulseth, who is employed as night fireman at Oakland Park Sanatorium at Thief River Falls, was down Tuesday for a short visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gulseth.

Gladys Nyland was quite badly frostbitten on her legs while coming to school during the severe cold last Friday. Services of a physician were found necessary, and it was thought for a time there might be serious results, but she now is out of danger and showing continued improvement.

HAZEL

Mrs. Carl Alberg, Helen, Stanley, Cleo and Maybelle Alberg and Omar Seeland visited Saturday evening and Sunday at the Carl Finstad home. —Wednesday visitors at Frank Peterson were Mrs. Anton Johnson, Raymond and Arthur Gunstad.—Mrs. Earl Lyons who has visited the past month with her mother, Mrs. A. Gunstad, who is ill, and sister Mrs. Frank Peterson, left Tuesday for her home in Minneapolis. —Due to the storm Monday, none of the Hazel students attended high school at St. Hilaire. —A Valentine party was held at District No. 6 Friday afternoon. Those present were, Mrs. Clarence Hanson and son Alden, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Erickson and daughter Joan, Mrs. John Peterson, Earl, Alvin and Richard Peterson.—Mr. and Mrs. Ted Prestby of Erskine former residents of this vicinity are the proud parents of a son born Wednesday, Feb. 8th.—Due to the bad weather services were postponed Sunday in the Clara church. No school was held in Dist. No. 6 Monday.

A Valentine party was held in the Hazel school house and an enjoyable afternoon was spent after which lunch was served. Those present were Mesdames Pete Nelsin, Oscar Borgie, Hans Prestby, Carl Prestby, Arnt Wedul, Martin Ellingson, Ole Odegaard, Carl Alberg and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sandberg, Axel Rassmussen, Norman, Raymond, Willie and Hazel Nelson, Phoebe, Mayme and Arthur Anderson.—Arvid Gross of Duluth is visiting with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Thune and family. —Dist. 12 was closed for the rest of the week due to the weather.

Everybody Has to Work

"It's hard to be entirely idle," said Uncle Eben. "De man dat won't work uses a heap of energy dodgin' and gettin' in de way."

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday night at the club rooms in the Bilden & Olsen building.

BRAY NEWS

The fine farm home of Gust Johnson in Sanders township, was totally destroyed by fire between 5:00 and 6:00 Saturday evening. The fire originated from a defective chimney. An alarm over the telephone line brought quick assistance from neighbors who assisted in saving furniture, clothing and other effects. Mr. Johnson and sons, Victor and Archie, are staying at present at the Hegstrom home. Altho Mr. Johnson carried some insurance, loss of the house which was substantial and well built, will be a heavy one. In it were many possessions accumulated the past 40 years which can never be replaced. Sympathy of numerous friends is with the Johnson family in this misfortune.

Henry Carpenter visited with Harry Larson Sunday evening.

Ellen Lindbloom, who is a student in the high school at Thief River, spent Monday and Tuesday at her home recuperating after a recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Larson visited at the J. O. Swanson home Wednesday evening.

A Valentine party was held Friday afternoon in school Dist. 180. Contests were enjoyed by all present followed by distribution of Valentines and then a tasty lunch was served by the district. Those present, besides the pupils and their teacher, were: Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Swanson and Clarence, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Swanson and Margarette, Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Schalz and Donovan, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hawkinson and Lowell; Selmer Olson, Helen, Alice and Clifford; Mrs. Carl Mosbeck, Irene Schneider, Johnnie and Carl Lindbloom.

Habits of Wasp

Air Is Very Light

All substances have weight, but air is very light. A column an inch square extending from sea level upward as far as the atmosphere goes weighs about 15 pounds. This is known as atmosphere pressure.

Only nine days remain before the lion and lamb will compete to again prove that spring usually starts between March 15 and 31 in this part of the country. No need to remove storm sash for another few weeks, regardless of the decision.

The northbound passenger train was about four hours late Monday, the delay being caused by the train having to wait at Crookston for the mail train from south. Altho other sections have been pretty much snowbound recently, northwestern Minnesota has experienced very few disrupted train schedules, and its trunk highways have been open continuously for traffic.

HELP ASKED FOR STARVING BIRDS

Pheasants and other upland birds are facing a serious situation, and probably extinction, as result of the protracted severe cold and heavy snow conditions. Hundreds of birds already have been found dead, and many more will die before spring unless they can be fed for the next four weeks. At a meeting of the B. M. Club Monday night, a committee was appointed to see what could be done to remedy the situation locally. Farmers and others who know of whereabouts of flocks of pheasants, grouse, chickens or Hungarian partridges, are asked to leave such information with M. H. Jackson. After locations of the birds have been determined, some method will be found to feed them.

Anyone in the territory who desires to help in this work either by contribution of cash with which to buy feed, or with feed, may also list with Mr. Jackson. As there is no game warden on duty in this district, the matter of feeding birds must be undertaken by private individuals or clubs, if the birds are to survive. It is imperative, however, to obtain location of birds at earliest possible time or they will become so weakened that feeding will be useless.

Beardsley.—If that old bird, the stork, decides to double up in geting his work done, he can't be blamed very much because the cold weather isn't fit for birds either. Evidence of this doubling up is contained in the news of the presentation of a pair of twins, a boy and a girl, to Mr. and Mrs. Hartwig Peterson of south of Beardsley at the Graceville hospital. On the same day, the wily bird visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gremmels, south of Beardsley, and delivered a little girl. Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Gremmels are sisters.

FARM DWELLING IN SANDERS BURNS

A fire started on the second floor of the house shortly after a chimney fire, completely destroyed the farm home of Gust Johnson in Sanders township at about 5:00 P. M., last Saturday. With help of a couple of visitors at the farm, Mr. Johnson and son managed to get out most of the furniture and household effects from ground floor, but all effects upstairs as well as the house are a total loss. At present, Mr. Johnson and sons are staying with neighbors until other arrangements are made. Only a nominal amount of insurance was carried on buildings and contents so the loss will be keenly felt by the Johnson family.

SEED MEETING HERE FRIDAY AT 2

C. M. Brookins, Agronomist of University Farm, will speak at the club rooms in the Bilden and Olsen building at 2:00 P. M., Friday, February 21st. He will speak on newest methods of testing seeds, and seed prozlems for the coming year. Since there will be a shortage of good seed available in the Northwest this year, Mr. Brookins' talk will be of more than usual interest. All farmers thruout this community are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

MODERN VEHICLE HAS ALL LATE IMPROVEMENTS

Worthington.—A new vehicle has made its appearance in Nobles county which is strictly up to date with knee action, floating power, a miser on gas mileage, practically steers itself, and with flat tires unknown. It is fully equipped with a heater and a full sedan body. Arnold Schulz, farmer near Worthington, admits it is a little slow, with a cruising speed of about four or five miles per hour, but offsets this disadvantage by the fact that it can get into town without being stuck, which is more than some of these 80-mile-an-hour beauties can do until the snow plows have gotten in their work. Seriously, the novel outfit is a strictly home-made affair, consisting of a sturdy bob-sled powered by a phlegmatic farm team, the novelty lying in it being equipped with an old sedan body purchased from the junk heap of a garage. Schulz has removed the lid of a cowl ventilator, and drives the team by drawing the lines thru the opening. Heat is furnished by a coal oil heater in the rear compartment.

Irish Sweepstakes Origin; Great Odds Against Winning

An act to permit a sweepstakes on British horse racing events was passed by the Irish Free State parliament in 1930, eight years after the Free State was established. The drawings are held three times a year in connection with the Grand National steeplechase in March, the derby in June and the Cambridgeshire stakes in October. From $12,000,000 to $18,000,000 is received for each drawing and of this amount about 62 per cent is returned in the form of prizes. The remainder goes to the Irish hospitals, the Irish government, and the organizers of the lottery.

While most of the publicity is directed at the enormous prizes received by American purchasers of tickets, it should be pointed out also that the odds have been figured out at about 400,000 to 1 against winning first prize and 250,000 to 1 against receiving any prize at all—Detroit News.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

I II III

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

DON'T SLEEP ON LEFT SIDE, AFFECTS HEART

Gas Pressure May Cause Discomfort. Right Side Best

If you toss in bed and can't sleep on right side, try Adlerika. Just ONE dose relieves stomach GAS pressing on heart so you sleep soundly all night.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels and brings out foul matter you would never believe was in your system. This old matter may have poisoned you for months and caused GAS, sour stomach, headache or nervousness.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Mrs. Jas. Filler: "Gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. The first dose of Adlerika brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."

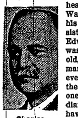
Death of Charles Curtis, Former Vice President

CHARLES CURTIS, former Vice President of the United States and before that representative and senator from Kansas, died suddenly of heart disease at the Washington home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Gann. He was seventy-six years old, and was the first man of Indian blood ever to preside over the senate. He was one-quarter Kaw Indian, his grandmother having been Princess Julie of that tribe who married a French voyageur. In his boyhood Curtis was a jockey, and later a reporter. Having studied law, he became a prosecutor at the age of twenty-four in Shawnee county, Kansas, and was elected to congress in 1892. He was made senator in 1907, was defeated in 1912, and two years later was again elected senator. He was elected Vice President on the ticket headed by Herbert Hoover, and was renominated for that position in 1932.



Charles Curtis

Mr. Curtis was greatly liked by his associates in Washington and his death caused genuine grief. President Roosevelt said:

"I am deeply distressed to learn of the sudden passing of my old friend, Charles Curtis. Whether they knew him as a senator, as the Vice President of the United States, or as the man he was in his own right, his legion of friends will remember him, always affectionately, and will mourn his passing."

Vice President Garner said:

"I was always fond of him. I was associated with him in the house and senate. He was a fine man and a good friend."

Funeral services for Mr. Curtis and the interment were in Topeka, Kan.

Long Newspaper Tax Is Held Unconstitutional

ONCE again the Supreme court of the United States comes to the rescue of a free press. Unanimously the nine justices ruled that the Louisiana law imposing a punitive tax on the advertising of the principal newspapers of that state is unconstitutional. The law was passed by a legislature controlled by the late Senator Huey Long. The court said of it:

"It is bad because, in the light of its history and of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a tax to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guarantee.

"A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves.

"In view of the persistent search for new subjects of taxation, it is not without significance that, with the single exception of the Louisiana statute, so far as we can discover, no state during the 150 years of our national existence has undertaken to impose a tax like that now in question.

"The form in which the tax is imposed is in itself suspicious. It is not measured or limited by the volume of advertisement. It is measured alone by the extent of the circulation of the publication in which the advertisements are carried, with the plain purpose of penalizing the publishers and curtailing the circulation of a selected group of newspapers."

Raskob Sued for Alleged Income Tax Deficiency

ACTION against John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee when Al Smith was the Presidential nominee, and who is now president of the American Liberty league, has been begun by the government for an alleged deficiency of $1,026,340 on his 1929 income taxes. The claim was filed in an amendment to the petition recently filed against Pierre S. du Pont two days before Al Smith had bitterly assailed the New Deal. In the petition, which Raskob described as "New Deal persecution," Mr. du Pont was alleged to have understated his 1929 income by $2,897,832 and an additional tax of $617,316 was asked. In the amended petition accusing Mr. Raskob, it was alleged that he and the industrialist engaged in "fictitious" sales of securities, one to the other, to a total of about $30,000,000 for the purpose of showing losses.

New Farm Bill Pushed for Early Adjournment

LEADERS of congress hope for an early adjournment, by May 1 at the latest, and therefore they pushed the new farm bill forward, trying to get it through both houses by the end of the week. In their desire to get away from the Capital, they already had decided to let the proposed permanent neutrality legislation go by the board.

The farm bill as rewritten by the senate agriculture committee is based on the soil erosion prevention scheme. Some Democrats joined with many Republicans in opposing the measure, one of them being Senator Walsh of Massachusetts. In a statement issued to the press he declared it was a "dangerous" bill conferring "autocratic and blanket authority" on the secretary of agriculture. He said the measure was "neither valid in law nor valid in economics."

Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee said he expected definite word from the White House or treasury soon on the amount and kind of taxes that might be imposed to finance the new farm program.

Speaker Byrns said he could see no reason why the tax measure should not emerge from the committee by the end of February.

He and Doughton insisted they had no advance information on what the administration might propose. Many congressmen who are usually well informed said they looked for a recommendation for levies to raise more than $500,000,000, perhaps through excise taxes.

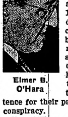
Liberty League Hits at Share-Wealth Schemes

AMERICAN LIBERTY LEAGUE has issued a document concerning plans for sharing the national wealth, calling them "not only impractical but utterly impossible." Reminding that wealth is not money, but land, buildings, industry, railways, raw materials, manufactured goods and metals, the league said the most feasible method of dividing it equally among all the people would be for the government to issue securities against all property, and then to take over its management.

Actual division of wealth might "give a city apartment dweller an unwelcome pig or sheep," the statement added, while the farmer might receive an equally unwelcome piece of urban property. Division also would destroy wealth, the league argued, because separate units of income-producing wealth "would have no value."

Michigan Party Chief Convicted of Fraud

ELMER B. O'HARA, Democratic state chairman of Michigan and former clerk of Wayne county, which includes Detroit; State Senator A. J. Wilkowski and 16 others of lesser prominence were convicted in Detroit of having attempted to steal the 1934 election. Eight defendants in the recount case, which had been on trial for nearly 12 weeks, were acquitted. Two other defendants previously had pleaded guilty, thus bringing to 20 the number facing sentence for their part in the vote recount conspiracy.



Elmer B. O'Hara

For O'Hara, the verdict came as the culmination of a series of calamities in a brief political career. Last November a jury in Macomb county, adjacent to Wayne, found him guilty of bribery in a drainage transaction in connection with real estate deals he had made before 1932 when he entered politics and was elected Wayne county clerk. He awaits sentence under that conviction. After conviction he was removed from office.

In the recount case O'Hara was found guilty on three counts, permitting others to alter ballots, conspiring to permit others to alter ballots, and conspiring to permit others to conduct the recount in an unlawful manner and change the result of the November, 1934, election.

Rigid Policy Announced on FHA Mortgages

HOUSEHOLDERS defaulting on government-guaranteed renovation and mortgage notes will be no more gently treated by the Federal Housing administration than are tax delinquents by the Treasury department. Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator, says there has been a general misunderstanding of this matter, and so he enunciates this policy:

"When a borrower under the modernization credit plan defaults on a loan, the lending institution files claim with the housing administration for the insurance on the loan. The matter of collecting the defaulted obligation then is turned over to the Federal Housing administration.

"In such cases it will be the policy of the Federal Housing administration to be just as rigid as the Treasury department in the collection of taxes. The collection machinery is well organized and, while every reasonable consideration will be given to borrowers in default, the public must not get the impression that the housing administration will be lax in performing its duty.

"There is no reason to assume that borrowers in default will be treated like tax evaders, but rather along the same lines as an individual who is in default of tax payments."

Relief Given Industrial and Farming States

INDUSTRIAL states, such as Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, although they pay most of the internal revenue taxes, receive much less of federal relief largesse than such agricultural states as North and South Dakota, Mississippi, Alabama, New Mexico, Arkansas and Arizona. This was pointed out in a statement released by the Illinois Manufacturers' association which compares the internal revenue collections of the various states with the amount each state received in relief funds for year ending June 30, 1935.

Illinois collected $323,138,933 and received in federal relief grants only $113,185,365 or 35 per cent of what it sent to the United States treasury.

New York collected $672,473,493 and got back $262,868,658 or 39 per cent of what it sent to the United States treasury.

Pennsylvania and Ohio did somewhat better. Pennsylvania collected $244,355,727 and received in relief funds $173,151,832 or 71 per cent. Ohio collected $164,079,273 and received $107,702,953 or 66 per cent.

South Dakota received $27,565,643 and collected only $1,540,795. In other words, South Dakota got back from the United States government nearly eighteen times the amount paid in internal revenue.

North Dakota got approximately $25 for each $1.75 paid in taxes, receiving $25,087,327 and collecting only $1,748,657.

Mississippi received $18,745,417 in relief funds or nearly seven and one-half times the amount collected in internal revenues.

Senator Borah Formally Enters Nomination Race

WILLIAM E. BORAH, the liberal Republican senator from Idaho, is now a full fledged candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination. He formally put himself in the running by announcing that he would enter the primary in Ohio which will be held May 12. That state requires that the candidate shall declare himself in writing, and this Mr. Borah said he would do.

Senator Borah

The senator's statement follows:

"After a thorough survey of the Ohio situation I am convinced that the people of that state should be given an opportunity to express their choice in the Presidential primary on May 12. Under the so-called 'favorite son' plan this privilege is denied them.

"To obtain an expression of popular will it is my intention to place at least eight candidates or delegates at large in the field.

"I shall make a number of speeches in Ohio and present the issues as I see them."

Mrs. Huey Long Takes Husband's Senate Seat

MRS. HUEY P. LONG, widow of the slain senator from Louisiana, took her seat in the senate to complete Huey's unfinished term, becoming the second woman member of the upper house. After eleven months she will be succeeded by Allen Allender, speaker of the Louisiana house of representatives, who was nominated for the regular term.

Mrs. Long, middle aged and comely, said:

"In my mind I have a hazy idea about the things I want to do, but I am not yet ready to announce them. I want to take my seat in the senate and get right to work—I'll need a lot of luck."

Vandenberg Doubts Value of Florida Canal

SENATOR VANDENBERG of Michigan has grave doubts of the economic necessity or value of the ship canal that is being dug across central Florida, and offered in the senate commerce committee a resolution for investigation by a special committee. In support of his move he produced letters from eleven companies operating steamships saying they would not use the canal even if no tolls were charged. They asserted the expense of employing canal pilots added to the risk of damage to ships would offset saving in navigation costs.

Work was started some time ago on the canal, which, if completed, will cost between $140,000,000 and $200,000,000.

Great Britain Rushes Rearmament Program

IF THERE must be another war in Europe, Great Britain proposes to be in readiness. The government is hurrying up its rearmament program, which will be financed by a loan of probably about $2,000,000,000. Plans for the expansion and modernization of the army, navy and air force will be submitted to parliament early in March, and it is said will include mechanization of the entire army. Impetus to the work was given by the latest statement attributed to Mussolini that the Italo-Ethiopian war "may yet be a world-wide disaster."

There were indications that Il Duce was looking more favorably on suggestions for peace, and so some observers predicted that the extension of sanctions against Italy would be delayed. The Italian armies in Ethiopia, however, were continuing their activities, one of their latest exploits being an attack on Dessye by seven planes. For an hour high explosive bombs were rained on that town, which is the field headquarters of Haile Selassie.

And So the First Hunger Strike Was a Decided Flop

Without the least cynical intent, we would point out to you the story of one of the first hunger-strikers, published in the Golden Book Magazine.

"The Widow of Ephesus," relates Petronius, was a lady of so high repute for chastity that women came from neighboring lands to see and admire. When her husband died, she followed him to his tomb, determined to stay with him until she, too, should die of hunger. But it happened that a handsome young soldier was stationed nearby to guard three robbers who had been crucified, in order to prevent anyone removing their bodies and giving them burial. He discovered the widow, and believing it a great pity that anyone so beautiful should be allowed to perish, finally persuaded her to share his food. The soldier was neither ill-looking nor wanting in address, and says Petronius, "you all know what temptations assail poor human nature after a hearty meal." We leave you to finish the story for yourself.

Don't Guess But Know

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

State of Minnesota,
County of Pennington—ss.

A. M. Senstad, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the County Auditor in and for Pennington County, that he has examined the foregoing list and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is a true and correct list of taxes delinquent for the year 1934, upon real estate in said County.

A. M. SENSTAD,
County Auditor.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of February, 1936.

ADOLF EKLUND,
Clerk of District Court,
Pennington County, Minnesota.
(Seal)

State of Minnesota,
County of Pennington—ss.

I, A. M. Senstad, County Auditor in and for the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the list of Real Estate Taxes in said County remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1936, was this day received from the Clerk of District Court in and for said County and State.

Witness my hand and official seal this 5th day of February, 1936.

A. M. SENSTAD,
County Auditor,
Pennington County, Minnesota.
(Seal)

NOTE: Parties remitting for the above taxes will please add 25 cents to each item to cover cost of printing and Clerk of Court's fees.

Dividing Convention Votes

Many times a certain district desires to send to a political convention more delegates than it is entitled to have votes in the convention, in this way showing special favor to individuals, or providing for a greater number to take counsel together outside of the convention and to decide in which way the votes of the delegation shall be cast. Therefore, it has been the practice to divide the vote. That is, to give to each individual sent a one-third, one-half, or in some cases one-fourth vote. When the vote is counted these are added to make the required number of votes to which the district is entitled.

Tar Base of Many Products

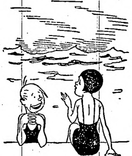
Tar, obtained during the manufacture of gas from coal, is the base of more than 2,000 byproducts, including dyes, antiseptics, scents, flavoring essences, aspirins, and moth balls.

COULDN'T BE WORSE

Weary William—What does "between the devil and the sea" mean?

Silent Pete—It's de same as bein' between a workshop an' a bath room.

TOO SWIFT



He—Come on in, I'll teach you to swim in 15 minutes.

Women More Vicious Than Men, Says J. Edgar Hoover

Take it from no less an authority than J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, the female of the species is more deadly than the male. That is, women are more to be feared than men. Especially does this hold true where criminals are concerned. Women criminals, he asserts, excel in the will to kill. Statistics kept by the bureau of investigation reveal that the percentage of women charged with crimes of violence is greater than similar offenses charged to men. Although only 6.9 per cent of the persons arrested in the United States in October were women, these women showed a greater tendency toward murder than all the males arrested.—Pathfinder Magazine.

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to drench their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never over-alkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Washington.—Five important stones in the New Deal recovery arch have been torn from their moorings now and, from all of the comments I have been able to pick up, it appears that the general situation has been clarified thereby. Two of the major New Deal items—the NRA and the AAA—have been tossed overboard by the Supreme court of the United States and congress, at the request of the President, now has thrown three others into the limbo of unnecessary things by repealing the legislation for control of cotton, tobacco and potatoes. These three with their parent, the Agricultural Adjustment act, represented all that was basic in the New Deal farm program.

New Farm Legislation

The importance of the President's act in requesting repeal of the three compulsory crop-control laws cannot be minimized. Mr. Roosevelt recognized, when the AAA was invalidated, that the other three crop-control laws would be of no further use because they were predicated upon the national law. He recognized further that to remain adamant would be only to permit delay in invalidation of those three laws because they were all headed for an adverse decision by the Supreme court anyway. In seeking their repeal, therefore, Mr. Roosevelt simply took time by the forelock and girded his armor for a fresh start on farm relief legislation.

Where or in what form the new farm legislation will finally emerge, none can foretell. The house and senate will pass some kind of legislation to supplant the laws invalidated by the court or repealed by congress. Necessarily, this new farm legislation will be of a stop-gap character and I don't believe that any of its ardent supporters can tell you exactly what the result will be in so far as its effect upon agriculture is concerned.

As far as the compromises have been worked out, it appears that some of the leaders are willing again to enact legislation directed at crop-control in a semi-compulsory manner. If that is forthcoming, the new law actually will be nothing more than a thinly disguised attempt to circumvent the prohibitions laid down in the Supreme court opinion holding the AAA unconstitutional. In any event, the tragedy in the situation appears to me to be the absence of clear thinking, or else the circumstances we see represent political cowardice of the worst type.

It is to be remembered that in this session of congress more than any other since President Roosevelt took office, there exist a greater number of blocs; cross currents of opinion; partisan jealousy. A great deal of it is in opposition to brain trust policies sponsored by the New Deal but for political reasons the individuals who oppose these things dare not openly show their disapproval of Presidential policies as such. Thus, a consensus has arisen among Washington observers that representatives and senators concerned with directing enactment of new farm legislation are likely to mess up the situation rather than come forth with a definite and workable proposition.

Partisan Politics Rule

The situation at the White House and in congress in connection with agricultural policies probably is the best illustration in a definite, tangible form, of how many important federal policies are being dealt with in a partisan political way rather than, as they should be, in a scientific manner with partisan politics in the background. I need not recall how many pieces of legislation have been put through congress bearing a New Deal tag of "must." Of course, Mr. Roosevelt cannot be blamed entirely for issuing orders when congress is willing to obey. It is a fact, nevertheless, that time after time and with reference to the major New Deal experiments, the legislation has been drafted by men serving under a Presidential appointment in executive departments, the copies forwarded to given representatives or senators and instructions passed along that the administration will take no substitute. It wants the specific measure and in that form.

The result of all of this has been that in numerous cases legislation was passed without more than a few members of the house and senate having even read the bills before they were asked to cast a favorable vote on their passage.

Now, representatives and senators are seeking to dodge the responsibility for their acts. This was shown definitely in the celerity with which congress acted on the Presidential request for repeal of the three crop-control acts named heretofore. I know personally of a considerable number of representatives and senators who were delighted at the opportunity to vote repeal of those laws. They never did like them—after they found out what they had passed. But a politician is the last person in the world to admit his mistakes and the representatives and senators who voted for repeal of the crop-control laws with such enthusiasm were no different than the others. The repeal request simply gave them an opportunity to get out from under a thing which, if the legislation had gone through processes usual and normal for congress, they would never have taken in the first place.

Admits His Mistake

President Roosevelt likely will receive some credit for seeking repeal of the discredited laws. He said if he made a mistake he would be the first to admit it. So, now he has in a way admitted that he made a mistake in approving those laws although his statement concerning the repeal request was that these were useless without AAA

It is to be noted, however, that long before the Supreme court outlawed AAA there was a growing volume of discontent with the principles that law sought to apply. It cannot be that Mr. Roosevelt was not aware of this growing dissatisfaction and that his political advisers smelled a rat because a good many plans for modification had been under discussion privately among AAA advisers long before a Supreme court decision was in prospect. Practical men working with Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis were steadily trying to accomplish changes in administration of the AAA law, and the three others as well, to make it workable. They were confronted, however, with a superabundance of brain trusters who could make a beautiful case in print for their views and during that time the brain trusters had the ear of the President while the practical administrators were left out in the cold.

It is thus that we see a development under the New Deal whereby most of the responsible people are attempting to dodge the responsibility that belongs to them. Some of them are attempting to clean their own skirts, or make their skirts appear clean, by damning the Supreme court; others are blaming our "system" for failure of the theories to work in practical application and still other groups point the finger of scorn at those charged with administration of the agricultural policy, blaming them for the failure. Things like this have developed before in Washington and have died down in due time but I believe that seldom, if ever, has occurred a situation in which the responsibility was so general and the blame so generally denied by those responsible.

Must Cut Borrowing

Washington observers are watching the President's latest maneuvers on government finance with considerable interest. The President, you know, already has told agencies of the government that are equipped with borrowing power that they must reduce this borrowing. He has, in effect, withdrawn from them authorization that would have permitted the borrowing of about $1,000,000,000 during the next year.

During the last few weeks, the Chief Executive has been concerned also with reduction in governmental spending and at the same time with plans to raise additional money. He has presented a tax bill to congress, an obstinate congress. Representatives and senators do not like to campaign after passing a new tax bill so they frankly do not like the idea of new taxes at this time.

It is too early to forecast the full importance of the President's latest moves. There are those who insist that Mr. Roosevelt is making a sincere effort to cut down government spending and to convince the nation that he is seeking to reduce the waste that is naturally attendant upon such a volume of disbursements of money as has taken place in the last three years. There are others who take the position that the President is simply building up a picture which can be shown to the voters when election time comes. They say that Mr. Roosevelt wants to be in a position to point to an accomplished reduction in federal expenditures and to assure the voters that he had permitted only such expenditures as were necessary to bring the country out of the depression.

An unbiased conclusion is that a little of each claim is true. If expenditures actually are reduced, obviously the action will be welcomed by the taxpayers. On the other hand, the ballyhoo that went out from the White House and executive departments concerning the withdrawal of borrowing power was rather unjustified. It was unjustified for the reason that the move was simply a bookkeeping proposition and, further, there was even a hint that such agencies as the Reconstruction Finance corporation and Home Owners Loan corporation had no plans for borrowing extensively during the forthcoming summer and fall.

If one looks into the future in connection with the Presidential program of curtailing borrowing and cutting expenditures, it is rather difficult to escape the thought that a continuation of policies such as have been sponsored by the New Deal in the last three years will force a renewal of these expenditures in due course. In other words, the administration course respecting these expenditures is going to depend upon the results of the November election: If Mr. Roosevelt is returned to the White House and he continues with a substantial Democratic majority in congress, there is no reason to believe that present spending policies will be entirely abandoned.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Monticello—Toboggan milk service was inaugurated by farmers near here after heavy windswept snows buried roads under deep drifts.

Preston—Thomas J. Meighen, 80, banker, political leader and farmer in this territory for many years, died at a hospital at Pittsburgh where he was visiting relatives.

Minneapolis—Figures from the United States bureau of roads place Minnesota third among all the states in mileage of highway improvements completed with federal emergency funds.

Kenyon—Climaxing a civic controversy that started several months ago, Kenyon citizens voted to retain management of the city light, power and water department in a three-man commission.

St. Paul—Magnus Johnson is greatly improved but not yet out of danger, his physician reports. The former United States senator has been critically ill in St. Luke's hospital, suffering from pneumonia.

Mankato—Fire broke out in 15 below zero weather here in the Landkamer furniture store, completely razing the building and for a time threatening the entire business block. Loss was estimated at $75,000.

Minneapolis—Forty men, many of them WPA workers, were jailed and booked as drunks after a score of calls sent police patrols to the Gateway. Payroll checks for WPA workers were issued the day before.

Browns Valley—Snow blocked highways prevented outside help in fighting a fire on the main street here. Because the water was frozen, snow was used to quench the flames, but not before two buildings were destroyed.

St. Paul—Delegates to the midwinter conference of the Minnesota League of Building, Loan and Savings associations here urged active support to a proposed amendment to the state constitution for the removal of the tax levy on general property for state purposes.

Minneapolis—The sixth International Six-Day bike race will be held in the auditorium February 20 to 26. Willie Spencer is in charge again and promises that plenty of the old favorites will be back augmented by several new champions to this territory. The race is sponsored by the Milk Fund.

Jackson—A mysterious farmhouse fire which claimed the lives of two women and two babies is being investigated by the sheriff's office as the wounded head of the family is under guard at a local hospital. Silence of Paul Poelaert, the father of the burned children complicates matters. His wife and mother also died in the flames.

Faribault—The daughter of Mrs. Vernon Fliehler is doing quite well, thank you, after entering the world by instructions given over the phone. Heavy drifts blocked the roads to the Fliehler home, making it impossible for a doctor to get in there in time. Instructions given to Mrs. Fliehler's mother by Dr. C. M. Robilliard, enabled her to handle the case alone.

Minneapolis—The jury which heard the second trial of Carl H. Fredlund on a third degree murder charge growing out of the death of Mrs. Walter P. Busch of Pipestone and her son in the Shokopee highway crash August 11, failed to reach a verdict after 71 hours behind locked doors. The defendant's bond was extended as County Attorney Ed. T. Goff plans on a new trial.

St. Paul—Between federal, state and local contributions, the state will spend $8,450,000 for old age pensions from March 1 to June 30, 1937, Kenneth Haycraft, state director, announced. A total of $4,331,000 is expected from Washington, the state has authorized $2,750,000 and counties will raise about $1,375,000. County boards will get the new application blanks next week.

St. Paul—Removal of carp and other rough fish from Big Stone lake, ratification by the United States senate of a migratory wild fowl protection treaty with Mexico, transfer of deer from Itasca park to avert loss from starvation and a ban on spearing of fish until the regular angling season opens next spring was voted by the state conservation commission. Governor Olson will be asked to issue an executive order closing all lakes and streams immediately to spearing of fish with or without lights in order to protect wall-eyed pike and pickerel. Closing until May 14 in the southern zone and until May 19 in the northern zone, when the hook and line angling seasons open, was recommended by Thaddeus Surber, director of fish propagation.

Duluth—Final action in the campaign to provide high grade seed wheat for northwest farmers was completed when the interstate commerce commission at Washington authorized low emergency freight rates on seed wheat from Minneapolis, Duluth and other points. More than 4,000,000 bushels of No. 1 wheat, held by the federal surplus commodity corporation from the 1934 harvest, will be available to northwest farmers at $1.10 a bushel, plus freight, which may be reduced 50 per cent of the carload rate.

Contrary to a common idea, early marriages are allegedly not the happiest, at least for the American populations. A new chart showing the ages at which men and women should marry if they are to have the greatest chance of happiness has been prepared by Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of social ethics at the Hartford Theological seminary. According to this chart the ages at which the chance of marital happiness is mathematically greatest are thirty-three for the man and twenty-seven for the bride.

However, the chart shows a range of greatest chance of married happiness corresponding to groom's ages between twenty-nine and thirty-seven and the bride's ages between twenty-three and thirty-one.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Playful Elephants Annoy Farmers of S. W. Africa

Efforts are being made by farmers in the Outjo district of South West Africa to obtain some relief from the administration from a plague of elephants. Elephants, being "Royal game," cannot be shot, and the Outjo farmer who sees his fences, windmills and reservoirs being destroyed by them has simply to look on. This, however, is not the only complaint, for now the elephants have taken to chasing the farmers off their own farms.

On several recent occasions farmers, while inspecting their properties, have been chased by elephant herds. Each time, however, the farmers have been lucky enough to be mounted and have managed to make good their escape, but they have become so annoyed that they are now petitioning to be allowed to shoot the raiders.—Montreal Herald.

In loving memory of our dear mother who passed away one sad year ago Feb. 25, 1935.

"One sad year has passed dear Mother,
Since that morn you went away.
And our hearts are sad and lonely
For we miss you more each day.
You were oh so kind and good
For all of us you gave your best
Why we had to lose you, dear mother
Cannot now be understood
You will never be forgotten
Never will your memory fade

WALTER LIGGETT'S ALLEGED SLAYER GETS ACQUITTAL

Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfield, liquor salesman, former bootlegger and ex-boxer Tuesday night was acquitted of a charge of murder in the machine gun killing of Walter W. Liggett, crusading weekly publisher of Minneapolis.

A jury in district court returned a verdict freeing Blumenfield. The jurors were out three and one-half hours, but deliberated only 90 minutes before taking time out for dinner.

Informed of the verdict, Gov. Floyd B. Olson said every available state agency would be used in an effort to locate the slayers of the publisher, who was killed the night of last Dec. 9, as he stepped from an automobile at the rear of his apartment.

Governor Olson, who frequently was the target of editorial attacks by Liggett before his death and by Mrs. Liggett before and during the trial, declared the state "has not rested."

Army Recruiting Station Opened at Grand Forks

Colonel Irving M. Madison, Recruiting Officer, United States Army, for the States of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, announces the opening of a new recruiting station at Grand Forks, North Dakota, on or about February 17th. Sergeant Eric F. Vetter, Company "L" 4th Infantry, Fort Lincoln, North Dakota, will have charge of the station and will be temporarily Located in the Postoffice Building, Grand Forks. Men between the ages of 18 and 35, single with no dependents, of good character and who are in good physical condition are sought for service with the 4th Infantry at Fort Lincoln, North Dakota, and at Fort Missoula, Montana. A limited number are also desired for the 3rd infantry at Fort Snelling, Minnesota. Men who may be interested in the service may obtain whatever information they may desire by communicating with or calling on Sergeant Vetter.

State Ranks High in U. S. Road Projects

Figures compiled by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads show Minnesota ranking third among all the states in mileage of highway improvements completed up to the beginning of the present year with emergency federal funds provided by the National Industrial Recovery act and the act of June 18, 1934. This announcement was made by a highway department bulletin.

In mileage of improvements completed with federal Works Program highway funds Minnesota ranks first. It stands in third position in mileage approved for construction by federal engineers, and in tenth place in mileage under construction.

TWO COUNTY BOYS NAMED TO ATTEND STATE FAIR CAMP

The state 4-H department at University Farm, St. Paul, has selected delegates from 85 counties for the 1936 Minnesota state fair farm boys' camp, it was announced Monday by T. A. Erickson, state club leader.

Two boys have been selected from each county for outstanding club work in 1935, Mr. Erickson said. The delegates, 16 years old or over, will live at the fair grounds during the week and will participate in a variety of events. Pennington county will be represented by Carl Lindbloom of Bray township and Elmer Ona of Norden.

LEECH LAKE FIGURED WORTH NINE BILLION

Walker—Visions of the wealth of Monte Cristo have entered the minds of Cass county residents, following the discovery of gold on the shore of Leech Lake. While loading sand for concrete work, John Olson found something which loked like gold. A sample of the find was sent in for assay, and reported to have about $2.50 worth of gold per ton. Owners of property on the lake now have it figured out like this: Take a front foot on the lake 20 feet deep and 200 feet back from the lake and you have 4,000 cubic feet or 375 tons per front foot, at $2.50 per ton or $937.50 per front foot on the lake, which is $4,950,000 per mile of shore line. With Leech Lake's 640 miles of shore line, we have a value of $3,178,000,000. But the owners of land about the lake own to the center of the lake. The lake contains about 180 square miles. Take the lake bottom to a depth of 20 feet and each square mile would contain 9,240,000 tons and at $2.50 per ton, $23,200,000 per square mile; 180 square miles make the lake bed worth about $4,176,000,000. And some people have been wondering how we were going to pay the national debt! But so far few people in the state have deserted their homes to stake out claims!

Recent Storms Cost Highway Department $800,000 for Plowing

It has cost the state highway department approximately $800,000 to keep its 11,000 mile trunk highway system open to traffic during the almost continuous storm conditions of the past three and half weeks, according to an estimate made by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

"With 400 state plows and 100 rented emergency trucks and tractors going day and night most of the time since late in January, the expense has been a severe strain on highway maintenance funds", Mr. Elsberg said.

"With the 500 units all in operation, the cost runs up to $2,000 an hour. Much of the time the plows have worked 20 hours a day. For every such day the cost is $40,000. These figures are based on an average total cost of $4 an hour per unit operated. The lighter trucks cost less than this, but the average is brought up by the heavy equipment and rotaries. The cost includes labor as well as machinery expense.

"Our snow fighting expense so far this winter is in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, which comes out of a total maintenance budget for the year of only $6,600,000. Our total snow expense last winter was about $900,000.

"If the highway department had not fought to keep the trunks open, drawing heavily on maintenance funds to do so, there undoubtedly would have been general disruption of business and economic life throughout the state and widespread suffering. Without open highways, the Twin Cities and other cities would have been cut off from milk supplies and the smaller towns would have run short of food and other necessities.

SO COLD THAT EVEN TELEPHONES FREEZE

Blue Earth.—The recent cold wave has been described by various writers, discussed by oldtimers, and cussed by nearly everyone, but perhaps the best description is the one "it was so cold that the telephones froze." Such was the case in Blue Earth. Two farmers brought in telephone instruments for repair, stating that they would not ring out on the line. As their instruments were in perfect condition, the telephone exchange manager could only suggest that their ground rods on which the telephones depend for their operation had "frozen out" as the telephone men call it. In other words, the intense cold the last month had followed down the rods and frozen all the moist earth surrounding the rods, so that they no longer made electrical contact with the earth. The farmers were told to make a new ground connection for the phones on a pump or water pipe.

Commissioner Mandt offered the following resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the Board of County Commissioners of Pennington County enter into contract with N. W. Elsberg, Commissioner of Highways for the State of Minnesota, to gravel County Aid Road No. 23, this job to be known as Job No. 36:23, Federal Project No. WPSO 694, State Project No. 57-03.

The above motion was seconded by Commissioner Bredeson. The resolution being put to a vote, that same was duly carried and was by the chairman, then presiding, so declared.

PAUL ROY,
Chairman.

Attest: A. M. Senstad,
Auditor.

February 4th, 1936

Pursuant to law the Board of County Commissioners, Pennington County, Minnesota met at the office of the County Auditor at 10:00 A. M. February 4th, 1936.

Roll was called and all members were present.

The minutes of the meetings of January 7th, 8th and 9th, 1936, were read and approved.

Commissioner Mulry offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED; that the claim due the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, from the estate of Lina Nordlund, for the sum of One Hundred thirty eight and 34-100 Dollars, ($138.34) be compromised and settled for the sum of Fifty and no-100 Dollars, ($50.00).

Commissioner Lee seconded the foregoing resolution and the same being put to a vote was duly carried.

Moved by Commissioner Roy and seconded by Commissioner Bredeson that Ralph Erickson be furnished round trip railroad fare to University of Minnesota Hospital. Carried.

Moved by Commissioner Lee and seconded by Commissioner Mulry that Edward Singer of Highlanding Township be granted an "On Sale" non-intoxicating malt liquor license. Carried.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Bredeson who moved its adoption:

WHEREAS in the action brought by the Northern Chevrolet Company, plaintiff, against Pennington County, defendant, the Court has now overruled the defendant's demurrer in the said action, and has found and determined that the taxes involved in said case are in fact paid through the collection of rents by the Sheriff under a Writ of Attachment,

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that the County Attorney be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to at once stipulate for the entry of judgment against the defendant for the sum of $1,341.18 before the expiration of the stay granted, said amount being the amount of taxes paid under protest by the Northern Chevrolet Company, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED That upon entry of said judgment and the filing of a certified copy thereof in the office of the County Auditor of Pennington County, that the County Auditor be thereupon authorized and directed to issue his Warrant in favor of the Northern Chevrolet Company for the said amount of $1,341.18, said sum to be a full and complete settlement of the above entitled action, and to be paid out of the Special Fund set up by the County Auditor for said taxes.

The foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Mulry and on being put to a vote was duly carried and was by the Chairman then presiding, so declared.

Citadel Begun in 1176 A. D.

The citadel of a gigantic fortress which once commanded the entrance to Cairo, Egypt, from the Mokattam hills, was begun in 1176 A. D. by the famous Sultan Saladin, who repeatedly defeated the crusaders, but at last was killed in a battle with them. It was constructed, according to Arab historians, of stones taken from the smaller pyramids of Giza. The Mohammed Ali Mosque which is built on the Citadel, was begun in 1824 by Mohammed Ali, great-grandfather of King Fuad of Egypt, and completed about 20 years later

Republican Convention Scheduled for April 11

A formal call for the Republican state convention April 11 to select four delegates at large to the national convention was sent out Monday from St. Paul. At the same time State Senator Roy F. Crowley announced opening of headquarters for a Landon for president campaign in the state. Crowley is chairman of the group supporting Governor Landon of Kansas.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Sixth Division No. 881 Law

On January 10, 1936, libel of information was filed in the above-named Court on behalf of the United States against one 1934 Chevrolet Coach, 1934 Minn. License No. B 254-291, Motor No. 4513530, upon a seizure thereof, setting forth the said seizure and praying the condemnation and forfeiture of the property seized to the use of the United States for violation of Section 3450 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (26 U. S. C. A. 1181, 1182).

Pursuant to the monition of said Court therein, I hereby notify all persons claiming said goods, wares, and merchandise, or having any interest therein, to appear before said Court, in the Federal building at Fergus Falls on February 25, 1936 at 10 o'clock A. M., provided the same shall be a day of jurisdiction, otherwise the next day of jurisdiction thereafter, at which time and place the process will be returnable and the trial had, and to interpose their claims and allegations, or they will be defaulted and said property condemned.

Dated February 6, 1936.

JOHN J. FARRELL,
United States Marshal.

George F. Sullivan,
United States Attorney.

Ordered, That the above Notice of seizure be published February 13th and 20th, 1936, in The Spectator, a newspaper published and printed at St. Hilaire, Pennington County, in the State and District of Minnesota.

Dated February 6th, 1936.

MATTHEW M. JOYCE,
Judge.

STOCK SHIPPERS ANNUAL MEETING

A large number of people from all sections of the surrounding community were in the village Monday for the annual meeting and election of officers of the St. Hilaire Shipping Association. Most of the time at the meeting was taken up in discussion of mutual problems of the shippers.

Annual reports show the association enjoyed a very successful year during 1935, and indications point to even better business the coming year.

As efforts of the officers met with approval of all concerned, they were all re-elected for the coming year. Following the meeting, the board selected Ed Engh as manager for the coming year.

After the meeting, all members of the association and friends were served lunch by the Mission Ladies Aid.

Peterson-Cariveau

Monday morning at 10 o'clock occurred the marriage of Miss Stella Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Peterson of this village, to Mr. Edward Cariveau of East Grand Forks. The ceremony took place at East Grand Forks with Rev. Klenkenhammer officiating.

The couple was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Marjorie Cariveau, and by the bride's sister, Mrs. Agnes Hofstad, and by Earl Cariveau and Walter Cariveau, brother and cousin, respectively, of the groom.

The bride wore a white satin gown and carried a boquet of pink carnations. Following the ceremony, the newlyweds motored here and were guests of honor at a wedding dinner served at the home of the bride's parents. That evening a wedding dance was given at the Eagles Hall at East Grand Forks.

Mr. and Mrs. Cariveau will make their home at Grand Forks where he is employed. Friends here join in wishing them lifelong happiness.

Miss Alice Skottem, who teaches at Climax, and Miss Marie who is taking nurse's training at St. John's Hospital at Fargo, were home last weekend for a visit with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sever Skottem.

BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

The basketball tournament for schools in District 31 is being held at Warren this week. The preliminary games between teams from Alvarado vs. Goodridge, Oslo vs. Climax were held this morning. Semi-finals will be played this evening, and the consolation and championship games will be played tomorrow evening. Altho the local team is not entered, many of the players and others intend to motor to Warren this evening to witness the semi-final games.

RADIO INTERFERENCE

Much complaint has been made recently about radio interference in the village. If all persons who use electrical appliances such as irons, toasters, small motors, etc., will examine the cord connections to such appliances, and see that there is no sparking or flashing at contact points, much of the interference will disappear. A motor having worn brushes, or an iron cord with a poor fitting plug, can cause much radio trouble without the user being aware of it.

GIVES FINE PROGRAM

Ben Berger, master magician, delighted a good sized audience which gathered at the school assembly last Friday evening. Mr. Berger lived up to his reputation as being a first class artist in his line by giving more than an hour of sleight-of-hand tricks that mystified everyone. A large number turned out to see the performance despite the cold weather that evening.

DEDICATE CREAMERY

The fine new creamery building recently completed at Warren, was formally dedicated at appropriate exercises held in that city last Friday. Mr. Brandt, president of Land O' Lakes, Inc., and J. H. Hay, of the state dairy and food department, were the principal speakers.

Lester Olsen, manager of the local creamery, motored Tuesday afternoon to Thief River Falls and attended the annual meeting of buttermakers and directors of creameries in Districts No. 14 and 17.

PREDICTS HIGHWAY JOBS THIS SPRING

In anticipation of much highway and building construction the coming season all persons in Pennington county who are without work, and who have had previous experience in the skilled and semi-skilled classes, are requested to contact the National Re-employment office at Thief River Falls between 8:00 A. M. and 5:00 P. M., on any week day.

In addition to all classes of road construction workers, carpenters, bricklayers and tenders, painters, roofers, concrete finishers and stationary hoist operators, as well as domestic help of different kinds will be in demand. All persons having trucks in good condition equipped for gravel or dirt hauling, should notify the employment office to that effect.

AUTHORITY ADVISES ON SEED PROSPECTS

Bangs disease testing, which has been carried on in Pennington county herds this winter by Dr. L. R. Twete was suspended last week owing to poor traveling conditions, and will be resumed when the roads are opened up again, it was announced this week.

Almost 38 per cent of 34,000 cattle herds in Minnesota tested for Bangs disease since August, 1934, have contained reactors, Dr. W. J. Fretz, St. Paul, federal veterinarian, in charge of state disease control reported. Of about 534,000 cattle which have been tested, about 63,000, or almost 12 per cent, have reacted, he said.

Frigid temperatures and snow-blocked roads have prevented the 200 resident Minnesota veterinarians and 20 traveling veterinarians working out of Dr. Fretz' office from continuing their work in the last few weeks, he said, while some samples successfully obtained were rendered useless for testing purposes by low temperatures.

Dr. Fretz urged all Minnesota cattle owners who have not applied for the service to contact their county agents immedaitely as federal funds for the work may be discontinued June 30.

Personal Property Tax Deadline Next Saturday

The office of County Treasurer John Gullingsrud has presented a busy scene during the past week, with a steady stream of county residents coming in to pay their personal property taxes. Saturday, February 29, is the last day on which payment may be made without the addition of a penalty, Mr. Gullingsrud announced today.

BUILDS DUCK BOAT

Bob Collins who has a penchant for building things, finished a duck boat last week that is a marvel. The boat, which is sturdily built, is made entirely of odds and ends of scrap lumber, and most of the other material used are leftoveds from other jobs. The boat is built along lines of the most popular duck boats, having covered top, splash boards, and also is made so an outboard motor can be used on it. The boat, which is twelve feet long, cost Bob exactly $2.00 aside from his own labor. This should qualify the maker for mention in "Believe it or not."

LANDMARK GONE

The Theo. LaBissioniere residence at Red Lake Falls, one of the landmarks of that city, burned to the ground Sunday, Jan. 13. Frozen hydrants handicapped the firemen in their attempt to save the building. The place was occupied on the ground floor by Lawrence Longley and family, and on second floor by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vollmer. Nearly all furniture and other effects in the first floor apartments were saved, but all on second floor were burned.

DR. BILLINGS IN COUNTY NEXT WEEK

Dr. W. A. Billings of University Farm, St. Paul, well-known authority on all phases of turkey production will be in the county Thursday and Friday, March 5 and 6 to discuss turkey problems, County Agent R. M. Douglass announced today.

Meetings will be held as follows: Thief River Falls

Court house, Thief River Falls, Thursday, March 5, 2 p. m; Frank Lundeen school in Deer Park Twp, Thursday, 8 p. m.; St. Hilaire, Bilden & Olson hall, Friday, March 6th, 2 p. m; Rosewood school in Mayfield Twp., Friday, 8 p. m.

Dr. Billings will discuss turkey management covering breeding, incubation, brooding, disease-control, feeding and marketing. Anyone interested in turkeys will do well to talk over his problems with Dr. Billings at one of these meetings, Mr. Douglass said.

Part of Mysterious East

Through centuries, each recording a fresh chapter in history, the Holy Land has remained part of the mysterious East. No land in the world, perhaps, offers a greater variety of infinite contrasts in climate, customs, modes of life, and religions. Within the small area of the Holy Land a legion of communities and sects dwell, making up what may be called a miniature cosmos.

New York's famous Park avenue is not a street, but a bridge—at least, it lies over the route of a railroad line, which rumbles underneath.

WINTER COURT TERM OPENED THIS WEEK

Winter term of District Court in Pennington county opened Monday at Thief River Falls with Judge M. Brattland presiding. Hearing of court cases will occupy this week, and the petit jurors have been summoned to appear next Monday when hearing of jury cases will start.

The calendar for this term is not lengthy and it is not anticipated the term will be a long one. Among the petit jurors are Mrs. S. M. Olness and Knute Kolstad of this village.

New Farm Relief Law

Washington.—We have a new farm relief law on the way. The natural and logical question is, what does it mean? A parallel question is, what will it do? And, among the cold and non-partisan analysts of the Washington field one also hears a third question, namely, is the sponsorship of any of the numerous farm plans, Republican or Democratic, sincere?

Congress, for the sake of its political hide, is anxious to do right by agriculture. It is attempting to supplant the invalidated Agricultural Adjustment act with a law about which its individual campaigning members can talk, to which they can point with pride.

But there are other and unofficial farm plans bobbing up here, there and everywhere. It seems to be the open season for proposals to aid agriculture. Few, if any, of them are grounded completely in sound practice. Each of them ought to be conceded commendation for some of the provisions they include. None of them, including that which is backed by the New Dealers, is going to completely solve the farm problem because we are going to have the farm problem with us for next year and the next and a good many years thereafter whether we like it or not.

The tragedy of the current situation is that the farm relief plans, taken individually or collectively, constitute—I was going to say a mess and on second thought I believe that is the most appropriate word that can be used. Throughout the administration's proposal for aid to agriculture and permeating every other proposal that has been put forward, whether by statesmen or panacea promoters, one can find a splendid collection of objectives that cancel each other. I mean exactly that.

Recognizing the breadth of the statement I have just made, evidence seems to be necessary. Let us look at these various plans, or certainly at the one that is scheduled to take the place of AAA.

* * *

Purpose Is O. K.

First, the administration proposes to take something like five hundred million dollars each year from taxpayers in one form or another to use for benefit payments to farmers. It proposes to use these funds to save the soil, to prevent further carrying away of productive elements in our soil by continued cropping. New Dealers describe the purpose as prevention of erosion.

With that purpose, it seems to me there can be no quarrel. Ever since the successive portions of our country were settled and the forest coverings removed, soil has been subject to erosion by rain, by flood and by wind. The Department of Agriculture says that the top soil of probably fifty million acres has been destroyed in that manner. It would seem, then, that it was high time our government was finding ways to stop it.

Admitting the soundness of this phase of the program, one then must turn to another phase that is not written into law but results from it. If the fertility of soil is improved, is it not natural then that there should be an increase in production? And if there is an increase in production, is it not logical further that we may find ourselves developing a huge surplus of commodities from the farm—and with no foreign market? The answer obviously is, yes.

So, we find these two circumstances in the administration farm bill, proposed, even driven, by that group of New Dealers who, until a few months ago, were declaring here, there and everywhere that to maintain price we must have scarcity of production. That theory was basic in the AAA and was carried out to the furthest by Secretory Wallace and Administrator Chester Davis.

I know of no one with a superintelligence sufficient to enable him to picture the result of this combination nor have I heard any argument that was convincing to me, reconciling the previous policy under AAA with that now projected in the new farm relief plan.

* * *

Must Pay Benefits

There seems to be no doubt among students of the farm problem that a subsidy, whether by that name or some trick phrase, for agriculture cannot be avoided. Some way, somehow, money is going to be taken out of the federal treasury to pay benfits, subsidies, to the farm population. I do not know whether anyone can predict where such a policy will lead as a long-term national program. Political figures seem to be content with a temporary solution, something to get farm votes. In all of the debate that has moved through the ventilators of the house and senate chambers, discussion of the farm problem on a long-term basis has been noticeably absent.

This fact is just as true when anti-New Deal farm programs are subjected to a searching analysis as is the administration's plan itself. It applies to the proposal of an export bounty, offered by Senator McNary, senate Republican leader; to the plan of George Peek, former AAA administrator, to the piecemeal presentations of Senator Borah, Idaho Republican Presidential prospect or to the ideas advanced by Senator Dickinson, Iowa Republican or any of the others.

Since it seems established that the subsidy idea will and must be kept as a part of any farm policy, the problem is narrowed down to the question of how it will be administered. Each plan provides machinery—political jobs—for administration. That fact, however, would seem to guarantee inefficiency rather than efficiency in administration. Each of the plans obviously must reach into nearly every county in the United States and the experience gained from AAA administration forces the conclusion, regretful as it is, that no efficient means for administration has been suggested.

An unbiased investigation of the whole situation, as far as I have been able to make it, prompts me to say that until partisan politics is eliminated from farm relief considerations, farm aid is going to continue in a mess. Perhaps it is a character of our system of government that the condition exists, but whatever the reason may be, I am convinced that there ought to be a distinction between the giving of a subsidy as such and the giving of a subsidy to accomplish other purposes. I mean by that if we are to have a subsidy, let us not get it all mangled up with a lot of prescribed conditions which bind the farmer hand and foot. I am one of those who believe that the average farmer is better equipped to solve his own problem than are his professional leaders who call themselves heads of farm organizations or the politicians who prate about the farmer and think only in the terms of his voting number. So I say until the farm problem can be separated from politics and until it can be separated from theories of regimentation and crop-control and binding the farmer by a lot of conditions, there will not be any effective solution for the farm problem.

GraftersTake Their Toll

Several years ago, when the present work-relief policy was young, a reader wrote me a rather critical letter because I made the statement that crookedness was bound to crop into administration of the relief programs. My prediction was predicated not upon any clairvoyance or ability as a soothsayer but upon a knowledge of the difficulty that necessarily harasses the management of a far-flung organization. It was predicated as well on an understanding that there was no way on earth to keep politicians and visionaries out of these organizations. I had no apology to make to that reader then but I do have the privilege of boasting just a bit since administrative heads of these organizations in Washington have been put to the necessity of cleaning up one dirty problem after another. It has happened in countless places, not with the consent of the ruling authorities, that petty grafters have crept in, have taken their toll.

Now, however, evidence is seeping through to the top in record form, of another danger in the attempted management of so many different groups from a central office in Washington. The best illustration of this that I have seen comes from New York where the local relief organization has a "writers' project" in operation. Just at this time the local New York authorities, with the assistance of Washington headquarters, are trying to find out whether radicals, many of them of foreign birth, have taken charge of the New York "writers' project."

One man, Samuel McCoy, assistant director, has been dismissed. He has charged that reds are in control and that they are taking up their time proselyting and seeking new members of a Communistic organization.

Against his charges, those he attacked countered with accusations that McCoy has continuously sought to promote Fascism among the writers.

It is an unhappy thing to occur. Here we have a paternalistic federal government seeking to provide people with work and some measure of compensation for that work, and we see a political problem injected into it. I do not know what the end will be, nor is it pertinent to this discussion. The point is, after all, that it represents, indeed it proves, the futility of attempting to run all of these things from Washington. Those who favor the old idea of states' rights certainly cannot want for ammunition in defense of their beliefs.

"Hero" Criminals

Popular interest in criminals long before the present day has gone to the extent of making heroes of murderers and thieves. In 1754 Rev. Mr. Villettte, of London, described a sermon he had heard by a street preacher praising the remarkable skill with which Jack Sheppard, a notorious thief, had escaped from jail and "manfully burst his fetters asunder." Sheppard, as well as Dick Turpin, died in his neatest attire, and the execution of both was just the theatrical show the crowd expected.

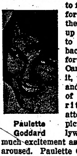
PEOPLE who went to the opening of Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times" in New York are just beginning to recover from the mauling they got on the way in. Nobody who hasn't faced one of the mobs that gather for these big movie openings can imagine what they're like. Policemen try their best to force a way through for ticket holders; they ride their horses up on the sidewalk, to push the crowd back, and it surges forward again. Eddie Cantor never did make it, that opening night, and neither did some of the other celebrities scheduled to attend. The Chaplin picture opened in Hollywood with quite as much excitement as the New York one aroused. Paulette Goddard was there, in the last row—she's Charlie's new leading lady, remember, and this was her first big picture. But she ducked out before it was over, to avoid being surrounded by enthusiastic friends. Probably felt that she'd rather wait and see what the critics had to say.



Paulette Goddard

Everybody's predicting that Twentieth Century-Fox has the picture that will break all box office records for 1936. It didn't cost much, as movies go, and there is no great screen star in the cast. But—the Dionne quintuplets are starred, and that's why "The Country Doctor" is going to make money.

It looks as if Jimmie Cagney would succeed in not making any more pictures for Warner Brothers—whether he'll be free to make pictures for some one else isn't settled yet. But Errol Flynn is going into "Robin Hood" in place of the two-fisted James, who, it's said, simply can't stand some of his present bosses.

Ginger Rogers danced for President Roosevelt before his birthday broadcast, but couldn't do her best because of the gown she was wearing and the fact that the music wasn't quite right. Nevertheless, he said he liked it.

She was in Washington to attend the birthday balls—she went to six of them; thus she helped the balls, the picture she's just finished with Fred Astaire, "Follow the Fleet," and the Texas Centennial—she wore the coat of a naval officer's uniform, and she'd recently been made an admiral in the Texas navy. She and her mother were received by the President before he went on the air, and remained in his study till it was finished. And RKO is very proud of pretty Ginger.

It seems that Ed Wynn had a terrible time trying to find some one to replace Graham McNamee on the new series of Wynn broadcasts. He won't be able to say "Tonight, Graham, the program's going to be different," because Graham works for NBC and doesn't want to leave. So-o-o, they tried out a hundred candidates, and finally John S. Young was lured over to Columbia to act as stooge for the gurgling Mr. Wynn, each Thursday night from 9:30 to 10:00 over WABC. The Plymouth division of the Chrysler corporation is acting as sponsor.

Ed Wynn

At the Paramount studios they are so pleased with Harold Lloyd's "The Milky Way" that they want him to sign a new contract right away. But he wants to wait until he sees how the public likes him in it.

Joe Cook is going to make a two-reel film, which is good news for the people who thought he was very funny on the air a couple of years ago.

It's hard to tell in advance how these famous comics will get over when they broadcast. Ed Wynn and Fred Allen are among the few who can go on broadcasting and land in the first ranks when polls are taken. Incidentally, Jack Benny is pretty pleased over having won all the recent radio contests.

Ralph Bellamy—remember him?—has a new five-year contract and is glad to get back to the screen. He's been in business with Charlie Farrell, and doing pretty well, too; their Racquet club at Palm Springs is a favorite haunt of vacationing movie stars.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Who'd ever suspect that Pat O'Brien was once a chorus boy in musical shows? . . . Now Alice Faye wants "brownette" hair instead of platinum blonde; wants to follow Jean Harlow's example and do dramatic parts, and figures that changing the color of her hair will give her a chance . . . Claudette Colbert has finally decided to do "The Old Maid" . . . We're to have "What Price Glory" as a talkie, probably with Clark Gable and Wallace Beery . . . "Anthony Adverse" is finished at last, at the cost of $1,000,000, it's said.

Ground Grip
The tire that makes its own road
With Firestone Ground Grip Tires on your truck you can go through snow, mud, sand, gravel or over unimproved roads. You save the cost and bother of chains
On your car, Firestone Ground Grip Tires will enable you to go through—road or no road, regardless of weather
Ground Grip Tires on farm implements reduce shocks and vibration; you save on repair bills
On your tractor, Firestone Ground Grip Tires will save you time and fuel and give you more drawbar pull

FARMERS everywhere are enthusiastic in their praises of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire — they say it's the greatest traction tire ever built, and so economical. How was it possible for Firestone to build such a remarkable tire? Firestone patented construction features are the answer. Gum-Dipping, a process that soaks every cotton fiber in every cord with pure liquid rubber, prevents internal friction and heat and gives the cord body greater strength to withstand the stresses and strains of heavy pulling at low air pressures.

The patented feature of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread locks the massive super traction tread securely to the body of the tire. This patented Ground Grip tread is made wider, heavier and deeper, with scientific spacing between the bars so that the tire is self-cleaning, yet rides smoothly on improved roads. These patented construction features are used only in Firestone Tires. This is why you get greatest traction, longest life and outstanding performance in Ground Grip Tires. They are the best investment a farmer can make.

Equip your car, truck, tractor and farm implements with new Firestone Ground Grip Tires and save yourself time, money and hard work. See this remarkable tire at your nearby Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store, at your Tire Dealer, or at your Implement Dealer. Remember, when buying farm equipment specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires for greatest efficiency and economy.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Minneapolis—Carl H. Fredlund's third trial on murder charges resulting from an automobile accident was set tentatively for March 2.

Marshall—High winds in southwestern Minnesota forced the highway department to halt all efforts to keep roads open as drifting snow piled in faster than highways could be cleared.

Minneapolis—Incident to the return of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Mrs. Carlyle Scott, manager, announced that the concert tour just completed was the most sucessful ever made.

Lake Crystal—Highway crews here aver that the packed snow is as hard as concrete. Snow ahead of a caterpillar plow was blocked out a chunk at a time, as in quarrying.

Comfrey—William Junke, farmer living five miles east of here, walked to town to get food supplies. On the way home he got tired, so sat down to rest. The seat was the cross-arm of a telephone pole 30 feet high.

Marshall—Despite the snow and cold, 34 consecutive days on which the mercury has gone below zero, firemen have been without a fire to extinguish in 70 days. The last blaze, a chimney fire, was on December 7.

St. Paul—Penalties on delinquent auto license applications went into effect Feb. 17. Tardy motorists must pay 50c extra until March 19 and $1 on March 20. An additional 50 cents will be added each month thereafter.

St. Paul—Every effort to apprehend the slayers of Walter Liggett will be made by the state bureau of criminal apprehension and all other available state agencies, Governor Olson said as Isadore Blumenfield was acquitted of the crime.

Minneapolis—A statewide campaign to improve the quality of wheat and corn seed to be planted this spring was launched by representatives of agriculture, transportation, banking, dairying and the extension department of the University of Minnesota.

Litchfield—The Rural Electrification Administration announced allotment of $450,000 to build 420 miles of rural lines in Meeker county, with current from the Litchfield Municipal plant. The project is sponsored by the Meeker Cooperative Light and Power association.

Minneapolis—Mobilization of sportsmen and other organizations and individuals in Hennepin county resulted in distribution of 60,000 pounds of feed to help save Minnesota game and song birds from the deadly rigors of sub-zero temperatures and heavy blanketing snow.

St. Paul—Republicans of Minnesota will hold their state convention April 11 in St. Paul, according to a formal call sent out to district and county organizations. The call was signed by Thomas McCabe, state chairman; Mrs. Chris Carlson, state chairman, and Leroy Matson, secretary.

Red Wing—Louise Schmidt, pretty 17-year-old Red Wing girl cornetist, was proclaimed winner of an amateur contest by an overwhelming telephone and telegraph vote. Louise was heard over KSTP with 19 other amateurs who were selected from more than 500 in preliminary tryouts by a representative of Major Edward Bowes.

Fort Snelling—More young men enlisted in the United States army here during January than ever before in a single month, the office announced in listing names of 750 recruits. That number came from the Seventh corps area, which extends into the two Dakotas and Montana. February's quota, if met, will exceed the January Mark, for 950 men will be accepted.

Duluth—The state executive council voted $90,000 out of the state relief funds to purchase lands for a recreational park at Minnesota Point at Duluth. The amount would be used for the purchase of 350 acres of land. The park seemed assured as Duluth is prepared to invest $35,000 in the project and $200,000 in WPA has already been allotted. The total cost is estimated at $550,000.

Bemidji—Plans to reduce their number from 150 to 100, and increase the salaries of game wardens, were announced by E. V. Willard, state conservation commissioner. The commission voted to request the state executive council for an appropriation of $50,000 to purchase a square mile of land near Bass lake in George Washington state park in Itasca county.

Jordan—Four trainmen were crushed to death when a crack doubleheader freight train plowed full speed into the rear end of another stalled freight train three miles north of here on the main track of the Omaha road. The collision occurred at 4 a. m. with a rending crash that awakened farmers in the vicinity as the two powerful locomotives pulling the Omaha's crack freight from Sioux City, Iowa, thundered through the caboose, freight car, a coal gondola, and a tank car. The victims all were members of the crew of the speeding train.

Minneapolis—All blind persons in Minnesota, who are 65 or over, are eligible for old age pensions until the pensions for the blind become effective July 1, the state board of control administrator of pensions, notified the Minnesota State Organization of the Blind. The aged blind people are urged to apply at offices of county boards in counties where they live, for old age pension application blanks, which will be available March 1 and after, Ray Boyd, president of the Organization of the Blind said here.

HEART OF CHICKEN IS KEPT GOING 24 YEARS BY SURGEON

The only bit of flesh in the world that grows no older is pulsing with abundant life in a spic-and-span laboratory on the fifth floor of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, in New York city.

Twenty-four years ago Dr. Alexis Carrel, a wizard of experimental surgery, set it going in the glass bulb in which it now lies. Swishing pumps supply it with a steady stream of a red fluid compounded in the laboratory to provide nutrition. Drains carry away its waste products as fast as they are formed.

Each week a portion of the flesh must be cut away, or else it would long since have outgrown its glassy home. Scientists have calculated that, had it been permitted to enlarge indefinitely at its regular rate, it would by this time have covered the earth.

On January 17, 1912, Doctor Carrel took the original piece from the living heart of an unborn chick. Hundreds of previous experiments had taught him the kind of nutrient fluid it needed for perpetual life.

This substance, made of chemicals and gases and some of the constituents of blood, looks like watery mercurochrome. The bit of heart is bathed in it, and steadily the flesh contracts and expands—beats—just as it would had it been part of a real, living chicken.

It has already outlived five generations of chickens, and so far as biologists could tell, it was no "older" than when it first came to the laboratory.

It still acts the same way, increases in size at the same rate. Doctor Carrel has said that it is, in fact, "immortal," so long as the pumps supply it with the necessary fluid.—Literary Digest.

Cornaro Learned Gentle Art of Dying Old at Age of 40

History's outstanding example of the value of hygienic living is Luigi Cornaro, whose serious sickness when he was forty years of age directed his attention to regulating his habits of life. Instead of dying before fifty, as a result of what was considered starvation diet, he lived to be one hundred.

In his eighty-fourth year he wrote his celebrated book showing how he had achieved health, high spirits and an unfailing interest in the life of his age.

Do You Ever Wonder

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

Pennington Receives Total of $34,201 in AAA Benefit Payments

During the period the agricultural adjustment administration was functioning from May 12, 1933, to October 31, 1935, Pennington county farmers received a total of $34,201.44 in rental and benefit payments, according to a tabulation prepared by Anna Dickie Oleson, state director of the National Emergency council. Included in the aggregated amount were $23,021.68 in wheat benefits and $11,179.76 in corn-hog payments. Marshall county, with its large wheat acreage, received during the same period, a total of $335,827.08 from the AAA, while the entire state received $31,052,814.60.

Former Residents of City Plan Reunion in Minneapolis March 21

A joint annual reunion of former residents of the Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire communities will be held Saturday evening, March 21, at the Curtis hotel in Minneapolis. Local people who may be in the Twin Cities at that time are invited to attend the reunion, which will be featured by dancing and other entertainment and the serving of refreshments, an admission fee of 35 cents being charged. Members of the Thief River Falls committee include Dr. H. W. Froehlich, president; A. Tanem, treasurer; and Mrs. Theodore Tandberg, secretary; while the St. Hilaire committee is made up of Mrs. Milton Schantzen, chairman; Howard Bilden, Mrs. Sigurd Engh and Miss Lulu Beebe.

BRAY

A number of friends were entertained at the Ruben Rux home on Thursday evening in honor of Harold Lindbloom who celebrated his birthday that day. The evening was spent socially and at midnight a delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Rux. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mosbeck, Mrs. Annie Lindbloom and Carl, Ellen and George Lindbloom, Clarence and Donald Sevre, Henry, Elmer, Emil and Harry Rux, Raymond, Elroy and Robert Ortloff, Eldor and Arnold Johnson, Harry Larson, Lorentz Hegstad and Lowell Hawkinson.

Henry Schneider and Richard and Johnnie Lindbloom were supper guests at J. O. Swanson's Sunday evening.

Mrs. Henry Carpenter and daughter Joyce, are spending a few days visiting with relatives at Dorothy.

Miss Irene Schneider visited at A. P. Hegstrom's on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Olson, Joyce and Vivian, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Swanson, Dorothy and Wilbert, Grace Sevre and Halvor Hanson were Friday visitors at George Swanson's.

Gust Johnson and Arthur visited relatives in Grand Forks Sunday. Mr. Johnson remained there for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mosbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosbeck and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Larson and Lillian attended church services in St. Hilaire on Sunday. The former visited at Rev. Larson's in the afternoon while Mr. and Mrs. Larson and Lillian visited at Richard Larson's.

Miss Hazel Person who has been employed at Crookston during the winter returned home on Friday.

Mrs. John O. Swanson and family helped Margaret Swanson celebrate her birthday on Tuesday.

Anton Peterson and J. R. Larson of Hazel, Herman Ortloff of St. Hilaire and J. O. Swanson were business callers at Gust Johnson's on Thursday.

Lorentz Hegstad, Arnold and Eldor Johnson and Carl Lindbloom visited at O. K. Sevre's on Sunday.

102 STUDENTS TO OBTAIN DIPLOMAS AT N. W. SCHOOL

Commencement Week Scheduled in Crookston Late in March

Plans are now being made for Commencement Week activities which will be held on the Northwest School campus the closing week in March. According to Superintendent A. A. Dowell, 102 students are listed for graduation this year. This will bring the total number of diplomas issued through the school since the first class graduated in 1909 to 1571. Over 3600 young men and women have been in attendance for one or more years.

Enrolment records show a steady increase from 31 students during the first school year 1906-07 to a new record of 394 during the current year. Attendance at the Junior Short Course has likewise increased steadily from 21 in 1911-12 to approximately one thousand during recent years. Other short course activities in which the school participates include the women's short course and the Northwest School Farmers' Week and Red River Valley Winter Shows.

Commencement Week activities will open with inter-class athletic events Saturday, March 21. The baccalaureate exercises are scheduled for the following day, with the declamatory contest to be scheduled for Monday; the superintendent's reception to members of the senior class on Tuesday; the annual music recital on Wednesday, and the senior class exercises and commencement program Thursday, March 26.

With the close of the term, students will return to their farms and farm homes scattered thruout fourteen Northwestern Minnesota counties where they will be available to assist their parents thruout the six months crop growing and harvesting season.

During the past season dormitories and class buildings have been taxed beyond capacity, thus bringing forcibly to the attention of school officials the necessity for added facilities.

New Institution at 'U' Will be Devoted to the Study of Mental Cases

Ending a campaign that has been pushed off and on for about ten years, arrangements have been made for the construction of a psychopathic unit as an addition to the hospital group at the University of Minnesota.

Increase in borderline cases in the nervous and mental field has made that branch of medicine increasingly important, not only in Minnesota but throughout the country, but up to now there has been no provision for hospitalizing any such cases at the University of Minnesota hospital.

The psychopathic unit on the campus would be used to further the study of such cases on the basis of persons recommended for admission to the unit by authorized officers, including the State Board of Control, under which the state hospitals for all severe mental and nervous cases are conducted.

Although construction has been authorized, no provision for support of the new unit was made by the special session of the legislature. The structure, however, will be built at once, with funds amounting to $58,590 which have been provided by the Public Works Administration. Contracts for the construction were let by the Board of Regents at a recent meeting.

FINDS $500 IN CASH IN SNOW; RETURNS TO OWNER

Sauk Rapids—In these times most people complain that money is hard to find, but for Kenneth Meyer, 10-year old son of Alfred Meyer, it seems to be comparatively easy. Crossing the street in Sauk Rapids, Kenneth picked up what he thought was a roll of 'stage money" in the snow. Putting the money in his pocket, he proceeded to the Edson Grocery store, where Mrs. Edson examined the roll, found it was real money, and reasoned that it was no doubt lost in some way by the bank, as people do not often carry (amounting to $500) that much on their persons. She was right. And to say the bank was glad to get the money back is putting it mildly. As a reward for Kenneth, he was taken to a clothing store and fitted out with a complete new outfit, including suit, in addition to a cash reward.

FIRE LOSSES DECLINE; WILL THEY STAY DOWN?

For the fifth successive year, fire losses in the United States decreased in 1935. The total losses in 1930 were $501,000,000, dropping to $451,000,000 in 1931, $400,000,000 in 1932, $271,000,000 in 1933, $263,000,000 in 1934 and $249,000,000 in 1935. Some fire insurance officials look for greater losses in 1936, on the theory that chances for fire are greater when commerce and industry are at work and plants and mills are active.

SEED LOAN BILL STILL PENDING IN WASHINGTON

Conferees Agree to Reduce Appropriation to $30,000,000

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, said Monday Washington sponsors of the $50,000,000 seed loan bill have agreed to reduce the appropriations to $30,000,000 to conform to President Roosevelt's views.

Senator Robinson added the chief executive had agreed that, if the appropriation is reduced to $30,000,000, and the crop loan limited to $200 per farmer, he would approve the $50,000,000 measure in order to permit immediate loans.

Even under the plan agreed to by the President, actual loans can not begin until further action by congress. The measure now on Mr. Roosevelt's desk authorizes the loans but appropriates no money to make them.

Favorable Outlook for Sheep and Lamb Market, St. Paul Co-op. Reports

A favorable outlook for the sheep and lamb markets is indicated statistically in view of the fact that there is a decrease of nearly 5½ per cent in the number of lambs on feed compared with a year ago, and a falling off of 8 per cent from the five-year average for the years 1933-4 says ths Livestock Market Digest, issued by the Central Co-operative Association, farmer-owned livestock selling agency at So. St. Paul.

On January 1, this year, 5,260,000 sheep and lambs were on feed compared with 5,561,000 a year ago. The average number on feed for the 1930-1934 period was 5,692,000 head, and the average for 1925-1929 was 4,448,000 head.

In spite of the reduction in numbers of lambs and sheep on feed over the last few years, there is a substantial increase in lamb feeding compared with the pre-depression years. The number of lambs on feed now is 30 per cent greater than ten years ago and 18 per cent greater than the average pre-depression period for 1925-29.

Membership of State Farm Bureau Reaches Half-way Quota Mark

With less than two months of 1936 gone, the 24,000 merbership quota of the Minnesota Farm Bureau is more than half filled, with 13,694 farm families already enrolled on the paid membership list of the Minnesota and the American Farm Bureau Federation. As soon as snow-blocked roads open up, additional thousands of memberships will be collected and transmitted, says A. G. Mereness, director of organization.

The 1936 quota calls for an enrollment of at least one out of five farm families. In some counties this figure has already been passed. Taking into account the financially-distressed condition of agriculture, with many farmers below the poverty line, a 20 per cent sign-up in an organization that helps non-members as well as members is considered a high mark of achievement. The main factor mitigating against a much higher enrollment is the general feeling among farmers that the Farm Bureau will work for them, whether they join it or not, Farm Bureau officers declare.

Officers of the federation point out, however, that Farm Bureau members receive enough specific advantages to more than repay them for the dues they advance.

Nationally the Farm Bureau was active this month in working for passage of the soil conservation act, to replace the AAA, also in working to block imports for foreign farm produce. In Minnesota the organization is doing much work on the Rural Electrification program, and at the present time is helping to handle a difficult seed situation.

KNIGHTS OF GRIP FORM STUCK-IN-SNOW GROUP

Pipestone.—A new order of the Knights and Ladies of the "Stuck-in-the-Snow-Bank" Club was organized in Pipestone, when travelers of the road found themselves marooned in that village with snow blocking roads and railroads. The Knights and Ladies of the road, determined to make the best of their enforced visit, drew up a charter, which was signed by 26 people, representing five states and Canada. Stock in the new corporation was issued to each, dividends payable to themselves "and posterity in grins, smiles, and memories at any time upon the recollection of our experiences." E. D. Starboard of Mankato and H. L. Eastlund of Glenwood were elected president and secretary of the said Stuck-in-the-Snowbankers. The date of the charter was given as the year of the Great Blizzard, the First.

NOTICE OF EXPIRATION OF TIME OF REDEMPTION

Office of County Auditor,
County of Pennington,
State of Minnesota—ss.

TO JULIUS TOSTENSON:

(1) You are hereby notified that the following piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Lots 10, 11 and 12, Block 2, Hemmingsen's Addition to Thief River Falls

IS NOW ASSESSED IN YOUR NAME.

(2) That on the 11th day of May, 1931, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment duly given and made in and by the District Court in said County of Pennington on the 13th day of March, 1931, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year 1929, for said County of Pennington, the above described piece or parcel of land was offered for sale, and no one bidding upon said offer, said piece or parcel, was bid in for the State of Minnesota for the sum of ($40.11), Forty and 11-100 Dollars.

(3) That thereafter, and on the 12th day of August, 1935, the said piece or parcel not then having been redeemed from said sale, was sold and conveyed at public sale by the County Auditor of said County, pursuant to the statute, to an actual purchaser for the sum of One Hundred thirty-eight and 54-100 Dollars and no cents.

(4) That the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of ($138.54), One Hundred thirty-eight Dollars and fifty-four cents, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on ($138.54), One Hundred thirty-eight and 54-100 Dollars from said 12th day of August, 1935, to the day such redemption is made.

(5) That the tax certificate of sale issued to said purchaser has been presented to me by the holder thereof and this notice requested.

(6) That the time for the redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said tax sale will expire twelve months after the service of this notice, and the filing of proof of such service in my office.

WITNESS my hand and official seal this 21st day of February, 1936.

A. M. SENSTAD,
Auditor Pennington County, Minnesota.

F.-L. CONVENTION NEXT SATURDAY

The Pennington county Farmer-Labor convention will be held at the court house at Thief River Falls on Saturday this week, starting at one o'clock. All dues-paying members of the association in the county will be entitled to seats, and each township having no organized Farmer-Labor club will be entitled to two accredited delegates. The newly organized St. Hilaire F.-L. club is expected to be represented by delegates.

MOTOR TO GRAND FORKS

Mrs. M. H. Jackson, accompanied by Mrs. J. Hansen, Mrs. Lester Olson, Mrs. O. Gunstad and Patricia Jackson motored Friday to Grand Forks where Mrs. Jackson visited briefly with Mrs. Louis Giese, who was a patient at a hospital there following a major operation the day before. Before returning, the ladies were guests at lunch at the home of Mrs. Olson's sister, Mrs. Boltman. The ladies tell some interesting stories of the huge snow drifts on the streets at the Forks which accumulated following a storm the previous Tuesday. Dozens of large trucks were employed at hauling snow from the streets and dumping it into the Red river.

FIRE AT BRONSON SATURDAY NIGHT

The Farmers Supply Company building, the Bronson hotel and cafe, and the former bank building at Bronson were destroyed by a fire which threatened the town's entire business section last Saturday night. The loss on the three structures and contents is estimated to be about $25,000.00. A high wind prevailing at time of the fire, made it extremely to bring the blaze under control.

TOWN ELECTIONS TUESDAY

Township elections thruout the county and state will be held next Tuesday, March 10. Owing to drifted condition of most country roads, it is not anticipated the vote will be very heavy in the rural districts this year.

LINNIHAN IMPROVING

Friends of Postmaster R. A. Linnihan are pleased to learn that he was able to leave the Rochester hospital last Saturday. He will spend a couple of weeks at the Mound Park Sanatarium, St. Paul, recuperating before returning to Rochester for another check-up prior to returning to his home here. W. D. Linnihan visited with Ray at St. Paul on Sunday and reports him able to be about but getting a much needed rest after his siege at Rochester.—R. L. F. Gazette.

RED LAKE FALLS DOG DERBY MAR. 14

Red Lake Falls is staging a big dog derby in that city Saturday of next week. Boys and girls of Red Lake county are busy training their pets for the event which will start at 1 o'clock. There will be two events, one for a single dog hitched to a sled, and the second with two dogs hitched to a sled, and ilberal prizes will be given to winners in each. The derby will be interesting, and many from here plan to go down to see it. It is expected that one or more entries will be made by boys from St. Hilaire.

REPORT GAME KILLED

Hunters are again urged to send their 1935 game license reports to the division of game and fish as soon as possible. The license cards are already addressed to the game and fish division. All that is necessary is to make out the report of game taken and stamp and mail the cards.

Who is going to report seeing the first crow this spring? The pet one Axel Jacobson has had around his place all winter, will not count, nor any others that have stayed here all winter rather than brave the deep snows and severe cold in southern Minnesota and Iowa.

PLAYERS TO RETURN

The Borgen Players, a show troupe that travels extensively thruout this section of the state, will again become residents of St. Hilaire. Mr. and Mrs. Borgen came this week from Nevis to make arrangements to occupy the H. H. Hanson residence in south part of town. The Borgen Players have resided here part of each year for several years past.

Your Creamery

The creamery, organized and built by the people of this community because they saw a need for co-operative marketing of their farm products, can grow and prosper only in the same proportion as it is patronized by the people of the community. What Does a Farmer Do in the Winter?

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Mrs. O. G. Mathison of Red Lake Falls, is a guest at the home of her brother, Elroy Johnson.

RED CROSS—The local Red Cross will meet at the home of Mrs. J. A. Hansen next Tuesday afternoon, March 10, at 2:00.

Just to prove there was still a little kick left in old man Winter, the mercury dropped to 20 degrees below zero here this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Beebe, Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Brink and daughter, Donna, were dinner guests last Sunday at the M. R. Graham home.

Dr. W. A. Billings, authority on all phases of turkey production, will speak at the Bilden & Olsen hall tomorrow afternoon (Friday) at 2 o'clock.

Anyone having a farm for sale or rent, leave word at this office. There will be some demand for moderately priced farm lands the coming spring.

The first rain of the present year fell here Tuesday for about an hour during midday. With shifting of the wind to northwest, the rain changed to snow.

The village council is planning to have a new chimney built in the rear room of the village building. Difficulty in heating that part of the building prompts the move.

An invitation dance was given at the local hall last Saturday evening. A stranger who created a disturbance on the street that night was arrested and lodged in jail at Thief River.

Another snowfall Wednesday night, coupled with a brisk wind, blockaded many of the country roads again. The school buses experienced some difficulty in making their routes this morning.

The St. Hilaire Livestock Association will ship a carload of stock from here Saturday to market at So. St. Paul. This will be the first shipment made under direction of the new manager, Ed. Engh.

Ed. Christensen is contemplating building one or more auto camp trailer outfits the coming spring. He also plans to engage more extensively in wrecking of old cars and in sales of used parts from them.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy returned Monday after motoring with other members of the county board to St. Paul to attend a commissioner's convention. Plans for handling of old age pensions was one of the matters discussed at the meeting.

Owing to a break in the high line, this village was without electric service for several hours Monday afternoon.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy went Tuesday morning to Thief River Falls to preside at the regular monthly meeting of the county board.

In keeping with experience gained in years passed, it would be well not to uncover all the street drains upon first sign of a thaw this spring.

A modern, one story residence is to be built the coming spring on the Gust Johnson farm in Sanders to replace the house destroyed by fire last month.

Because of drifted roads, the school bus operating on the route extending east to Hazel, was unable to make its afternoon trip Monday until late that evening.

The office of County Treasurer John Gullingsrud was a busy place last Friday and Saturday while long lines of people waited to pay their personal property taxes.

Lester Olson, manager of the creamery, was at Thief River Wednesday to attend the annual convention of Land O' Lakes creameries of Districts No. 14 and 17.

The sight of boys shooting marbles—an unfailing sign of coming spring—is not in evidence so far. About the only place to roll them now would be down snow drifts.

The boys who expected to make a bit of extra change by trapping muskrats this spring will be disappointed to know there will be no open season in this county this spring.

Another of the popular whist tournaments is to be started the latter part of this month according to present plans. Announcement of the first date will be made later.

Following a break in the cold weather which had continued for six weeks, and which prevented many people from marketing their produce, a drop took place in prices of both butter and eggs.

There was but small attendance at the Public Forum meeting held at the school building Tuesday night. Attendance would have been better had assurance been given that the speaker would be here.

In districts farther south where but little snow had fallen the past winter, dust storms have started again. Unless rain falls in that territory very soon, it is feared the dust storms will assume proportions of those of last year.

NO MUSKRAT SEASON

The 1936 open season for muskrats, previously announced by the Conservation Commission, will extend from March 25 to April 13 inclusive, in designated counties, but Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Marshall or any of the adjoining counties are not included in the list. There are more muskrats in the river now than there has been for several years past, but they cannot be legally taken this year.

March came in like a lamb and is going out the same way, according to local weather forecasters.

OLD-AGE PENSION PLAN IS HELD UP

Federal appropriation to Minnesota for paying of the government's part of old-age pensions is temporarily held up because the state appropriation for administration of the act is held by federal officials to be inadequate. It is hoped however, that differences can be ironed out at an early date. n the meantime pension applications are pouring into the county by hundreds. The pension plan went into effect March 1, but actual operation is to be deferred until federal approval is made and funds secured. This may come at any time, and if it comes this month, payments will likely be made April first. In the meantime those who have received $5.00 per month under the county old-age pension act, will continue to receive that amount.

P. T. A. Postponed

A meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association scheduled to be held Friday evening this week, has been postponed until a week later because several of the pupils who were to take part in the program, are afflicted with mumps.

COURT SESSION ENDS

Winter term of District court in Pennington county ended Tuesday night following completion of one case. The petit jurors were discharged and returned home that evening.

If much more snow falls between now and when spring thaw starts, Bob Collins may have to use his new duck boat this spring to haul mail to and from the railroad station.

Harry Winter and August Berglund motored to Roy Lake this week and returned with a trailer load of white pine material to be used in making bee hives and supplies.

L. O' L. DISTRICT MEETING IS HELD

Annual meeting of creamery operators, creamery officials and patrons of Land O'Lakes District No. 17 was held yesterday at Thief River Falls. John Brandt, president and general manager of Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., discussed developments in the organization for the past year. Other speakers talked on problems confronting individual creameries, and matters of general importance to the dairying industry. Musical entertainment was furnished at the meeting by the Roseau band, the Land O' Lakes quartet, and a male chorus from Ulen. Hundreds of people representing the different creamery locations, attended the meeting.

MAYOR QUEEN TO SPEAK

Mayor John Queen of Winnipeg, will speak at the City Auditorium at Thief River Falls tomorrow evening. The public is invited to hear him, and there will be no admission charge. A program of music will be given in addition to Mayor Queen's talk.

SHORT TERM OF COURT IS ENDED

The petit jury in Pennington county district court was dismissed Tuesday at 6 o'clock after hearing only one case, the other two actions scheduled for jury trial having been settled out of court.

In the appeal of Olga Stewart et al. from a condemnation award on six lots west of the court house the jury awarded total damages of $871, compared to $800, the amount of the original award. The jury allowed $108 for each of four inside lots on which delinquent taxes had been paid. The jury was out nearly three hours.

Actions settled out of court included those of Arthur Simonson vs. H. O. Tommerdahl and the Larson company vs. K. E. Dahl. The personal property tax case involving St. Lukes Hospital association was dismissed by order of the court. Judgements for the plaintiffs were entered in the cases of C. A. Nachbar vs. Ed Hill and LaSalle Extension university vs. L. A. Anderson.

FRANK JEFFERS IS DEAD

Word reached Red Lake Falls today that Frank Jeffers, former resident of Red Lake Falls, had died Wednesday after suffering a heart attack. Mr. Jeffers was at one time superintendent of schools, and later was register of deeds in Red Lake county. He had a large circle of friends thruout this territory who will be grieved to learn of his death.

Faith an Essential to Life, Business, Marriage, Friendship

Without Which Our Very Foundations Are Shaken.

Unless we have faith the ground shifts beneath our feet. We are as uncertain as if we stood, or built, upon quicksands. We are sunk. Unless we change to firmer foundation, life is a losing proposition. It is rid of security, of happiness, of confidence, of any welcoming future. So cling to faith even in the most adverse circumstances. It is a necessary support, and a heartening help to mind and spirit.

Faith is not confined to religious experiences, although it is a fundamental of the spirit. Whatever the religion, whatever the church, faith is a necessary foundation; so true is this, that the word faith is frequently used in its stead. We often hear it said, "Of what faith is he?" meaning what church is he affiliated with. Yet the word is one of far broader meaning without losing any of its power or force. It is not segregated, but universal.

In Business.

Business is built on faith. Faith in the supply, and faith in the delivery of orders. Business trust is founded on faith in the persons trusted, or in the companies with whom dealings are carried on. Without faith business would be shattered. It is the part of good business to build up faith in it, and to be alert to know in whom to put faith.

Marriage rests on faith of husband and wife. Without it wedded life is but a travesty. Destruction of the home is imminent. Happiness flees. It is necessary for each person to be sufficiently adaptable to the other's likes and dislikes to learn to adjust to them if happiness is assured, but back of this there must exist an abiding faith.

Friendships are founded on faith. Acquaintances do not become friends without each person believes in the affection of the other, in the dependable reliance of the other. Friendships cease to exist when faith is gone.

Without faith in one's children, they are cramped in development. Without faith in one's own ability of accomplishment, success fades into failure. But in all aspects faith is not a phantom, a mirage, it is a firm foundation. The faith of a child in her mother, and a mother in her child is beautiful to see.

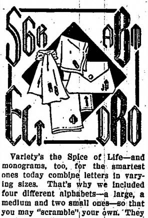
PATTERN 1126



Variety's the Spice of Life—and monograms, too, for the smartest ones today combine letters in varying sizes. That's why we included four different alphabets—a large, a medium and two small ones—so that you may "scramble" your own. They work up easily and quickly, using a combination of satin, seed and buttonhole stitches with a bit of cutwork. Anyone with "Hope Chest" linens will find these alphabets invaluable. They fit beautifully into a diamond or triangular shape.

Pattern 1126 comes to you with a transfer pattern of an alphabet 8 inches high; one 2 inches high; and two alphabets 1¼ inches high; information for placing initials and monograms; illustrations of all stitches needed.

Tarahumara Indians Still Use Their Ancient Bows

The Tarahumara Indians, who inhabit the interior of the Sierra Madre in northern Sinaboa, in Mexico, live almost entirely independent of the white man, writes J. A. Hogle, Jr., in Popular Mechanics Magazine. They still hunt with bow and arrow and maintain their tribal customs, just as their ancestors did in pre-Columbian days. Their wants are few and, aided by nature, are met easily.

It is the belief of many that somewhere in a hidden inaccessible valley of the Sierra Madre exists the fabled cities of Cibola. There is no denying that these mountains, peopled as they are by various Indian tribes who have shunned the ways of the white man of whose past little is known, remain a fertile field for further exploration that may result in changing some of the fabled Indian stories into realities, just as Moore's expedition proved the Berranca del Cobre to exist instead of being a product of imagination as heretofore accepted.

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Neutrality a Shell

Washington.—Congress, again, has given a fine illustration of how a horse goes up to the jump, then fails to take it. It faltered on the neutrality question. True, congress has re-enacted for another year the neutrality law that was put through under pressure a year ago but it did not have the necessary courage to go into that question and work out anything of a permanent character. The result, I am convinced, is that as soon as there is any excuse whatsoever, neutrality for the United States will be nothing but a shell.

I do not know, nor do I believe anybody can tell at this juncture whether the United States ought to embark on a rigid policy of isolation from affairs of the world but that is a question that is subordinate at this moment. The point is that congress, a year ago, made a great show of neutrality and put on a second stage performance only lately with the same theme song. Since it has backed away from the real issue it begins to appear that the original action was but hollow mockery; that the politicians moved a year ago with the thought in mind that they would not have to go on record so soon and that they could make the country feel it had elected statesmen. But, instead, their course has led them to the point where a decision had to be made—and they have dodged it.

One of the reasons why this neutrality question has become so important is the combination of circumstances that has developed in Europe. Those maneuvers have put our congress on the spot and it, like so many previous times, again has wavered.

It is difficult to forecast what is going to happen in Europe but there are certain signs and portents that may not be ignored. History, as we all know, has a habit of repeating itself and it promises to repeat itself in a hurry this time.

Let us look at the European picture. On the one hand we have an alignment of France and England and probably Russia. On the other, we see Hitlerized Germany, Austria and Italy. There has been nothing more tangible thus far than a baring of fangs. That is, no overt acts have been committed but it always has been the case that the snarling and showing of teeth has provided the setting, the atmosphere, for more serious accusations. It may never happen that Germany or Austria or Italy will take steps which France or Russia could regard as an invasion of national rights and then, again, any one of them at any time may accidentally or deliberately do some minor thing that would provoke hostilities.

New Alignment

The chief significance of the reported alignment of Italy with Germany and Austria is that the Central Powers, as they stood in 1914, have been augmented by the strength of Fascist Italy. It means that the Germany of 1914 has access to the North sea and the Mediterranean instead of just the North sea as occurred 20 years ago.

Coupled with that fact is the condition of a better defense for the Central Powers. If the agreement between Germany and Italy sticks, Germany has only the western and Russian fronts to maintain. It allows for a more compact military program because, instead of guarding against Italy on the south, Germany has an ally in that direction from which sources of supply can be established.

The fresh understandings worked out between France and England really are nothing more than a restoration of the arrangement that existed in the World war. The British, on the surface at least, have no compact with Russia but the French have a very definite agreement with the Soviet. It seems likely, therefore, that if hostilities should break out again, the British and the Soviet will have no difficulty in establishing a pact of mutual help.

As a sidelight, it seems to me that the new developments rather turn the spotlight on the policies of Pierre Laval, former French foreign minister. M. Laval, it will be remembered, was ousted because of alleged pro-Italian policies. He sought for months to maintain friendship between France and Italy because he feared to do otherwise would result in alignment of Mussolini with Hitler. The bulk of the French parliament disagreed with him, however, and M. Laval was replaced by Foreign Minister Flandin.

Now, Europe has seen the prompt desertion of Mussolini from the French side and his alignment with Hitler.

So, the old picture has been put together again in Europe with the only change being the placement of Italy on the opposite side of the fence from where that nation stood in 1914. But let not the fact that the alignment differs only because of Italy's position be minimized. It is the most important of the combination that has developed in Europe.

France Backs Britain

The new situation, insofar as Great Britain is concerned, means that in case of a clash in the Mediterranean between the forces of Mussolini and the British there will be French support. It means, therefore, that Mussolini hardly dare disturb the concentration of British warships around the Suez. To do so would call down upon his head not only the shells of the British fleet but those of the French as well.

For the French, the revived understanding with Great Britain gives support against the slow flow of Hitler lava into the Rhineland which was demilitarized by the Treaty of Versailles at the end of the World war. The French are very touchy about the Rhineland and any attempt by Germany to fortify that territory makes French nerves very jittery. It is only natural, then, that the French look upon the agreement with London as an assurance of security in event Hitler should strike in the Rhineland.

Through it all, foreign advices indicate that British fists are gradually being doubled up against Hitler. This is true notwithstanding the fact that the new King Edward VIII is trying to be friendly with Germany. Foreign dispatches and private advices explain that there is a notable recurrence among the British of discussion recalling Germany atrocities in the World war. Slowly but surely throughout England the old hatred is arising.

On the northern frontier of Germany there is a new line of steel. The Communistic state of Russia looks with disfavor upon the Nazi. My information is that it would take very little to provoke trouble there.

Altogether, the situation is one where, if a stone rolls down a mountain side, it could very easily become the detonation cap that would explode an ammunition dump.

With these facts in mind, one can understand readily the gravity of the relations between the United States and the rest of the world. One can understand as well why congress was rather anxious to avoid legislation of a broader scope in international affairs than already was operative. Yet, this does not alter the fact that if congress had no intention of establishing a real neutrality policy, it should not have embarked on a course designed to that end. It was either engaging in a game of fooling the public a year ago or it has just now demonstrated a most cowardly attitude.

Roosevelt's Maneuver

Now, to get back home, we observe a maneuver by President Roosevelt to link North and South American nations into a new agreement. While none of our officials will say that this move has any connection with European development, I believe that observers generally are of the opinion that it has an important bearing on the situation beyond the Atlantic. It ought to be helpful in keeping the United States out of that mess or, if the future forces us into it and, in the meantime, there is a sound arrangement worked out between nations of the western hemisphere, their combined strength ought to put an end to European strife more quickly than if those European nations were left to fight it out alone. In other words, if Mr. Roosevelt can work out a binding agreement between all the nations of the western hemisphere, they can exert a tremendous influence.

This influence will carry further than on the homeland of any of the countries now involved in the European case of jitters. It possibly may extend to the point of becoming the balance of power in the settlement of colonial disputes between the central powers and the newly re-established allies. European interests in South America are important and if our South American neighbors have the important weight of the United States on their side, they will be in a position, for the first time, to force proper adjustment of colonial rights in the western hemisphere insofar as those colonial rights are concerned in settlement of European differences.

Saxony Densely Populated

One of the most densely populated regions in Germany is Saxony. The capital and seat of the government is Dresden, an old town situated on the banks of the Elbe. Another famous city of Saxony is Leipzig, known for its semiannual industrial fairs and as a renowned music center. It was in Leipzig that Bach wrote many of his masterpieces.

The sides and back of guitars are usually made of maple, ash, service or cherry, not infrequently adorned with inlays of rosewood or other woods. The sound board or face is of deal. Hard woods, such as ebony, beech or pear, are used for the neck and fingerboard. The bridge may be of ebony.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Ortonville—Operators at the central telephone office have been instructed to refuse information on the location of fires.

Grand Rapids—Formal approval of $1,685 to improve the Itasca county fairgrounds as a WPA project was announced by Victor Christgau, state works administrator.

Minneapolis—Improved crop conditions and increased dairy prices were given as responsible factors in a yearly gain of 74 per cent in passenger car sales in Minnesota in 1935.

Pipestone—Theaters were dark here the other night because of inability to get films through. Sixty marooned travelers organized the Pipestone Snowbound club, and celebrated at a dinner and dance.

St. Paul—Minnesota's needy were given 1,100,341 pounds of "surplus" butter in 15 months of 1934 and 1935, the dairy section of AAA at Washington announced. In addition it distributed 407,327 pounds of cheese and 870,000 pounds of evaporated milk.

Duluth—The mother of former Congressman Francis H. Shoemaker, Mrs. Regina F. Shoemaker, 69 years old, died in Duluth here. She was the first white child born in Renville county, and had written several works dealing with pioneer conditions in the state.

Fairmont—Opening of county roads in this area was delayed when fire destroyed a county garage in which snow plows were housed. Losses of equipment and tools approximated $4,000. State highways were blocked in all directions but snow removal crews opened them up.

Minneapolis—John A. Weeks, Minneapolis attorney has filed for the Republican nomination for Attorney General. Weeks is an ex-service man and since 1928 has been a member of the House of Representatives, serving as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee during the last two regular and special sessions.

St. Paul—Hunters are urged to send 1935 game license reports to the division of game and fish as soon as possible. The license cards, which are addressed to the division, should have a listed report of game taken. In this way state officials are able to check more thoroughly on game conditions throughout Minnesota.

Chisholm—Contending that Chisholm is annexing part of the town of Balkan solely for the purpose of producing additional tax revenue for Chisholm, citizens of Balkan and five corporations intervened before the State Supreme Court in the effort to set aside the action. The town of Stuntz launched the original action.

Highwood—Fifty-one boys and seven adults escaped without serious injury from the dormitory building of the Ramsey County Home for Boys when fire destroyed the structure at a loss in excess of $15,000. Lack of water facilities, a condition which has been criticized by several grand juries, blocked attempts by firemen to save the building.

Ely—Minnesota congressmen have been asked to work for a federal grant of $50,000 to the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine for controlling the infestation of caterpillars in Superior national forest near Ely, A. G. Ruggles of University Farm announced. Hundreds of acres of poplar and birch were stripped of leaves last year.

Big Stone—Removal of rough fish from Big Stone lake has been delayed because of the lateness of the season, and it is unlikely that anything will be done until next fall. George Weaver, superintendent of fisheries for the game and fish division of the state, said the Big Stone lake is carp-infested and that ultimate removal of rough fish is essential.

Jackson—After deliberating less than five and one-half hours, the jury hearing his case found Floyd Strain, former convict of Milbank, S. D., guilty of a first degree robbery charge growing out of the $1,400 machinegun holdup of the First State Bank of Okabena in 1933. He immediately was sentenced to serve not to exceed 80 years in a penal institution.

Fairmont—With sirens screaming and bells clanging the Fairmont fire department pell-melled toward the home of Mrs. G. H. Jorgensen. Half way there, the motor truck wheezed and stopped. Somebody had stolen the gasoline from the vehicle in the fire station which is in the same building as police headquarters. The Jorgenson home suffered considerable damage.

Hastings—Henry G. Young, Minneapolis attorney, started action in Dakota county District Court at Hastings for return of $5,000,000 in processing taxes to retail meat dealers of the state. The $5,000,000, Young said, is in impounded processing taxes paid back to Swift & Company and Armour & Company, following the Supreme Court decision holding the AAA invalid.

St. James—J. J. Prentice, superintendent of the Omaha road's western division, said blame for a collision of two freight trains near Jordan February 17 which cost the lives of four trainmen apparently rested on the crew of the stalled train. His statement followed two days of hearings. The accident occurred when a double header freight, speeding down a slight grade at approximately 50 miles an hour, crashed into the rear of a stalled freight about four miles from Jordan.

Bring Woodlands or Sea to the Reach of Flat-Dwellers

The vast ultra-modern flats of Austria and Germany usually have bare, windowless sides which might be used for commercial posters. But an artist has altered all that, says Tit-Bits Magazine. He painted scenic designs on the side of one, and so enraptured were the people that he soon obtained other commissions.

The craze caught on, and now dozens of houses have been decorated with ships, birds, vigorous figures in action, and all kinds of woodland scenes.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

"For thirty years I had chronic constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pain in the back. Adlerika helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and never felt better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life." — Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adlerika. Many report action in 30 minutes after taking just one dose. Adlerika gives complete action, cleaning your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli."

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Townsend Plan Inquiry Attracts Attention

WHILE waiting for instructions as to what to do in the matter of taxation, the members of the house—and many others—directed their attention to the investigation of the activities of the Townsend pension plan promoters. Speaker Byrns appointed on the probing committee of eight two avowed Townsendites—John H. Tolan, Democrat, and Samuel L. Collins, Republican, both from California. The chairman is J. Jasper Bell of Missouri, Democrat, author of the resolution for the investigation. It was understood that Mr. Bell had already gathered a mass of information to substantiate the charge that the Townsend plan has become a huge racket. The leaders of both parties in congress have been getting rather nervous over the growth of the Townsend movement and are glad to see it attacked; but some impartial observers call attention to the fact that the way the committee is going after it smacks of unconstitutional abridgement of the right to petition.

J. Jasper Bell

It was expected that one of the first questions to be considered by the committee would be the salaries received by Dr. Francis E. Townsend, author of the scheme, and R. E. Clements, former California real estate operator, co-founder and general manager. Clements has revealed to newspaper reporters that he and Doctor Townsend receive salaries of $100 a week each from OARP—the old age revolving pension organization—and $50 a week each from the Townsend national weekly, which claims a circulation of 250,000. It has been charged on the floor of the house that this newspaper, privately owned by Townsend and Clements, has a reserve fund of at least $200,000.

Congressman John Steven McGroarty, California's "poet laureate," says the Townsendites will control the house of representatives at the next session, and adds: "They have built up the largest political organization in the history of America, with 10 million enrolled members. If you include those who have signed petitions favoring the Townsend plan the number is increased to 30 million. By November it will be twice this large. This investigation will vastly strengthen the Townsend movement and anybody that knows anything knows that. The American people like fair play and they know that this investigation is just dirty politics."

Gen. Hagood Punished for New Deal Criticism

MAJ. GEN. JOHNSON HAGOOD recently suggested to the house appropriations subcommittee that congress take advantage of what he termed "WPA stage money" and use it to improve housing at army posts. Within a few days came this order signed by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, by order of the secretary of war:

"By order of the President, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, United States army, is relieved from assignment to the command of the Eighth Corps area and further duty at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Maj. Gen. Hagood will proceed to his home and await orders. The travel directed is necessary in the military service."

Two Prominent Men Are Claimed by Death

DEATH took from the scene two men prominent in national life—Albert Cabell Ritchie, governor of Maryland for four terms, and Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy and distant cousin of the President. Mr. Ritchie was a leader among conservative Democrats, from the start a determined foe of national prohibition, and in 1932 a candidate for the Presidential nomination by his party. Though beaten out by F. D. Roosevelt, he had the satisfaction of seeing his repeal plank put into the Democratic platform. Of late he had been an outspoken critic of the New Deal policies, for he was a champion of state rights.

A. C. Ritchie

Henry L. Roosevelt was the fifth member of his family to serve as assistant secretary of the navy, and in recent months he had played an increasingly important part in the affairs of the department, acting as secretary during the illness of Secretary Swanson. He was a student in the naval academy class of 1909, but left before graduation to become a second lieutenant in the marine corps, in which service he rose to the rank of colonel. He was buried in Arlington National cemetery with full military rites after funeral ceremonies that were attended by President Roosevelt and many other high officials.

Week-End Activities of President Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT had a busy week-end. First he went to Philadelphia and received from Temple university the honorary degree of doctor of jurisprudence. He delivered an address in the course of which he said: "True education depends upon freedom in the pursuit of truth. No group and no government can properly prescribe precisely what should constitute the body of knowledge with which true education is concerned. The truth is found when men are free to pursue it.

"It is this belief in the freedom of the mind, written into our fundamental law and observed in our every day dealings with the problems of life, that distinguishes us as a nation."

Next the President hurried up to Cambridge, Mass., to see his son John initiated into the old aristocratic Fly club of Harvard. Returning to Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt delivered a radio address marking brotherhood day of the national conference of Christians and Jews, and he called on all believing Americans to unite against the wave of irreligion that challenges all faiths.

Ship Subsidy Measure Seems to Be Discarded

DEVELOPMENTS in Washington lead to the belief that the Copeland ship subsidy bill has been abandoned. Word came from the White House that the President, although he initiated the principles of the measure, would not press for its passage; and Senator Royal S. Copeland, whose commerce committee approved the bill which was a part of the administration program, is so irritated that he may drop it. Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania has prepared a rival measure, not yet introduced, and Senator Black of Alabama is opposed to the Copeland bill.

Shipping interests have given warning that new construction for foreign trade will continue to be paralyzed by uncertainty and lead to additional insistence by the Navy department on the building of its own auxiliaries.

New Farm Relief Bill Sent to Conference

DIFFERENCES between the house and senate versions of the new farm relief measure were utterly irreconcilable, if you could take the work of the conferees of both bodies to whom the bill was sent. Nevertheless, it was expected the disputes would all be adjusted within a few days and the measure sent to the White House.

Senator Smith, chairman of the senate agriculture committee, voiced indignant opposition to a house amendment providing that tenant farmers and sharecroppers shall be included in cash benefits paid landowners for conserving soil and thus controlling production.

Eden Warns That Another World War Impends

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, British foreign minister, stood up in the house of commons and warned the world that recurrence of the World war was imminent and in his opinion could not be averted except by a system of collective security "embracing all nations in an authority which is unchallenged and unchallengable."

Eden impressed upon members of the parliament the difference between a policy of collective security and one of encirclement, such as the "ring of steel" which Germany complains is being forged about her by France. "The British government will have no lot or part in encirclement," Eden said.

Earlier in his speech the minister announced that the sanctions already imposed upon Italy by members of the League of Nations are achieving their purpose of hastening the cessation of war between Italy and Ethiopia. He failed to satisfy the opposition on the question of an oil embargo against Italy by sidestepping a definite commitment on such a boycott.

Puerto Rico Slayings May Start Reforms

POLITICAL conditions in Puerto Rico, notoriously unsatisfactory, may be rectified as a result of the assassination in San Juan of E. Francis Riggs, chief of the insular police, and a district police chief. Riggs, a former United States army colonel, was shot by two Nationalists; two hours later District Police Chief Francisco Velez N. Ortiz attempted to put down a Nationalist riot at a cafe in the central town of Utuado and was killed.

The assassins of Riggs were caught and admitted the killing, saying it was in revenge for the Rio Pedras "massacre" in which police killed four Nationalists last November. While being questioned, the murderers, the police said, reached for guns and were shot to death.

Harpooned Hippo Ambushes Boat; Stiff Battle Ensues

Angered because it had been harpooned a few days before, a hippopotamus lay in ambush and suddenly attacked a ferry boat operating on the Mpaologoma swamp, a well-known Uganda waterway, near Nairobi. Charge after charge was made by the infuriated beast, which nearly boarded the vessel, the water being shallow so that it could obtain a foothold. Six natives, armed with spears, fought the invader until the arrival of a European, who shot it, amid songs and cheers from the deck of another vessel speeding to the rescue.

Learn One Thing Well; Dare to Be What You Are

Give up trying to know everything, to embrace all. Learn to limit yourself, to content yourself with some definite thing, and some definite work; dare to be what you are, and to learn to resign with good grace all that you are not, and to believe in your own individuality.—Amiel.

100 DRIVERS LOSE LICENSE IN MONTH FOR INFRACTIONS

More than 100 motorists guilty of serious traffic offenses forfeited their drivers licenses during January as a result of revocation or suspension actions by the drivers license division of the state highway department.

Although operating with only a skeleton crew because of lack of funds, the license bureau is carrying on the essential duties established by the drivers license and financial responsibility laws, according to a highway department announcement.

In fact, 11 more licenses were revoked and suspended in January this year than in the same month of 1935. The number revoked last month was 60 and the number suspended was 41. Practically all of these were the result of court convictions and court recommendations.

Persons without drivers licenses, or those who wish to obtain duplicates by reason of change of address, illegibility of the original, or for other reasons, should apply to the state highway department in St. Paul or to any county clerk of court. The charge is 25 cents in St. Paul. County clerks are authorized to charge 35 cents to pay their expenses in the work.

Dr. O. F. Mellby of Thief River Falls, who acts as health officer for this village, met with the village council at its regular meeting Monday evening to discuss plans for a sanitation project that might be undertaken later in the season.

Reports from outlaying districts indicate most of the pheasants remaining in the territory last fall have failed to survive the cold weather of January and February. Lack of shelter, rather than shortage of food, is believed to have caused death of most of the birds. The few remaining ones are being fed by farmers and others.

Dr. D. S. Horn, the Ulen dentist, was here again Monday and Tuesday attending to his local practice. He failed to come a month ago because of road conditions. He expects to return again March 30 and 31.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held at the club rooms Monday night. Monthly meeting of the village council also was held the same evening.

Government of Seventy Towns in Minnesota to be Surveyed Under WPA

A survey of local government in Minnesota cities of between 2500 and 25,000 population will be made by the Municipal Reference Bureau in cooperation with the League of Minnesota Municipalities, it has been announced by C. C. Ludwig, secretary of the league.

The survey will fall under three main heads, in which studies will be made of finance, including receipts, expenditure, debt and the like; personnel, covering the duties salaries, tenure, method of appointment and so on of public officials and employees, and administrative procedure, covering the methods by which municipal business is conducted.

About 70 communities fall into the class of towns to be surveyed Professor Ludwig said. Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth excluded, and also towns of less than 2500 population, but all other Minnesota cities are included.

Funds for the survey are being provided by the Works Progress Administration and amount to slightly more than $26,000. Work will begin at once and will be started in the communities nearest to Minneapolis, where the Municipal Reference Bureau maintains headquarters on the campus of the University of Minnesota.

State Takes 50 Per Cent Loss on Seed Loans Made in 5 Western Counties

Minnesota already has suffered a $144,506 loss from emergency seed loans to farmers in five western counties and the total loss will be in the same ratio, approximately 50 per cent, state school officials said Saturday in St. Paul.

The loans were made from a $2,000,000 appropriation voted by the 1935 legislature which provided that the loans would be made through the counties which would be reimbursed by the state for all losses.

The total amount loaned was $790,337 in 22 counties and the loss for the state will approximate $450,000, said Stafford King, state auditor, and seed loan administrator.

The amount of loans made in the five counties in which settlements have been completed and the loss paid by the state totaled $243,322.75.

The five counties are Big Stone, Brown, Rice, Traverse and McLeod.

Eat Unhatched Ducks

Unhatched ducklings, called baluts, are said to be a Philippine delicacy. They are eaten about ten days before their time to hatch if nature had been left to take its time-honored course. Eggs are hatched in sacks in the sun.

TRAFFIC SAFETY CONTEST AWARDS ARE MADE PUBLIC

Winners of the 1935 Minnesota Traffic Safety contest were announced today by A. V. Rohweder chairman of the Minnesota Public Safety committee, sponsor of the contest. Bronze plaques will be presented to representatives of the winning cities and counties at a dinner Tuesday, April 14, in the Hotel Lowry, St. Paul.

The winners of the Group "B" section of the contest for cities with populations exceeding 100,000 are St. Paul and Duluth each city being awarded equal honors. Austin and Brainerd are the winners of the Group "C" classification for cities of 10,000 to 100,000 population. Plaques will be awarded both these cities.

In the Group "D" classification for cities having populations of 5,000 to 10,000 Fergus Falls and Owatonna were named the winners. Honorable mention is given Red Wing, Bemidji, Cloquet, Ely, Fairmont and Hastings. Red Wing ranks first on the basis of its traffic fatality rate alone, but failed to win a plaque because of lack of reported public safety committee activity.

Rice county is the winner in the Group "A" classification for counties with populations of 20,000 or more, with Faribault and Pine counties receiving honorable mention. Cottonwood county is the winner of the Group "AA" classification for counties having 10,000 to 20,000 populations. In the Group "AAA" classification for counties with less than 10,000 population, first honors went to Big Stone county. Honorable mention is given Grant county and special honorable mention is given to Lake county for outstanding safety activity.

In naming the winners, the award committee gave equal consideration to the traffic accident rate per 100,000 population and to public safety activities conducted by organized and approved public safety committees in the cities and counties.

The award committee was headed by N. W. Elsberg, state commissioner of highways, as chairman, and included G. W. Lawson, secretary of the state Federation of Labor; C. E. Carlson of Duluth; Dr. C. H. Mayo of Rochester; Irving Todd of Hastings; Julius Schmahl, state treasurer; R. J. Dunlap, managing editor of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press; M. Hibbard of Duluth; H. L. Tyson of Minneapolis; C. P. Schaub of St. Paul; Jefferson Jones of the Minneapolis Journal and L. G. Foley, chairman, state board of control.

HIGHWAY WORKERS WILL OBTAIN RED CROSS TRAINING

In co-operation with the American Red Cross, the state highway department will train many of its employes to give first aid to accident victims, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

The highway department also is co-operating with the Red Cross in its program of establishing roadside first aid stations in Minnesota, and will erect the official signs marking such stations, Mr. Elsberg said. Traffic flow data has been given the Midwest office of the Red Cross at St. Louis to aid it in determining the Minnesota trunk highways which should receive consideration in the establishment of the emergency stations, he stated.

"The Red Cross will assign an official first aid instructor to the highway department this spring", Mr. Elsberg said. "This instructor will teach first aid practice to selected men in every maintenance district throughout the state. After their training, these men in turn will teach other employes. The highway patrol, whose members already are proficient in first aid, also will assist in the work.

"Highway department employes who are constantly on the roads should be capable of giving intelligent first aid in any emergency. With the co-operation of the Red Cross, we expect many of them will receive the necessary training this coming summer. Death or permanent crippling often can be averted if an accident victim receives proper first aid before medical help arrives."

R. A. Jakoubek of St. Louis, first aid and life saving field representative of the Red Cross, made the arrangements with Mr. Elsberg for the participation of the highway department in Red Cross activities.

SHOT BY STRAY BULLET WHILE ASLEEP IN BED

Sebeka.—Peter Doty, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Doty of Sebeka, escaped serious injury and possible death when accidently shot through the right arm while asleep in his bed at home there. The bullet missed his head by a fraction of an inch. His seven-year-old nephew, Jack Bloomquist, had found a high powered rifle and while playing with the gun, it was accidently discharged. The bullet went through two bedroom walls, a wooden box in the boy's bedroom and then through a mattress before it struck its victim. He will recover, though the bullet tore an ugly hole through his arm just below the shoulder.

FEW MISHAPS MAR WPA RECORD, SAYS VICTOR CHRISTGAU

Less than 19 lost-time injuries in every 1,000,000 man-hours worked is the record of the Works Progress Administration in Minnesota, figures from the office of Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, revealed today.

Results of a survey by the WPA safety department which compiled the statistics for work up to February 1, showed project workers credited with 19,900,000 man-hours of work. This, according to R. J. Moore, state safety consultant, is the equivalent in the operation of private industry employing 1,000 men steadily, 8 hours, six days a week, for close to nine years.

From the beginning of the WPA program in Minnesota, to February 1, 378 lost-time injuries and two fatalities have been reported. Since February 1 there has been one additional fatality.

Mr. Moore explained that lost-time injuries under WPA regulations are those which prevent workers from returning to their regular work on the next shift, whereas in private industry, compensable injuries almost invariably are considered to be only those which make it impossible for the worker to return to his job at the end of the compensation period, usually seven days. In cooperation with the state medical society and county medical societies, more than 1,100 Minnesota physicians located in practically every town in the state have been selected to treat WPA injury cases. Fifteen safety inspectors are employed to make regular inspections of all projects and equipment.

According to the U. S. Employees Compensation Commission of the total of 12,605 compensable lost-time cases charged to WPA, nationally, only 1.8% occurred in the Minnesota set-up now employing more than 65,000 workers from relief rolls.

Northwest School Tests Comparative Values of Grains for Laying Hens

The comparative value of common grains for laying hens was studied in two 365-day trials conducted at the Northwest Experiment Station under the direction of A. M. Pilkey, poultryman. The grain combinations consisted of equal parts by weight of wheat and barley, wheat and oats, wheat and corn, barley and corn, barley and oats, and corn and oats. All pens were fed one-third of their daily allowance of scratch grain at 6 a. m. and two-thirds one hour before sundown. A dry mash consisting of equal parts of the two grains used in the mixture ground plus protein supplements was available in open hoppers at all times. A moist mash made up of the dry mash mixture to which sufficient milk was added to moisten was fed daily at noon. Grit and oyster shell were also before the birds at all times.

According to Professor Pilkey, the wheat and barley combination proved to be the most efficient from the standpoint of egg production though the mortality rate was slightly higher than in the other groups. Mortality appeared to increase with the increase in egg production. There was little difference in fertility which varied from 90.7 to 92.4 per cent while hatchability varied from a minimum of 62.5 per cent in the corn and oats group to a maximum of 68.3 per cent on wheat and corn.

In other trials the addition of one per cent cod liver oil to a standard laying ration, consisting of a mixture of two parts wheat, one part of corn, and one-half part each of barley and oats, resulted in an increase of six per cent in egg production, 14 per cent in fertility, 19 per cent in hatchability and reduced mortality 1.1 per cent. In these trials the grain ration was fed in a deep litter of straw twice daily, while a mash made up of the same mixture ground plus 20 per cent meatmeal, 2 per cent charcoal, .5 per cent salt, with 1 per cent cod liver oil was placed in open feed hoppers and kept before the birds at all times. Grit and oyster shell were also available throughout the trial. Later trials indicated that burbet fish oil, which is produced in limited amounts in northern Minnesota, is equal to cod liver oil as an antirachitic addition to the poultry ration for laying hens and growing chicks.

EMPTY CAR DOES RUNAWAY STUNT

Perham.—In the old days runaway horses furnished a good deal of entertainment for villagers. Now runaways of that sort are unusual, but last week a new feature was added to the possible thrills at Perham, a runaway car. Math Schmitz was working on a car in the front part of the garage, which had just been brought in and parked near the front door. In order to test the engine, Math applied the crank. The driver had left the car in reverse gear. There was a spluttering roar, and the car jumped back. It crashed the door open, shattering the glass, and turning obliquely, shot across the street. It missed a parked car by inches, bolted over the sidewalk, crashed open a gate of a monument yard, ran about 15 feet into the yard and stalled in the snow. Very little damage was done to the car, considering its wild charge.

Storage Stocks of Pork Hit Record Low Feb. 1

Stocks of pork and lard held in storage in the United States on February 1 this year were the lowest on record for that date, says the Livestock Market Digest, issued by the Central Co-operative Association, farmer-owned livestock selling agency at South St. Paul. Pork held in storage on that date totaled slightly less than 436 million pounds or 34 per cent less than a year ago, when the total was nearly 668 million pounds. Compared with the five-year average for that date at 675 million pounds, stocks are now 36 per cent smaller.

Lard stocks also are small, the February 1 total being 76 million pounds compared with 113 million pounds a year ago and 95 million pounds for the five-year average. This was equivalent to a decrease of 33 per cent from a year ago and a loss of 20 per cent from the five-year average.

Stocks of frozen and cured beef also show a drop from a year ago but a substantial increase over the five-year average. On February 1 this year there were 104 million lbs. of beef in storage or 18 per cent less than a year ago and 42 per cent more than the five-year average.

Stocks of frozen lamb and mutton are insignificant when compared with other meats. On February 1 this year less than 3 million lbs. were held in storage. This was 26 per cent less than a year ago and 12 per cent less than the five year average.

NOTICE OF EXPIRATION OF TIME OF REDEMPTION

Office of County Auditor,
County of Pennington,
State of Minnesota—ss.

TO JULIUS TOSTENSON:

(1) You are hereby notified that the following piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Lots 10, 11 and 12, Block 2, Hemmingsen's Addition to Thief River Falls

IS NOW ASSESSED IN YOUR NAME.

(2) That on the 11th day of May, 1931, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment duly given and made in and by the District Court in said County of Pennington on the 13th day of March, 1931, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year 1929, for said County of Pennington, the above described piece or parcel of land was offered for sale, and no one bidding upon said offer, said piece or parcel, was bid in for the State of Minnesota for the sum of ($40.11), Forty and 11-100 Dollars.

(3) That thereafter, and on the 12th day of August, 1935, the said piece or parcel not then having been redeemed from said sale, was sold and conveyed at public sale by the County Auditor of said County, pursuant to the statute, to an actual purchaser for the sum of One Hundred thirty-eight and 54-100 Dollars and no cents.

(4) That the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of ($138.54), One Hundred thirty-eight Dollars and fifty-four cents, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on ($138.54), One Hundred thirty-eight and 54-100 Dollars from said 12th day of August, 1935, to the day such redemption is made.

(5) That the tax certificate of sale issued to said purchaser has been presented to me by the holder thereof and this notice requested.

(6) That the time for the redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said tax sale will expire twelve months after the service of this notice, and the filing of proof of such service in my office.

WITNESS my hand and official seal this 21st day of February, 1936.

A. M. SENSTAD,
Auditor Pennington County, Minnesota.

BRANCH LIBRARY IS OPENED HERE

Local people interested in the project have made arrangements for opening in St. Hilaire of a branch of the library at Thief River Falls. The council room in rear part of the post-office building has been secured as a location. Shelves have been built, and part of the books to be kept here were brot down this week. Another supply of books will be taken down some time this week, Friday if possible. Miss Viola Pearson will be employed full time as librarian. People of the village and surrounding country are cordially invited to avail themselves of the library facilities.

ROBERT LEICK, WELL KNOWN HERE DIES AT SPOKANE

Robert F. Leick, 76 years of age, a resident of Crookston for many years and well known to many Red Lake county residents died Sunday at Spokane, Wash., where he has made his home for about two years. Funeral services were held at Spokane, Tuesday.

Mr. Leick had made his home at Crookston for about 45 years. He was employed for a number of years as a traveling salesman for a shoe company and after retiring from that activity he operated a grocery store in Crookston.

He is survived by his widow and two sons: Merril and Dean, with whom he had made his home since he left for Spokane.—R. L. F. Gazette.

P. T. A. TO MEET FRIDAY EVENING

Next meeting of the local Parent-Teachers Association will be held at the school assembly Friday night this week. The program for this meeting has been arranged by the band and that organization also will serve lunch. An excellent program of music and other numbers will be given. No one should fail to attend as this will be one of the most interesting meetings of the entire year.

The new library, which is being sponsored by local civic organizations, may not be ready to operate until first of next week because some necessary supplies have not arrived.

Dairy Farmers Invited to Hear Prof. Searles at Meetings Next Week

H. R. Searles, University of Minnesota dairy extension specialist, will discuss problems of interest to dairy farmers at meetings to be held at various points in the county on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, says R. M. Douglass, county agent.

Meetings will be held at the court House in Thief River Falls at 2 o'clock Tuesday, March 17th and at the Bilden-Olson hall at St. Hilaire on Wednesday, March 18th at 2 o'clock.

The outlook for dairy prices, breeding of dairy stock, feeding and management problems will be reviewed at these meetings. All interested in dairying are invited to attend.

BENEFIT DANCE, MARCH 17

A number of young people who are interested in promoting a baseball club here for the coming season, are sponsoring a benefit dance to be given Tuesday night, March 17, at the local hall. There is sufficient material available for a good ball team for 1936, but some new equipment is needed. Everyone should buy at least one ticket whether he intends to attend the dance or not.

ATTEND DISTRICT CAGE TOURNAMENT

Last Thursday evening Messrs. Lester Olson, M. R. Graham, O. Gunstad, Rolf Wollan and Klem Gigstad motored to Crookston to see the semi-finals in the district basketball tournament. They all came home convinced Crookston would win for the district. The following evening Supt. M. R. Graham and M. H. Jackson, accompanied by some of the local basketball team, went down to see the finals, and saw East Grand Forks upset the previous dope by winning over Crookston.

ATTENDS CONVENTION

Lester Olson, manager of the creamery, left Tuesday for Minneapolis to represent the St. Hilaire creamery at the Fifteenth Annual Meeting of Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., which opened Thursday morning and continues until Friday evening. The creamery operators' and cheese-makers session, always held in connection with the Land O' Lakes meeting, was held Wednesday the 11th.

Arvid Carlson of Middle River, and A. L. Carlson of Holt, who operated the Carlson Mercantile Company store here, a few years ago, are named among incorporators of a new state bank to be opened soon at Argyle if granted a charter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Boltman and daughter motored here Sunday from Grand Forks and spent the day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Olson.

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Next regular meeting of the B. M. Club will be held at the club rooms next Monday night.

The local shipping association shipped a carload of livestock Saturday from here to So. St. Paul.

Supt. Cash Cartier of the Red River Power Company office at Red Lake Falls, was up today to read the electric meters for this month.

Dr. W. A. Billings, turkey production specialist with the University, spoke to a fair sized gathering of local turkey raisers last Friday afternoon at the Bilden & Olsen hall.

A meeting of the county board was to be held Wednesday, but blockaded roads prevented attendance of some members so the meeting was postponed until later.

Robert Black is now employed at a service station at Thief River Falls. After he becomes a bit more acquainted with the business, he is to have charge of a station at Thief River for the coming year.

If anyone really "hones" for spring its the mail carriers. They are all having a difficult time making their routes, and this week has been more difficult than any so far this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Brink and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Jensen and son, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Beebe, Mr. and Mrs. A. Satterberg, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Graham and baby daughter were guests last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Beebe.

Friends of Manford Dahle, medical student at the University of North Dakota, will be pleased to know his application for admittance to Rush Medical College at Chicago has been granted. He intends to enter that school next fall after completing a two year course in North Dakota.

Those who expressed some doubt about the reliability of the groundhog as a weather prognosticator, about six weeks ago, are now convinced the groundhog is usually right after all. From present appearances, the forecast should have been eight weeks more of winter after Feb. 2nd, instead of six weeks.

The National Reemployment office at Thief River Falls, which is open from 8:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M., every day, has a considerable number of farm hands, tractor operators, dairy hands, and maids registered and available for employment. Those who want help for spring are urged to place their orders early. Registration for employment may be made at the office during the hours stated.

J. H. Bolen has leased a place three miles west of Thief River Falls and expects to move there in the near future.

Mrs. Lester Olson left Tuesday for Grand Forks to spend a few days at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. Boltman.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Borgen and their Borgen Players moved here last week from Nevis and are now settled in the H. F. Hanson residence in west part of town.

Autoists coming thru yesterday from Red Lake Falls reported having some difficulty in negotiating a big drift in the bend south of the Phil Anderson farm.

Red Lake Falls is to stage its dog derby Saturday this week. Some of the boys here have been busy the past week training their "steeds" with intention of taking part in the derby.

Another Forum meeting was held Tuesday night at the school building. Because of unfavorable weather conditions, attendance at these meetings has not been as good as was anticipated.

Word has been received that Martin Hanson, pioneer settler in River Falls town, is quite ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Stuart Richards at Kenora, Ont., Can. Mr. Hanson's many friends in this community hope for his recovery.

Mayor John Queen of Winnipeg, spoke at a dinner gathering of the Civic and Commerce Association at Thief River Falls last Friday noon. That evening he addressed a meeting at the Municipal Auditorium in that city, to which the public was invited.

FLOODS IN DAKOTAS

Thousands of acres of farm lands along the Missouri river and its tributaries in North and South Dakota have been flooded the past week since ice began going out. Huge ice jams formed at different places in the rivers, backing up waters which overflowed into the farming country. Attempts to blast out the jams to relieve water pressure and to save bridges, have not met with much success. Many people have been compelled to move stock and effects to higher ground.

SPRING SHOW WILL BE HELD NEXT WEEK

The ninth annual automobile show and spring exposition will open at the Auditorium in Thief River Falls next Thursday, March 19, and will continue thru Saturday. A dozen different makes of automobiles handled by seven dealers will be on display. A style show will be given Thursday night at 7:45 in which will participate forty models representing seven stores, and the evening will close with a dance, as will be the case Friday and Saturday evenings. The last two evenings an elaborate vaudeville program will be presented, featuring the "Early Steppers of 1936", a tabloid musical comedy. In addition to the automobile show there will be industrial exhibits in the basement rooms of the Auditorium.

E. G. F. DISTRICT WINNER

East Grand Forks high school basketball team won the district title last Friday night by defeating Crookston in a fast game in the last mentioned town. The previous evening, Crookston defeated Thief River Falls, and East Grand Forks won handily from Warren.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ludtke of Ely, Minn., spent last week end at the Amanda Pearson home here.

The Norwegian Lutheran Aid scheduled to be held Friday of this week, has been postponed until a week later because of road conditions.

A motor driven pump was used Tuesday at the village well in an effort to clear the water supply which has been somewhat cloudy the past week. It is the intention of the council to have a well machine to clean out the well casing this spring.

A six inch snowfall blanketed this section of the state Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. A high wind which prevailed all day Wednesday drifted the snow quite badly and blocked most of the roads. The trunk highways were cleared by plows during the day but motorists experienced much difficulty because of cuts filling with snow.

PENSION PLAN STILL HELD UP

Altho applications for old-age pensions are pouring into the county Auditor's office every day, no action on them can be taken until the federal appropriation to the state is secured. Federal officials deem the appropriation made by Minnesota for administering the act, to be entirely too small for that purpose. Until such time as an agreement can be reached and federal money secured for the state, aid to aged persons will remain the same as before, viz $5.00 per month. If and when money is appropriated to Minnesota, those to whom applications are granted will likely receive aid from the date the law went into effect which is March 1st.

LOAD LIMIT TO BE POSTED ON S. A. ROADS

The county board passed a resolution this week whereunder load limit notices will be posted on all State Aid roads this spring, similar to those used on the trunk highway system.

This action is taken because of the fact that when the trunk highways have been posted in the spring, heavy truck traffic has diverted to the state aid roads cutting them up badly and making expensive repairs necessary. The sheriff has been instructed to deputize the road patrolmen and charge them with the enforcement of the ruling.—Tri-County Forum.

WOMEN'S CLUB, MAR. 19TH

The Womans' Club will hold its regular meeting at the club rooms Thursday evening, Mar. 19th. The program committee consists of Mesdames V. G. Brink, H. Sande, W. Corbet and W. J. Janda. The topic for this meeting will be "Homemakers." The hostesses will be Mrs. Ray Young, Mrs. H. Holmes and Mrs. C. Hallstrom. Members will respond to roll call with "household hints."

Ardell Olson, who is employed in the Journal office at Fertile, motored up Sunday with a group of friends for a short visit at home.

Italy Wins Another Battle and Talks About Peace

FROM the Italian army on the northern front in Ethiopia comes the news that the invaders have defeated the natives in a series of severe combats and have reached and taken the mountain stronghold of Amba Alaji. The Ethiopian losses are estimated at 10,000 dead and many more wounded. The Tembien region is now completely in the hands of the Italians and their way to the center of the country is fairly clear.

Benito Mussolini

Dispatches from Addis Ababa admitted that the Italians also were advancing rapidly in the southern part of the country and said Ras Desta Demtu's army and large numbers of warriors from all over the south were gathering to try to stop them. Marshal Badoglio's troops in the north were besieging Abbi Addi, 25 miles west of Makale and the 5,000 Ethiopians there were said to be facing surrender or extermination.

With these successes on the military side, Mussolini was reported to be losing economically because of the increasing pressure of the various sanctions against Italy. Because of his weakened position at home, it was said in Geneva and Paris he probably would be disposed to negotiate peace if terms satisfactory enough to save his face are proposed.

The sanctions committee of the League of Nations unexpectedly decided that Mussolini should be asked once more whether he is ready to discuss peace; and it was understood that if he said no, the league would proceed to impose an embargo on oil. Such a step, Mussolini has repeatedly asserted, would mean war in Europe.

Emperor Haile Selassie, according to Geneva dispatches, sent a message to Great Britain, offering to discuss peace on the basis of the status quo, letting Italy retain the territory she has occupied, provided King Edward will act as intermediary.

Japan Military Revolt Ends in Failure

JAPAN was calming down after the amazing revolt and attempted coup d' etat of a thousand soldiers led by a group of young "fascist" officers who thought the Okada government was hampering the military progress of the nation. So far as can be judged at this distance, the net results of the uprising were: Admiral Viscount Makoto Saito, former premier and lord keeper of the privy seal; Korekiyo Takahashi, minister of finance, and Gen. Jotaro Watanabe, chief of military education, were assassinated by the rebels. Premier Okada escaped death, his brother-in-law being mistaken for him and slain. The mutineers, threatened by loyal troops and the fleet, obeyed an edict by Emperor Hirohito and surrendered. Of their 23 leaders, two committed suicide and the rest were put in prison to await probable trial by court martial.

One other important result is likely to follow the uprising, and that is the formation of a new government more national in character and including some able military men. That is what the army wants, not caring especially who is premier. Okada, after emerging from his place of hiding, offered his resignation, but the emperor commanded him to carry on for the present.

It may be Japan will really be the gainer for the revolt, but it suffered one great loss in the death of Takahashi, who was a financial genius.

The whole affair emphasizes the fact that the Japanese do not look with disfavor on assassinations and suicides that are motivated by "patriotism."

Building Service Strike Cripples New York

MORE than 150,000 workers in 11,000 buildings in New York city were called out on strike by James J. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employees' International union, and the sky-scrapers from the Battery to Washington Heights were badly crippled. Elevator men stopped their cars, furnace men banked their fires and scrubwomen threw down their mops, and all marched out of the buildings and formed picket lines. There was some scattered fighting between the pickets and men hastily hired to take their places, but the entire police force of the city was mobilized in a hurry to preserve the peace.

For almost a month the union leaders and building operators had been trying in vain to reach an agreement that would avert the strike. Bambrick as he called the strike said the owners must now sign the union terms and that he would accept no calls for arbitration. Each building, he asserted, must sign for itself.

Since the strike affected not only office buildings but innumerable apartment buildings also, the occupants of the latter were deprived of heat and telephone connections, and in many cases sick persons were marooned without food supplies. This lead Mayor La Guardia to call the city health officials into conference, and to declare a civic emergency and order Health Commissioner Rice to see that fires were stoked and that trips necessary to health of the tenants and care of the sick were made in all residence buildings of more than six floors.

Union officials in Akron, Ohio, warned the law enforcement officials there that a general strike would be called in that city if force were used to break the strike blockade by pickets at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company plant. About 14,000 workers of Akron are idle because of the strike, which was started in protest against layoffs which the company said were seasonal reductions in production.

Boulder Dam Turned Over to the Government

COMPLETED two and one-half years ahead of schedule, Boulder dam and its power houses were turned over to the reclamation service. The job was the biggest single contract ever executed for the government. There was no ceremony in the transfer. Frank Crowe, construction superintendent for the Six Companies, Inc., contractors, said to Ralph Lowry, reclamation service engineer: "Take it; it's yours now," and that was all.

The dam and power houses are done, but there is plenty of work on the entire project remaining to keep the government engineers busy for a long time. The Six Companies received $54,500,000, and the total cost will be $165,000,000.

Putting New Farm Bill Into Quick Operation

IMMEDIATELY after President Roosevelt signed the new soil conservation-farm relief act passed to take the place of the invalidated AAA, Administrator Chester C. Davis began planning ways to spend the $500,000,000 authorized. Under his orders more than five thousand employees of the AAA who had been waiting since January 6 for something to do got busy placing the new program into effect.

C. C. Davis

The goal of the new law, Mr. Roosevelt said in announcing his signature, is parity, not of farm prices, but of farm income. He said the New Deal has "not abandoned and will not abandon" the principle of equality for agriculture.

The President, in a formal statement, stressed three "major objectives" of the program which he said are "inseparably and of necessity linked with the national welfare." They were:

1. "The conservation of the soil itself through wise and proper land use.

2. "The re-establishment and maintenance of farm income at fair levels so that the great gains made by agriculture in the last three years can be preserved and national recovery continue.

3. "The protection of consumers by assuring adequate supplies of food and fiber now and in the future."

Davis planned, as the first move, a series of four conferences with agricultural leaders in Memphis, Chicago, New York and Salt Lake City to formulate plans to take 30,000,000 acres out of commercial production this year and place them in legumes and other soil conserving crops.

The new law provides benefit payments to farmers who co-operate in federal suggestions for conservation of soil fertility in 1936 and 1937. It provides, also, for federal subsidies to states setting up permanent state programs in 1938 and thereafter.

Federal Judge Ritter Impeached by House

ARTICLES of impeachment against Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter of the Southern district of Florida were voted by the house of representatives. The vote was 181 to 146. The judge is accused of accepting $4,500 from a former law partner who collected $90,000 in fees in Ritter's court.

This impeachment is the twelfth voted by the house in American history. Of the 11 men previously impeached eight have been judges, one a senator, another a cabinet officer, and the other was a President, Andrew Johnson. Only three, all judges, were found guilty by the senate, which sits as the court in such cases.

Breckinridge in Ohio's Democratic Primary

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT apparently isn't going to have the Democratic presidential primary in Ohio all to himself. C. A. Weinman of Columbus announced he had received petitions signed by Col. Henry Breckinridge of New York, to enter his name, and said he would at once set about getting the necessary 1,000 signatures from 30 counties. This does not mean an attempt to get pledged convention delegates, there being in Ohio a separate Presidential preference ballot. Breckinridge is a member of the American Liberty league, and is attorney for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Texas Opens Centennial Birthday Party

"REMEMBER the Alamo," the battle cry of Texas, was heard all over the state as its centennial celebration opened at the village of Washington-on-the-Brazos, where the declaration of independence from Mexico was signed. The old "charter of empire" was taken there from its place in the state capitol rotunda in Austin, and Gov. James V. Allred of Texas and Gov. Philip LaFollette of Wisconsin went along to take part in the ceremonies. The party then went to Huntsville, where Gen. Sam Houston gathered an army of Texans to fight the Mexicans, and there Gov. Hill McAlister of Tennessee made the address. San Antonio and other cities followed on the program, and the celebrations will continue for months, reaching a climax in the opening on June 6 of the centennial exposition at Dallas.

Removal of Gen. Hagood Stirs Up Big Row

SUMMARY removal of Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood from his command of the Eighth Corps area because of his critical expressions concerning the WPA and other New Deal activities stirred up a pretty row in Washington. Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, signed the order to Hagood, by order of the secretary of war and the President. The Republicans in congress, backed up by Tom Blanton of Texas and some other Democrats, assailed the action vigorously, and Senator Metcalf of Rhode Island introduced a resolution for an inquiry into the incident on behalf of "free speech."

Gen. Hagood

Breaking its "usual rule of silence," the War department made public a letter from General Craig to Secretary Dern, declaring Hagood's record was "marked by repeated examples of lack of self-control, irresponsible and intemperate statements."

Hagood had told a house subcommittee that it was "almost impossible" to get WPA's "stage money" for "anything worthwhile." These remarks, said Craig, "can only be characterized as flippant in tone and entirely uncalled for and designed to bring ridicule and contempt upon civil agencies of the government."

Accusing him of "thinly veiled" opposition and "contempt" toward War department policies in the past, Craig pointed out as "contemptuous" Hagood's references to CCC activities as "hobbies," "collecting postage stamps" and "taking an interest in butterflies."

Vandenberg Won't Enter Ohio's Primary

SENATOR VANDENBERG of Michigan has formally declined to enter the Ohio Presidential primary, but does not bar himself from consideration for the Republican nomination. Writing to the Republican state committee of Ohio, in reply to an inquiry as to whether he would run, Vandenberg asserted his "sole interest" in the Republican convention was that it should make "the wisest possible decisions respecting both party leadership and party policies."

To conform to Ohio law, the Borah forces have found the required "second choice." This is Frank E. Gannett of Rochester, N. Y., publisher of a chain of newspapers, who has agreed to fight alongside the Idaho senator for Ohio's 52 delegates, to receive the votes of those pledged to Borah should the nomination of the latter be blocked in the convention. Mr. Gannett has expressed the belief that Borah is the one member of the party "most likely to recover the upstate New York vote," and he also holds the view that the Idahoan would be the strongest candidate in the agricultural states.

Nye Says War Profits Bill Must Be Considered

SENATOR NYE of North Dakota is determined that the war profits bill devised by his munitions committee shall be brought up for consideration at this session. Indeed he more than threatens a filibuster to bring this about, if necessary, to get the measure out of the hands of a finance subcommittee which is headed by Tom Connally of Texas.

The Nye bill provides for stiff taxes on earnings and virtual confiscation of individual income above $10,000 a year in time of war.

Georgia's Fiscal Affairs in a Serious Tangle

GOV. EUGENE TALMADGE is virtually financial dictator of Georgia, because the general assembly did not enact an appropriation bill, but he is having his troubles finding funds to carry on. He declared there was a "plan hatched in Washington" to hamper him, and ousted State Treasurer George Hamilton and Controller General William Harrison for refusal to honor treasury warrants. Hamilton removed all the money from the treasury vault to a bank. Three state departments provided funds for temporary operation of fiscal affairs.

Then depository banks, the United States post office and the state's attorney general took a hand. Mail addressed to the suspended officers was impounded, cutting off the flow of tax remittances; all but one of the depository banks refused to honor state checks pending a court decision on the legal status of de facto officials; and Attorney General M. J. Yeomans, once cited by Talmadge as an authority for his actions, declared his position had been misinterpreted.

Firestone TIRES RUN up to 28° COOLER
THIS IS WHY THEY GIVE YOU More Dependable Service AND SAVE YOU MONEY

Firestone
NON-SKID BALLOON

Every truck operator knows that internal friction causes heat and heat is the greatest destroyer of tire life. The only way to counteract friction and heat is by Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process which soaks the cords in liquid rubber, saturating and coating each tiny cotton fiber and strand within the cord, counteracting friction and heat at their very source. As a result of this patented process, Firestone Tires run up to 28° cooler than tires built without Gum-Dipped Cords.

This is why Firestone Tires are used by thousands and thousands of truck operators from coast to coast, including the largest transportation fleets. These operators choose tires strictly on performance... they know that Firestone Tires give them more dependable service at lowest cost per mile. The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON D. C.

Washington.—A routine War department order came through the other day which said, cryptically:

Thunder Over Hagood

"By direction of the President, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, U. S. A., is relieved from assignment to the command of the Eighth corps area and further duty at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Major General Hagood will proceed to his home and await orders."

Each day, there comes from the War department anywhere from two or three to a couple of dozen orders by which army officers are transferred from one post to another, from one assignment to another or given new instructions. It is not unusual at all. That is why I said at the outset of this item that the order respecting General Hagood was routine. But it was routine only in the language that was used. Otherwise, it was significant. Just how significant it will prove to be remains as a secret to be unfolded by the future. Suffice to say that seldom has one minor incident of government administration created such a storm as this army order because it has become a political issue. General Hagood is the third ranking officer in the United States army. He has been in the service something like forty years. His record is generally regarded as distinguished, but at the same time he has never been a pussyfoot. He has spoken boldly, sometimes too boldly and sometimes out of turn, yet I think it is generally agreed that General Hagood is sincere.

But, to go back of the "routine army order" by which he was summarily relieved of his command at the important army post of Fort Sam Houston, we find a record of General Hagood's testimony before an appropriations committee in the house of representatives. In that testimony, General Hagood spoke with his usual bluntness. He apparently offended somebody when he did it. His testimony has been criticized and commended, the War department and Secretary Dern have been attacked and defended and even President Roosevelt has been dragged into the controversy because somewhere, somehow New Deal opposition has become convinced that President Roosevelt and Secretary Dern punished General Hagood by removing him from his post because he dared to point out flukes and flaws and ridiculous aspects in New Deal policies of handling taxpayers' money.

* * *

General Hagood was called before the appropriations committee by its chairman and told to express his candid sentiments, his honest convictions and any constructive suggestions he might have respecting improvement of the United States army.

Speaks Freely

The general, somewhat blusteringly, related to the committee that the army must have additional housing facilities. He related conditions in many army posts and asserted that many persons on relief were accorded better places to live than Uncle Sam's soldiers.

That part aroused no particular controversy but when General Hagood told the committee of the difficulty the responsible army authorities have in getting money with which to provide better housing for the soldiers, he stepped on administration toes by saying that it was more difficult to get "five cents for a pencil than a thousand dollars with which to teach Civilian Conservation corps boys new hobbies or boondoggling." He said he could get a hundred dollars to build a gravel walk and a rose garden but could not get ten dollars with which to repair a broken steam pipe in an army barracks.

The next outburst by the general brought forth his description that money being handled by Relief Administrator Hopkins was stage money; that nothing worth while or of a permanent character was being done with that money and the explanation that he called it stage money because "it is being handed around and you can do nothing with it in the end." His plea was that some of these funds which he said were being otherwise wasted should be employed to build structures of concrete and steel "that can be shown to our grandchildren 50 years from now."

In hearing General Hagood's testimony, the committee understood that the War department had given him permission to speak freely. Indeed, such assurance had been passed along to the committee from the War department but apparently the War department did not know what General Hagood had on his chest. If it had known, it certainly could have expected exactly such expressions because General Hagood never has pulled his punches. He has said each time what he thought.

* * *

By saying what he thought, however, he undoubtedly moved across the line of discretion. Army officers must guard their speech. They are under disciplinary regulations. It has to be so. Otherwise, we would see frequent outbursts by army officers in opposition to established policies, rules and regulations and it takes no stretch of the imagination to see what a disordered mess would result.

* * *

On the other hand, General Hagood was certainly privileged to believe that his observations were being made only for the committee of congress before which he appeared.

Then the Storm Broke

The doors to the committee room were closed and locked and only committee members were in attendance. It happened, however, that subsequently the stenographic record of the committee hearings was made public and when that happened, the storm broke. Almost simultaneously with the removal of the bond of secrecy on the committee record, the War department order dehorning General Hagood was written. When that happened, the politicians literally blew up. They shouted charges of censorship, terrorism by the President and Secretary Dern, dictatorship, political punishment and half a dozen other vicious accusations.

A few of the administration spokesmen in congress defended the War department action. Almost in the same breath these administration spokesmen sought conferences with Secretary Dern and others in an attempt to persuade the President and the war secretary to soften the punishment but those mores were futile and Representative Blanton, Texas Democrat, shouted on the floor of the house that the Hagood punishment would cost the Democratic party "a million votes unless it were withdrawn."

As a part of the defense of the War department action, Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the army, made public his memorandum to the secretary of war respecting General Hagood's attitude and his testimony before the congressional committee. In the course of this 2,000-word memorandum, General Craig described General Hagood as a "wise-cracker," and he was probably correct in so far as General Hagood's remarks about stage money were concerned. Yet, I have found very few among the Washington observers whose opinions are worth while who saw in the Craig memorandum any real justification for the severe punishment meted out to General Hagood.

The order still stands. General Hagood is going to his home in Charleston, S. C., "to await orders." No one familiar with the army procedure expects that General Hagood ever again will be given an army assignment. He will be sixty-four years old next year and at that time automatically retires from active duty. So there is hardly any question but that General Hagood has held his last command.

The whole situation, suddenly come to be known as the Hagood case, is bound to be multiplied and mirrored. It will figure in the coming political campaign because, however justified the War department action may have been in the interest of discipline and good army administration, there are thousands of individuals who never will be convinced that the Hagood removal was for any purpose other than as punishment because he criticized New Deal spending policies.

* * *

Although there is, and can be, no connection between the two, it was the basis for a really humorous reaction that during the time when the controversy raged over General Hagood's removal from his Texas army post, a federal government committee was busily engaged in making plans for federal participation in the Texas Centennial exposition which opens at Dallas June 6. Uncle Sam is spending $3,000,000—the largest sum congress ever has authorized for federal participation in such a show—so that twenty-odd government agencies can display to exposition visitors what the government has done with its billions since the cards were shuffled for the New Deal.

The Agriculture department, as usual, will be represented by the largest of all federal exhibits. The Commerce department and the State, War, Navy, Treasury, Justice, Post Office, Interior and Labor departments will have their booths or buildings. The Federal Housing administration and the Farm Credit administration will be there with displays of their wares, and the Public Health service will attempt to further the cause of health in its usual splendid fashion.

One unusual feature of the government's participation will be a negro building in which it will tell the story of the negro race and its progress since the first slaves were brought into America. Plans call for the use of negro labor in the construction of this exhibit building and as far as possible negroes will prepare the exhibits.

The Bridal Veil

Why the bride wears a veil at her wedding has been the subject of many an argument among scholars. Some authorities believe that the bridal veil originated in the ancient practice of hiding the bride's face to show her submission. Others contend the opposite—that the veil originally was an emblem of independence

Clarissa—The Farmers State Bank is installing a complete burglar alarm system.

Duluth—One of the Great Lakes' most famous vessels, the whaleback ship Christopher Columbus, is being dismantled at the Manitowoc, Wis., shipyards after 44 years of service.

Minneapolis—Income of the state liquor control commission showed a net increase of $61,577.68 for the first two months of 1936 over the corresponding period in 1935, David R. Arundel, commissioner, said.

St. Paul—Minnesota farmers received $32,817,104 in AAA rental and benefits from the time the program started in 1933 to the end of last year, including $26,890,577 in corn-hog payments, $4,900,723 in wheat, $932,722 in sugar beets and $93,080 in tobacco.

Minneapolis—Engaged in a survey of mortality among pheasants resulting from the extreme cold weather of January and February, the state game and fish division urged persons finding dead game birds to communicate with their local game wardens. The wardens will ship birds in good state of preservation to University Farm for examination.

Hopkins — Moderate temperatures thawed the surface but seven feet below at the county buildings on the Hopkins fairgrounds, a six-inch water main froze up tight. W. E. Duckett, county highway engineer, sent a pipe-thawing crew to the building. He explained the thaw acted on the icecream freezer principle, driving the frost deep into the ground.

St. James—Mrs. Susan Doolittle, who came to Minnesota in a covered wagon from New York 75 years ago, celebrated her 103d birthday anniversary here. In good health despite her advanced age, Mrs. Doolittle was feted by the Women's Relief Corps at a birthday party. Among those present were three great-great-grandchildren, and several great-grandchildren.

Minneapolis—Addressing leaders of civic and sportsmen's organizations who met to discuss plans for the third annual Northwest Sportsmen's show at the Minneapolis auditorium April 11 to 18, George H. Bradley, director of the Minnesota tourist bureau, urged citizens to do their utmost to develop the state as a center for recreation and vacation activities.

St. Cloud—A hunger strike among the 1,100 inmates of St. Cloud reformatory was broken up when officials set out to crush the rebellion against prison regulations by placing the three ringleaders in solitary confinement. The rest of the inmates except for about 200 who took no part in the strike, were closely guarded in their cells and fears that the demonstration might develop into a riot subsided.

St. Paul—Younger Republicans of Minnesota received an official call for a state convention to be held in St. Paul, Saturday, March 28. The session will be sponsored by the Young Republican League of Minnesota and will bring delegates from counties throughout the state. State and district officers will be selected and the formulation of an affirmative policy on matters of vital importance will be discussed.

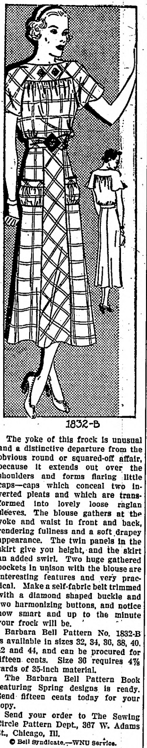
Duluth—Heavy ice formations ranging in thickness from 12 to 35 inches along shores of Lake Superior in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan are reported by the Duluth branch of the hydrographic office. In the Duluth-Superior harbor the ice averages about 35 inches, extending beyond vision on the lake is ice 25 inches in thickness. The ice is 24 inches thick at Two Harbors and 30 inches at Grand Marais.

Tracy—A mother and her son and daughter were burned to death here when fire swept their home. The victims were Mrs. Andrew Stahowiak, 50; her daughter, Victoria, 30, and her son, Frank, 21, publisher of the Tracy Daily Reminder. Andrew Stahowiak escaped with serious burns. Mrs. Stahowiak was trapped with her children in their second floor bedroom when she returned to rescue them. She had followed her husband to the door after they had been awakened by the crackling flames.

St. Paul—A double job was started by Minnesota's old age pension distribution organization. Besides the launching of the program for administering the law, which went into effect March 1, there still is the problem of overcoming federal objections, which have held up federal funds of from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000. Without the federal aid, the amount available for pensions would be cut approximately in half. Leading the effort to settle matters with the federal social security board is Governor Olson now vacationing at Tucson, Ariz. The governor conferred with Washington by long distance telephone to find out just what the objections are based on, and he is endeavoring to work out a solution.

St. Paul—Sharply slashing into relief staffs of the state and of counties, several hundred persons who have been connected with relief agencies in Minnesota are about to be dropped, L. P. Zimmerman, state administrator, announced. Economy is the order of the day as a result of two developments: Refusal of the federal government to help further with direct relief, thus throwing the burden on the state and on counties and turning over to counties of the responsibility of administering relief.

Alluring Daytime Frock With Distinctive Yoke



1832-B

The yoke of this frock is unusual and a distinctive departure from the obvious round or squared-off affair, because it extends out over the shoulders and forms flaring little caps—caps which conceal two inverted pleats and which are transformed into lovely loose raglan sleeves. The blouse gathers at the yoke and waist in front and back, rendering fullness and a soft drapey appearance. The twin panels in the skirt give you height, and the skirt an added swirl. Two huge gathered pockets in unison with the blouse are interesting features and very practical. Make a self-fabric belt trimmed with a diamond shaped buckle and two harmonizing buttons, and notice how smart and up to the minute your frock will be.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1832-B is available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44, and can be procured for fifteen cents. Size 36 requires 4⅞ yards of 35-inch material.

For 80 years, Ferry-Morse Seed Co., America's greatest scientific seed growing organization, through continuous yearly tests and with infinite care, has protected market and home gardeners against deterioration in seed quality.

Our foundation stock is developed at The Ferry-Morse Seed Breeding Institute Stations at Rochester, Mich., and Salinas, Cal. This purebred stock is then used for seed production on our own farms, or under our direct supervision. The seed crops from this stock are sold only after thorough tests have shown that they are of proper quality and germination.

That is why — North, South, East, West — you can buy seeds from the Ferry display in your neighborhood store with the greatest assurance that they will reproduce true to type and quality.

Lake's Name Changed

The region known as Crater Lake National park, Oregon, has known several different names since it was first explored by whites. Deep Blue lake was the first designation bestowde upon it by the palefaces. The choice was certainly descriptively accurate. Not even the storied Mediterranean is more intensely azure. Mystery lake succeeded this title—another appropriate selection, Lake Majesty was later chosen as its name. Since 1869, however, when a party of pioneers visited this Oregon wonderland, the waters have been known as Crater lake.

DR. BILLILGS TALKS ON TURKEY REARING

Modern methods of turkey production were discussed by Dr. W. A. Billings extension turkey specialisa, at meetings held at various points in the county on Thursday and Friday of last week.

For a number of years it was possible to grow turkeys on open range with a fair degree of success, but with an ever growing disease problem, the importance of raising turkeys under confinement on clean ground away from chickens cannot be overemphasized, said Dr. Billings. Not only should turkeys and chickens be kept well separated, but turkey range should be rotated over a period of three years or more to cut down disease losses.

Although there is every reason to believe that production will be greater and prices lower this year than last, turkey growing will offer an attractive opportunity to growers who will keep costs down by studying their problems, and employing approved methods.

A general plan for turkey production including care of breeding stock, incubation, brooding, and rearing of poults was outlined by Dr. Billings.

A breeding flock should have suitable protection from severe weather and must have suitable feed if early eggs are to be gotten. The breeding flock should have been receiving an egg mash ration at least since February. Such a ration may be purchased ready mixed or may be made by mixing equal parts of ground corn, ground oats, wheat middlings, wheat bran, and meat scraps, adding 3% cod-liver oil, 5% monemeal and 1% salt.

Vigorous young toms are to be preferred to heavy, mature birds. Damage to hens may be reduced by fitting the toms' claws with pieces of small-bore rubber tubing. Convenient laying quarters should be provided.

Eggs should preferably not be stored over 10 days or two weeks and should be turned each day. A storage temperature of 50 to 55 degrees is desirable.

Incubator hatching is preferable to the natural method. Most of the incubators now on the market will give good satisfaction if instructions are followed. In this territory it is preferable to have hatching take place during the first two weeks in May.

The use of a brooder house and hover is preferable to hen brooding for the purpose of sanitation and economy. If hens are used for hatching, they should first be thoroughly deloused.

A brooder house of size 10x12 will house about 165 poults. Starting feed may be any good commercial starting mash or may be made up similarly in the aforementioned egg mash except that it should be finely ground and oat flour should be substituted for ground oats. One quart of cod liver oil per 100 lb is sufficient. A small amount of oyster shells and greens may well be provided. After a week a small amount of scratch feed, equal parts of finely cracked wheat and corn may be provided.

At about eight weeks of age, poults are removed to the rearing grounds, an enclosure on clean ground from one to two hundred yards from the buildings. An eighth of an acre is sufficient for 200 to 300 birds at this stage. At this time a growing ration of equal parts ground corn, ground oats, (hulled preferred) wheat bran, wheat middlings, and meat scraps with 5% bonemeal and 1% salt is provided. Oyster shells and bonemeal should be available also. Milk or water may be used as beverages, milk being preferred. If desired, this ration may be fed right up to the marketing time.

Turkeys of varying ages do not do well together, therefore groups from different hatches should be kept in separate enclosures. The enclosures should be changed to fresh ground as necessary, or about each month.

Growers should not yield to the temptation of letting turkeys out in the grain fields in the fall as the resulting disease problem may be disastrous.

For further information, it is suggested that farmers obtain Special Bulletin No. 124 "Talking Turkey", which is available at the county agent's office.

According to R. M. Douglass, county agent, an attempt is being made to have Dr. Billings contact turkey growers of the county at various times throughout the spring and summer. With this assistance, this community should before long regain its place among turkey growing regions that it relinquished the past few years.

FIRST CROWS ARRIVE

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

March 3rd. 1936

Pursuant to law the Board of County Commissioners of Pennington County, Minnesota, met at the office of the County Auditor at 10:00 A. M. March 3rd, 1936.

Roll was called and all members were present.

The minutes of the meeting of February 4th, 1936 were read and approved.

Moved by Commissioner Mulry and seconded by Commissioner Mandt, that Sam Hanson be furnished round trip transportation from Thief River Falls to the University of Minnesota Hospital. Carried.

Moved by Commissioner Mandt and seconded by Commissioner Mulry that assignment of securities furnished by the Union State Bank of Thief River Falls, $10,000.00 U. S. Treasury Notes and $5,000.00 Waseca County Drainage Bonds, be approved. Carried.

Moved by Commissioner Bredeson and seconded by Commissioner Mulry that Ralph Erickson be furnished round trip transportation from Thief River Falls to University of Minnesota Hospital. Carried.

The Members of the Town Board of the Township of North appeared before the Board and requested the graveling of a road in Rustad's Addition. This request will be given consideration when the Road Program for 1936 is laid out.

Petition of the residents of the Township of Silverton in regard to the extension of County Aid Road No. 4 was read and ordered filed to be considered further when the State of Minnesota has made the gas tax allotment.

A petition from the residents of the Township of Sanders and Bray requesting the graveling and grading of County Aid Road No. 1, was read and ordered filed to be given further consideration when the State makes the gas tax allotment.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Roy who moved its adoption:

WHEREAS: Each year when the frost is leaving the ground, the Highway Department of the State of Minnesota has posted a gross load limit on the State Trunk Highways; and,

WHEREAS: Heavily loaded motor trucks have detoured on to State Aid Roads of Pennington County as a result of the State Trunk Highways being posted with a gross load limit; and,

WHEREAS: This has resulted in heavy damage to the State Aid Roads of Pennington County entailing considerable extra expense each year to again place these roads in condition for motor travel:

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: That the County Highway Engineer be, and is hereby instructed to have signs made and post each State Aid Road of Pennington County with the same number of pounds gross load limit as is placed on State Trunk Highways in Pennington County, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That the Sheriff of Pennington County is requested to deputize each Pennington County Highway Maintenance Patrolman to enforce this regulation, and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That the State Aid Roads in Pennington County will remain posted with a gross load limit until such time as the County Highway Engineer shall determine that these roads can again carry heavy loads without excessive damage.

The foregoing resolution was seconded by Commissioner Bredeson and on being put to a vote was unanimously adopted.

Moved by Commissioner Lee and seconded by Commissioner Mulry, that Ed. Korstad, Korstad Mercantile Co., located in Highlanding Twp. be granted an On Sale and an Off Sale Malt Liquor license for the year of 1936. Carried.

Moved by Commissioner Bredeson and seconded by Commissioner Lee that the Board meet as a committee on March 4, 5, 11 and 12, 1936, to further consider Old Age Assistance Applications. Carried.

The following requests for adjustment of Personal Property taxes were approved and referred to the Minnesota Tax Commission for approval:

Alps Not Mountains

Not every one knows that, strictly speaking, the Alps are not mountains, says a writer in the Boston Globe. An Alp is really a local name for the elevated and little inhabited meadow and pasture tracts of Switzerland and the Tyrol. It is really a lovely mountainous valley under cultivation.

Oldest U. S. Printing

The first piece of printing to be done in the United States was a broadside published in 1639. It was printed on the press of Stephen Daye at Cambridge, Mass., and was entitled "The Freeman's Oath."

CALL FOR DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION

Pursuant to the authority vested in me, as Chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Pennington County, Minnesota, and by direction of John F. D. Meighen, Chairman of the Minnesota Democratic State Committee legally composed of the majority of the Chairmen of the Democratic County Committees and representative Democrats of the State, I hereby call a Democratic County Convention of Pennington County, Minnesota, to be held at the Court House in Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on Thursday, April 16, 1936, at One o'clock P. M.

The purpose of this County Convention is to elect one delegate and one alternate at large, and fourteen (14) additional delegates and alternates to the Democratic State Convention legally called and to be held at the Auditorium in Saint Paul, Minnesota, on Tuesday, April 21, 1936, and also to elect a County Committee for Pennington County.

Party usage and custom in Pennington County does not require precinct caucuses, and the aforesaid County Convention shall be a mass convention, and as such, elect its county delegates to the State Convention and such County Committee.

Every legal voter in said precinct who affirms that he voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for President, in 1932, and that he intends to vote for the Democratic nominee for President in 1936, and every legal voter who did not vote for President in 1932 and intends to vote for the Democratic Nominee for President in 1936, shall be eligible to serve as a delegate at the said mass county convention, and be eligible to serve as a delegate to the State Convention. However, no person who is not a legal voter in the County shall be a delegate at the County Convention.

H. O. CHOMMIE,
County Chairman

Ammonium Nitrate

Ammonium nitrate, an explosive, is something of an anomaly. On the basis of theoretical considerations of heat measurements it should be highly explosive. Yet when pure it is non-inflammable and cannot be made to explode. But when mixed with other substances, such as aluminum powder or TNT, it can be touched off to give as good an explosion as the theory predicts. It is one of the ingredients of the safety explosive, nitramon.

Wolves Destroyed the Sheep

It was almost impossible for the early Ohio settlers to raise wool due to the abundance of wolves, which devoured the sheep.

Meaning of the Name Hafiz

The Persian name Hafiz is really only a title meaning gifted with a good memory. It was bestowed upon the poet as a pupil because he could recite the whole Koran. It has clung to him by fame instead of his real name, which was, in full, Muhammad ad-Din, or Mohammed, the sun of religion.

NOTICE OF EXPIRATION OF TIME OF REDEMPTION

Office of County Auditor,
County of Pennington,
State of Minnesota—ss.

TO JULIUS TOSTENSON:

(1) You are hereby notified that the following piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Lots 10, 11 and 12, Block 2, Hemmingsen's Addition to Thief River Falls

IS NOW ASSESSED IN YOUR NAME.

(2) That on the 11th day of May, 1931, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment duly given and made in and by the District Court in said County of Pennington on the 13th day of March, 1931, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year 1929, for said County of Pennington, the above described piece or parcel of land was offered for sale, and no one bidding upon said offer, said piece or parcel, was bid in for the State of Minnesota for the sum of ($40.11), Forty and 11-100 Dollars.

(3) That thereafter, and on the 12th day of August, 1935, the said piece or parcel not then having been redeemed from said sale, was sold and conveyed at public sale by the County Auditor of said County, pursuant to the statute, to an actual purchaser for the sum of One Hundred thirty-eight and 54-100 Dollars and no cents.

(4) That the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of ($138.54), One Hundred thirty-eight Dollars and fifty-four cents, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on ($138.54), One Hundred thirty-eight and 54-100 Dollars from said 12th day of August, 1935, to the day such redemption is made.

(5) That the tax certificate of sale issued to said purchaser has been presented to me by the holder thereof and this notice requested.

(6) That the time for the redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said tax sale will expire twelve months after the service of this notice, and the filing of proof of such service in my office.

WITNESS my hand and official seal this 21st day of February, 1936.

A. M. SENSTAD,
Auditor Pennington County, Minnesota.
By M. L. R., Deputy.

WHIST TOURNAMENT SET FOR MARCH 25

In response to numerous inquiries and requests from people in the surrounding territory, the B. M. Club decided at its meeting Monday night to sponsor another whist tournament. The first meeting will be held next Wednesday night, March 25, at the Bilden & Olsen hall. The same rules as were used at previous meetings will prevail for this gathering. After the session, lunch will be served at both cafes. Owing to uncertain road conditions, it was not definitely decided to have more than one meeting. If those who attend next Wednesday should so desire, there will be other sessions, the dates of which will be fixed at the Wednesday night meeting. The Club extends a cordial invitation to all whist players in the community to be present, and the battle between the Reds and Blues will undoubtedly be as keen as any of previous years. Everyone should be on hand at eight o'clock which will insure completion of the games at a reasonable time.

PROJECT MEET DELAYED

The sewing project to be put on in this county this spring, will be delayed about a month. Because of bad road conditions in other parts of the state, the specialists have been unable to complete their work there. As planned now, first meeting of leaders will be held shortly after Easter.

WINDBREAK PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED AT HAZEL TUESDAY

Farmers interested in getting first hand information on the establishment of windbreaks will have an opportunity to do so by attending a meeting to be held at the Hazel school at 8:00 on Tuesday, March 24, says R. M. Douglass county agent.

Parker Anderson, extension forester from University Farm will be present and will discuss the establishment of the standard windbreak and also the supplementing of existing native protection. Mr. Anderson will also discuss procurement of tree stock including the establishment of a small tree nursery and general care of the growing windbreak.

The drought has severely affected both native growth and artificial plantings, says Mr. Douglass. In many cases, groves have run their course and are dying a natural death. To be insured of needed protection for the farmstead in years to come, plantings should be started now.

INDIAN SHOWS UP WHITE BROTHERS FOR HONESTY

New Ulm.—A pair of binoculars lost in the wide open spaces of Alberta can generally be given up by the owner as gone for good, and when Dr. Albert Fritsche, New Ulm physician, suffered that experience he felt as might be expected and took the loss philosophically. Dr. Fritsche trekked northward last fall in quest of caribou, mountain sheep, bear and other big game, penetrating the primeval wilderness beyond Jasper Park, Alberta, Canada. Two days "out from civilization," Dr. Fritsche discovered his field glasses, an expensive pair, were missing. Last week, months after his return, he received a letter from J. F. Smith, grocer and provisioner at Hinton Trail, Alberta, advising that an Indian trapper had found a pair of binoculars, and wondering whether anyone in Dr. Fritsche's party had lost them. The Indian had turned the field glasses over to the storekeeper, in spite of the fact that there were no means of identification on them, and they were found in a region where there was no human habitation for miles around. Dr. Fritsche received his glasses, and the Indian a generous reward for his extreme honesty.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

A special meeting of the county board is to be held Friday this week.

A meeting of the local 4-H Club will be held at the school building Wednesday, March 25 at 8:00 P. M.

Clint Martz is back home after having spent the winter months in the woods near International Falls.

A large crowd attended the baseball benefit dance given Tuesday evening at the local hall, and a neat sum was realized for the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Black have gone to make their home at Thief River Falls where Mr. Black will have charge of a service station the coming season.

Meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association held Friday at the school building was well attended. The band furnished the program as well as serving the lunch.

Some flocks of geese have been noted winging their way to summer nesting grounds in Canada. This is a very good sign that warmer weather may be expected soon.

W. P. Wilson was elected supervisor, Carl Swanson was elected clerk, and $450.00 was voted for township purposes at the annual township election held Tuesday in River Falls township.

Lester Olson returned Saturday after attending the Land O'Lakes convention at Minneapolis as a delegate from the local creamery association. While enroute home, re motored to Grand Forks and was accompanied home by Mrs. Olson who had spent a few days there at the home of her sister.

Dr. David Bryn-Jones, Minneapolis, will deliver the Northwest School Commencement address in the auditorium at that school Thursday evening, Mar. 26th. Among the candidates for graduation at the Northwest School at this time are listed several from Pennington county among whom are Stella Omundson and James Weckwerth of this community.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday evening. A very good attendance was noted.

Ed. Moren is the owner of a neat, new Plymouth coupe which he bought this week at Thief River Falls.

The Ladies Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran church will hold its postponed meeting Friday afternoon at the church parlors.

The village had a crew of men at work yesterday opening the gutters along the walks in the business section. This will be of material help when spring sets in.

At annual spring election held Tuesday in Black River township, Wm. Novak was reelected supervisor, and Felix Anderson was re-elected clerk. $850 was voted for township purposes.

Bill Engh moved in his camp car Tuesday after finishing wood cutting southeast of here. He placed the car on the old lumber yard site, and will use part of the grounds for a wood yard.

Because of drifted snow, the school busses have had much difficulty this week getting around the routes. It is expected much trouble will be experienced for the next two or three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Olson of Moorhead, visited during last week-end at the John Gunstad home east of the village. Mr. Olson, who has been in charge of the seed department of Land O'Lakes at Thief River the past year or more, will soon return to Moorhead to open a seed house of his own.

John Brandt Reelected Land O'Lakes President

John Brandt was re-elected president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., at the annual meeting of the directors which followed the annual election of the dairy co-operative late Friday.

Other officers elected were Archie Brovold, Ettrick, Wis., first vice-president; Stuart McLeod, Thief River Falls, Minn., second vicepresident; Frank W. White, Marshall, Minn., secretary, and E. G. Johnson, St. Paul, treasurer.

County Board Considers Pension Applications

The county board met in adjoned session Tuesday and Wednesday for the purpose of making a preliminary check of the large number of applications for old-age pensions now on file. Nothing definite had been heard from Washington Wednesday as to federal contributions to the Minnesota pension fund, altho the state board of control announced that as a result of minor revisions in administrative regulations of the state system the allotment of approximately $4,300,000 in federal funds to Minnesota is assured.

Local People Invited to Attend Reunion Saturday

Pennington county residents who plan to be in the Twin Cities this week-end are invited to attend the joint annual reunion of former residents of the Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire communities, scheduled to be held Saturday evening, March 21, at the Curtis hotel in Minneapolis. The invitation is extended by Dr. H. W. Froehlich, president of the Thief River Falls association, and Mrs. Milton Schantzen, chairman of the St. Hilaire group.

T. R. POSTOFFICE MOVED

The postoffice at Thief River Falls moved Saturday from the former Citizens State bank building to the new federal building which was recently completed. The new place gives Thief River Falls one of the finest postoffice buildings to be ound in a city of that size in northern Minnesota.

SPRING SHOW IS NOW IN PROGRESS

The ninth annual auto show, style show and spring exposition opened today at Thief River Falls and continues until Saturday night. A style show was the feature for today. Friday and Saturday there will be vaudeville acts, a musical comedy, etc., which will be followed by a dance each evening. The auto exhibit is exceptionally fine this year, a large number of new models being on display.

NEW LIBRARY IS SERVING PUBLIC

The new village library which is a PWA project sponsored by the village and local organizations, has received necessary supplies and is now open and ready to serve the public. This is a community project and as such, must be supported by all if it is to be successful. A request is made to all to share their reading matter with others. Bring books or magazines, which you are willing to have loaned out, to the library. Librarian Viola Pearson will give information regarding the type of material that can be used. Chairs have been provided for those who wish to read magazines or books at the library room. Library rules of "quiet" will be carried out so readers will not be disturbed. Following is a schedule of hours at the library. This may be cut out and kept for future reference:

MAKING BEE HIVES

Albert Brink and August Berglund brought in about ten thousand feet of lumber this week and have started manufacturing bee hives in their plant. They will make up several hundreds of hives for outside parties besides making some hundreds for themselves and other local apiarists. They expect to have the plant in continuous operation until about May 1st.

Newfolden Boy Killed in Crawling Thru Fence Carrying Loaded Rifle

Roy Anderson, 19 years old, living one and one-half miles south of Newfolden, was instantly killed Sunday afternoon while hunting rabbits near his home. While crawling thru a fence with his 22-caliber rifle, the weapon in some manner was discharged, and the bullet entered his head near the center of his forehead, death resulting immediately. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Anderson of the Newfolden community.

Edgar Johnson, principal of schools at Lancaster, motored down Friday night and spent until Sunday at the Johnson Cafe of which he is part owner.

This is Owen.
Who is Owen?
Owen is a motorcycle cop.
What is a motorcycle cop?

A motorcycle cop is a fellow who proves that the manufacturer was wrong when he told you the car could travel 60 miles an hour anywhere.

What is Owen doing?

Owen is hiding behind a hedge.

Why is Owen hiding behind a hedge?

Because, half the fun of life, as he sees it, is taking people by surprise.

Will Owen arrest anybody?

Aren't there other people for Owen to catch?

Yes, the road is full of irresponsible bus drivers, pickled college boys, daredevil chauffeurs for the owners of sixteen-cylinder sedans and hedge-hopping rum runners.

Then why arrest the paperhanger with the sick wife?

It is one of life's mysteries.

Once in a while but it is generally a mistake.

Can't something be done about it?

Yes.

What?

The paperhanger can be made to go for medicine by trolley or bicycle.

PSALMS OF LIFE

Music

To study music is a thing
  That every one should try;
It helps develop culture, which Nobody can deny.

Piano lessons may be hard
  And trying, it is true,
But think of all the joy that they
  Will some day bring to you.

The flute and fiddle both are nice—
  And, if you concentrate,
A billing in concert hall
  May some day be your fate.

The harp and zither give sweet notes,
  And if you'd play them well
Just study with devotion keen
  And you'll make music swell.

Decide what instrument you like—
  Then resolutely aim
To practice morning, noon and night
  And prove that you are game.

Keep at it with unbending will
And practice all the day
So that your friends will sweetly cry,
  "My, how that child can play!"

Perfect yourself at any cost
  And in ten years or so
You'll find some fellow twice as good
  UPON THE RADIO!

THE STORY OF ALFIE

1—Alfie was what is known as a Big Boy.

2—He had a wonderful physique.

3—When he was only sixteen years of age he stood six feet two inches in his bare feet and had shoulders like a varsity fullback.

4—And he had a personality to match.

5—Folks called him a Greek god.

6—He was the kind of lad people turned around to look at.

7—And Alfie liked it.

8—He was conscious of his physical superiority. He knew he had an air about him.

9—He grew so accustomed to commanding attention that he craved the limelight.

10—People had an idea he would go into the movies or on the stage.

11—Alfie tried them but was a flop. He had to have personal applause.

12—Ultimately he found his niche.

"What's the most beautiful spot in this region?"

"A one spot," said Bronco Bob, "if I'm drawing for an ace to head a royal flush."

"PIOUS LEROY" IS SENTENCED TO LIFE FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Youthful Killer Who Slew His Uncle and Aunt Is Center of Controversy.

Los Angeles.—They called him "Pious Leroy" and everybody who knew him was proud of him. Los Angeles rather specializes in pious young men and Leroy Drake was a very model of his kind—handsome, righteous, in conduct.

He was given to playing hymn tunes on his violin. He was as regular in his attendance at choir and Bible class. All this at nineteen. He lived with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steinhauer, elderly folks, who were proud of him, indeed.

Now that he has murdered the uncle and aunt, there are still two schools of thought about Leroy. Some say he really wasn't pious at all that he was a hypocrite and only pretending. Others, say he was fully as pious as he seemed—and that was why he committed the murders!

Administers Poison.

There is this much to be said for the latter theory: That, during prohibition, some pious folk thought it better for people to die by poison booze than risk forming the dreadful booze habit. Leroy gave his dear uncle and aunt "coffee royales" made with sodium cyanide, then explained that he had done it for their own good.

He must have had some doubts, though, for he put the bodies in an auto and ran it off a wharf into the bay. There was a six-day interval during which the bodies lay in Los Angeles harbor.

Leroy's conduct, during those six days, signified release. He went to movies, made love, stepped out, threw a party, went speeding in a shiny new roadster. Only when he was before a judge on the charge of stealing a roadster—that was the scrape which had worried his foster-parents—did he again turn pious. And his piety so impressed his honor that Leroy was put on probation on the auto-stealing charge.

His high school sweetheart, Vula Hayden, had never found Leroy more genial or companionable than during those six days. Why, the goody-goody boy was turning human!

Explains "Good Deed."

Here's the pious boy's explanation of why he murdered the good old people who had raised him:

"I had caused my uncle and aunt so much heartache that I decided I'd done wrong to them and I thought giving them poison was the best way to right that wrong to save them from further hurt."

So he got some cyanide and put it into their coffee one Thursday night at supper.

Then he went over to Vula's house and took her to a movie, feeling, he said, relieved because his uncle and aunt had gone to Heaven.

Then he came up on the old auto-stealing charge and won probation.

After a few days, old Mr. Steinhauer's employer, concerned over his absence, notified authorities the man had disappeared. Then some forged checks showed up. When they asked Leroy about it he tried to fib a little, but soon told of his terrible deed. He entered a plea of insanity; then, taking matters out of his lawyers' hands, he withdrew his insanity plea and pleaded guilty.

The court gave him life imprisonment instead of the gallows.

Youth Lives After Dive of 125 Feet Into River

Youngstown, Ohio.—Mike Filo, sixteen, Youngstown youth, pulled a Steve Brody here—and lived to tell about it. He leaped 125 feet into the icy waters of the Mahoning river under the Market street bridge.

He came from the river without any broken bones and apparently suffering from little more than a pain in the neck and exposure.

"I guess I was crazy for a moment," he told police. "I just got the idea to jump and did."

He denied he was in trouble, and would not account further for his act. He also denied that he was prompted through reading stories of the famouse Steve.

A witness said he saw the boy dive head first, and that he landed in the deepest part of the river. He swam ashore and was hauled out.

Idle Four Years, He Gets $2,000 for His Honesty

Philadelphia.—Bill Duffy of Malvern, Pa., forty-three-year-old machinist's helper who just got a job after four years of unemployment, saw a string of "dirty beads" lying on the Paoli station platform. He picked them up and took them home. Because he did so he is $2,000 richer today.

The "dirty beads" were the $30,000 pearl necklace which had been lost by Mrs. John Barnes Townsend, of Radnor, Pa. The loss was advertised and the $2,000 reward offered. Bill said his wife and eight children are going to get some things and $500 is going in the bank.

Pig Swallows Diamond

Mechanic Falls, Maine.—Mrs. A. Roy lost her diamond ring, valued at $250. After an extensive search failed to disclose the ring, she gave it up as lost.

Three weeks later the ring was found when a butcher slaughtered a pig sent to him by Mrs. Roy.

Circus Man Subdues Tiger Barehanded

Calcutta.—A fight with a frenzied tiger while driving a saloon car was the ordeal of the manager of a touring circus. As he was driving down one of Calcutta's busiest streets, the cub made frenzied efforts to escape. Although normally docile, it had become unnerved by the roar of the street traffic. Stopping the car, the man tackled the animal barehanded. Although badly scratched and bruised, he managed to secure it after a fierce struggle. The cub will have no more rides, its owner vows.

MIRACLE OPERATION CURES STRANGE ILL

San Francisco Youth Starts to Learn to Live.

San Francisco.—A nineteen-year old boy who has never made a motion that his own brain dictated has started to learn to live.

For all of his nineteen years, the boy has been unable to walk. He could barely talk. Through all his waking moments, his body was wracked by involuntary, twisting movements.

At Stanford hospital here, eight days ago, the boy came out of an anesthetic after a brain operation such as had never before been performed on a human being.

Still, for the first time in 19 years.

Even more of a miracle, to him, the boy found he could move that arm, flex it, lift it, compel it by the power of his own brain to do what he wished to do.

It was the first voluntary motion he had ever made.

Today his surgeons, who performed the modern miracle, gave him more than an even chance to lead a normal life.

They explained that the twisting, squirming motions that drew the boy's face into grimaces and made any attempt at orderly activity grotesque, are of unknown cause. The condition might come from injuries to the brain at birth or infections from childhood diseases affecting the co-ordinating centers of the brain.

Recently J. G. Dusser de Barenne at Yale university showed that the outer layers of the brain cells can be thrown out of action through the application of heat.

It was this method the Stanford surgeons used.

Filipino Band Stirs Up Terror and Mocks Police

Manila.—In the jungle-covered mountains of Tayabas, in sight of Manila, roams a band of Loro Asedillo and "Captain" Kulas Encallado.

The very mention of their names strikes the residents of the barrios at the fot of the mountains with fear and the Philippine constabulary with rage.

The band has defied authorities for years, and has killed when capture seemed to threaten.

Because the townsfolk are afraid to give information concerning the outlaws, and because the Negritos, aborigines inhabiting the mountains, warn them of the approach of authorities, they have been able to escape constant efforts of the constabulary to apprehend them.

The exact number of Negritos in the mountains stretching along the backbone of Tayabas province is not known, but they are from several hundred to a thousand or more.

They hunt with arrows and spears, and wander from place to place. They have little contact with the Filipinos in the lowlands, although they occasionally trade in towns for a few necessities. Either through fear, friendship or both, the Negritos have proved the chief source of security for the bandits.

Oregon Forger Works Out Bad Check at $20 a Year

Portland, Ore.—John S. Davis, twenty-three-year-old forger, who figured out his pay after being sentenced to serve three years in McNeil Island federal penitentiary for raising a money order from $1.03 to $60.03, has decided the wage scale too low for work such as his. In raising the money order, Davis made exactly $59. When divided by three, however, it amounts to less than $20 per year for his work in prison.

Grave Digger Has Joke, Death Makes It Tragedy

Buffalo, N. Y.—Grave Digger John Vogelsang, like most men, had a standardized joke. While working on one grave he liked to say, "Well, I think I'll dig the next one for myself."

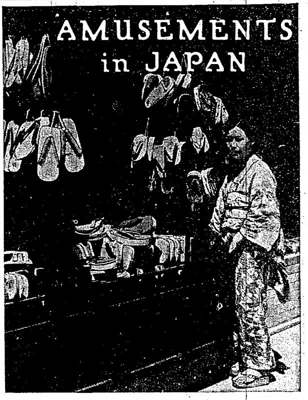
Suddenly he toppled over in the partly dug grave. A heart attack had killed him.

Dog Smokes Pipe

Vineyard Haven, Mass.—Four-year-old Punkie, a white pipe-smoking spaniel owned by Louise Hodge, has to have its nightly snack before going to sleep. Punkie smokes his pipe and has a peppermint pattie before retiring.

Mouse Becomes Pet

Forest City, Iowa.—A tiny field mouse, found by nine-year-old Gretchen Wicklund, has become so closely attached to its little mistress it follows her to school daily and often hops onto her desk.



AMUSEMENTS in JAPAN

A Sandal Shop in Tokyo.

NOT many years ago it was held up against the Japanese that they never indulged in athletics. Today there are in Tokyo two huge stadiums, one originally seating 65,000 people, but enlarged in 1931 to accommodate 80,000, the other 30,000, and on the days of baseball games there are few vacant seats.

With the exception of wrestlers, there are no professional athletes in Japan. Teams are made up largely of undergraduates in the various universities, and it is the intervarsity games which draw the largest crowds.

Baseball, skillfully and intelligently played, is as popular in Japan as in the United States, but it is not the only popular athletic sport. Rugger football is played everywhere and played well. As it is part of the army training and as something like 100,000 young men go through this training annually, rugger may well supersede baseball in popularity. Hockey and association football are played more and more and boxing is becoming popular. Wherever there is space in Tokyo, there is a tennis court. The Y. M. C. A. pool is always full of swimmers, as are the great outdoor pools in summer, and Japanese swimmers hold some world records. More and more rowing crews in racing shells are appearing on the rivers and lakes.

Golf clubs are springing up, and, as in America, the links are used largely by business men. At the army maneuver field, on the outskirts of the city, you can see magnificent riding. So the old accusation of lack of interest in athletic sports can no longer be made.

These modern games have not entirely driven out the old, purely Japanese sports. Thousands gather, as of old, to watch the wrestling matches, where the immensely fat men so well known in Japanese prints carry on their strange matches under the ancient rules. Archery is also popular among the chosen few, and the great matches are almost always sponsored by some of the imperial princes. It takes a strong man even to bend some of the tough old bows.

Athletics Build Up the Race.

It would be impossible to estimate what athletics are doing for the Japanese as a race. The Bible says that no man by taking thought can add a cubit to his stature, but there is no doubt that succeeding generations of Japanese are taller. When you meet young men in Tokyo, dressed in gymnasium costume, running through the streets; when you see the finely proportioned bodies of the boys in the Y. M. C. A. pool; when you go to a university graduation and see the students all together, you no longer think of the Japanese as a particularly "little people." With a better-regulated and better-balanced diet and with physical training from the earliest years, through all grades of school, the Japanese are growing up physically. They grew up mentally a long time ago.

It is said that the generation now reaching maturity is, on an average, an inch taller than the preceding generation. As a generalization, one should doubt this, but at the same time one feels sure it is true in the cities where modern ideas of exercise and diet are prevalent.

There is probably no phase of life Tokyo which more clearly shows the contrast between the old and the new than do the theaters. You go to the Kabuki-za or to the splendid Tokyo theater and there see ancient dramas given in the old style of acting; or you go around the corner to a movie theater and see the latest Hollywood production. One seems just as popular as the other and just as crowded.

The Kabuki and Tokyo theaters are enormous, thoroughly modern, handsome buildings. The orchestra seats are like those in an American theater, except that they are lower. The boxes have no seats, because people seem to prefer to sit on the floor, in the old style. The plays begin—there are generally three or four given in succession—from two until four o'clock in the afternoon and last until ten o'clock at night.

Huge Theater Stage.

The stage is enormous, the lighting and scenic effects superb. It is probably true that the Japanese were the first to have a revolving stage for quick shifts of scenery. The actors strut in the ancient style and chant their lines. In fact, if the lines are emotional, they are sung by the musicians at the sides of the stage, since it is not considered proper to show too great emotion.

But, in spite of all this, the actors—men, of course, take the women's parts, and a Japanese lady explained this as being necessary "because men are so much more graceful"—are really great and make a profound impression on any foreigner who has the intelligence to rise above the "queerness" of the performance.

It may be true, as some have said, that the living actors of the stage adopted their stilted style from the puppet shows of old, but the style cannot hide their power of character portrayal. You feel, on leaving the theater, that you have been living in all the color of past centuries.

And then the movies are just as crowded as the theaters. There is a movie industry in Japan, but this does not detract from the popularity of the Hollywood productions. Talking pictures were hard to deal with at first, but now a solemn individual sits at the side of the picture and translates, apparently to the satisfaction of the audience, as the play progresses.

The translator's endeavors to keep up are more interesting to the foreigner than are some of the plays. The contrast between the two types of entertainment is merely characteristic, like all the other contrasts.

The Japanese are voracious readers of newspapers. Newsboys run or bicycle throughout the city, dropping their papers in every shop. At important street corners stand women with bells, which they ring continually to show that here are newsstands with the latest papers.

Where fifty years ago the newspaper was unknown, they now are read far more generally than in the United States, two of the great dailies having a larger circulation than any standard-sized papers in the United States.

These great papers are thoroughly up-to-date. They have regular airplane services of their own to carry pictures from Osaka to Tokyo, and transmission of pictures by wireless or by wire is as much used as in the United States. Moreover, the papers carry on large humanitarian work in the maintenance of hospitals or welfare enterprises.

Lots of Gay Cafes.

Toyko is full of cafes, always crowded, modeled somewhat on the cafes of Paris. In former days people gave geisha parties, those rather solemn affairs at which geishas danced their symbolic dances. They were very expensive, and those who coud not afford the expense contented themselves with picnics. Now the cafes are crowded, their principal patrons being, perhaps, the "mobos" and the "mogas."

The Japanese, more than any other nation, love to abbreviate, and "mobo" is the abbreviation for modern boy, and "moga" is the abbreviation for modern girl. Indeed, these mobos and mogas, dressed almost always in European clothes and trying to adopt the freedom of European manners, are about the most modern aspect of Tokyo.

One might go on almost indefinitely in pointing out the various contrasts of this city, where at every point the contrasts between the old and new, between the occidental and the oriental, is so striking. It should never be forgotten that both the old and the new, both the western and the eastern, are real in Tokyo. Somewhere in the fusion of the two lies the truth of Tokyo. When one remembers that the western ideas have been naturalized for less than a century, one can understand the inevitable outcropping of oriental ideas.

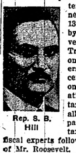
By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

CONGRESSMAN SAM B. HILL of Washington and his subcommittee of the house ways and means committee took up the heavy task of determining how the new revenue of $1,137,000,000 called for by President Roosevelt should be raised. Treasury officials recommended that an average tax of 33⅓ per cent should be levied on undivided corporation profits and a tax of 90 per cent on all refunded or unpaid AAA processing taxes. In this the fiscal experts followed the suggestions of Mr. Roosevelt. They told the subcommittee that the proposed corporation surplus tax would yield the government $620,000,000 annually. The President has estimated that this amount will be needed to finance the new farm program and the soldier bonus.



Rep. S. B. Hill

The so-called "windfall" tax on processors who successfully challenged the AAA in the courts, it was believed, would yield another $200,000,000. This will be used to reimburse the treasury for losses suffered as a result of the Supreme court's invalidation of AAA. There remains an additional $317,000,000 which it is proposed to raise through excise taxes on a wide range of farm processors.

Chairman Hill said the experts and the members of the subcommittee were agreed that the tax on undivided surplus should not apply to banks and life insurance companies.

There was wide divergence of opinion concerning this tax among leaders in congress. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Democrat, for instance, declared himself against it as an unnecessary additional burden on business, and indicated he would support, instead, a plan to tax the income from federal securities now exempt. Senator Borah, Republican, said that in principle he endorsed the plan of taxing undistributed earnings, while Senator Hastings of Delaware, also Republican, denounced it as "confiscatory." Senator King of Utah, Democrat, and Representative Knutson of Minnesota, Republican, were moved by the program to demand immediate cutting down of federal expenditures, and in this Mr. Borah concurred. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Majority Leader W. B. Bankhead professed to see no difficulties in the way of the proposed measure.

One thing that boosted the chances of the President's tax program was a report from Secretary of Commerce Roper that corporation income in 1935 was 300 per cent higher than in 1932.

IN THE course of his probe into the affairs of enemies of the New Deal, Senator Black of Alabama, chairman of the lobby committee, assumed the right to seize and examine their private telegrams, and thus his investigation was carried into the courts. Silas Strawn, Chicago attorney learned the committee was about to subpoena his telegrams and he obtained a temporary injunction blocking such action. He has asked the District of Columbia Supreme court to make this injunction permanent.

The wholesale examination of telegrams was attacked by Representative Wadsworth of New York, and defended by Senator Black.

"It strikes me," Wadsworth said, "that we have reached a strange stage in the development of democracy when private correspondence can be seized without court procedure or search warrant."

Black said: "Repeatedly it has been held that the senate can call for what it pleases. There appears to have been a concerted effort by those who seek to influence legislation behind the scenes, through subterranean channels, to prevent us from getting evidence."

GOVERNOR LANDON'S boom for the Republican Presidential nomination is progressing in a way that must be pleasing to his supporters. Kansas Republicans in a state convention pledged him the state's 18 delegates to the Cleveland convention, declaring him to be "the best-fitted candidate." That Kansas should support its governor is natural and expected, but he also is garnering a good many delegates elsewhere, and indorsement in some states where the delegates are uninstructed.

Sentiment favorable to Landon appeared in New Jersey, and Hervey S. Moore of Trenton, a Republican leader, was contemplating starting an active campaign for him in that state.

ON THE third anniversary of his inauguration President Roosevelt pushed an electric key in the White House which set in motion machinery that closed the sluice gates of the Norris dam in the Tennessee Valley project. This signalized the completion of that part of the vast work on the Clinch river.

"I hope as many people as can will go to see the Norris dam in eastern Tennessee," the President said in a formal statement. "It exemplifies great engineering skill, high construction efficiency, and, above all, it is the key to the carefully worked out control of a great river and its water spread over parts of seven states.

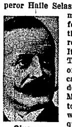
"The Norris dam is a practical symbol of better life and greater opportunity for millions of citizens of our country. The nation has come to realize that national resources must not be wasted and the Norris dam is evidence that our program for conservation of these resources is going forward."

SENATOR BORAH and Senator Van Nuys of Indiana, the latter a Democrat, introduced a bill directed against certain practices of the chain stores. The measure would make it unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to grant any discount, rebate, allowance or advertising service charge to a purchaser over that available to the purchasers' competitors. It also would prohibit sales "at prices lower than those exacted by said person elsewhere in the United States for the purpose of destroying competition or eliminating a competitor."

Co-operative associations would be exempted from provisions of the measure. Violators would be subject to a $5,000 fine and a one-year jail sentence.

The so-called Robinson-Patman antimonopoly bill, also aimed at chain stores, will be passed by the senate before very long, according to a promise made by Senator Robinson to a mass meeting of 1,500 independent merchants who went to Washington to lobby for the measure. This bill legislates against special prices, rebates, advertising allowances and brokerage fees giving sales advantage to chain stores.

THROUGH its committee of thirteen the League of Nations appealed to Benito Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie to consent to immediate negotiations for an end to hostilities and a definite re-establishment of Italo-Ethiopian peace. Though consideration of the proposal by his cabinet council was delayed a few days, Mussolini, according to advices from Rome, was disposed to acquiesce provided territory in Ethiopia already occupied by Italy is considered hers and left out of the negotiations.



Giuseppe Motta

Haile Selassie accepted the proposal without reservation. In recent days his armies in the northern sector have been routed in big battles and have lost many thousands of men, and the Italians have penetrated far toward the interior of the country; and in the South the invaders were preparing for a rapid advance.

Back of the league's appeal was the standing threat of extension of sanctions to include an embargo on oil. This suddenly brought about a situation rather disconcerting for the league. Dr. Giuseppe Motta, Swiss foreign minister, gave a warning that if the oil embargo was applied his country might feel it necessary to leave the league in order to preserve its neutrality if the consequent threatened war in Europe resulted. Motta pointed out that if Italy quit the league and hostilities ensued, Switzerland, through her membership in the league, would appear in Italian eyes as a party to a hostile coalition, and would be subject to invasion, by Italy on one side and perhaps by Germany on the other.

BRITAIN'S government evidently believes another war is coming, and intends to be well prepared. It made public a gigantic program for increases in the army, navy and air forces and for swift mobilization of man power and industry. No official cost estimate was given out but authorities said the total over a three-year period would be not less than one and a half billion dollars. The program includes these features:

Army—Four new battalions of infantry are planned. All units are to be modernized, mechanized, and re-equipped. Especial attention will be paid coastal and anti-aircraft defenses.

Navy—Two new battleships next year and an increase in cruiser strength from 50 to 70, with five new ones to be laid down this year. Naval personnel also will be increased by 6,000, a new aircraft carrier will be constructed, and the air arm of the navy will be strengthened.

Air Force—About 250 new war planes will be added to the home defense squadrons, bringing the total to 1,750. Twelve new air squadrons for imperial defense—that is, air forces available for transfer to danger areas—will be added, and more pilots will be recruited.

Following this announcement the annual naval estimates were submitted to parliament. They call for $349,650,000, an increase of $49,400,000 over the previous year.

JAPAN was calming down after the amazing revolt and attempted coup d' etat of a thousand soldiers led by a group of young "fascist" officers who thought the Okada government was hampering the military progress of the nation. So far as can be judged at this distance, the net results of the uprising were: Admiral Viscount Makoto Saito, former premier and lord keeper of the privy seal; Korekiyo Takahashi, minister of finance, and Gen. Jotaro Watanabe, chief of military education, were assassinated by the rebels. Premier Okada escaped death, his brother-in-law being mistaken for him and slain. The mutineers, threatened by loyal troops and the fleet, obeyed an edict by Emperor Hirohito and surrendered. Of their 23 leaders, two committed suicide.

The immediate concern of Emperor Hirohito and his advisers was the selection of a man for premier who could form a new government that would satisfy the various parties. First Prince Fumimaro Konoye, young president of the house of peers, was asked to undertake this task, but he declined on the ground of poor health. Then the choice of the emperor fell upon Koki Hirota, a moderate who is well known in both the United States and Russia. Hirota at once began picking out his ministers, saying: "My cabinet will be composed of young, able statesmen."

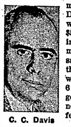
Hirota's selection was taken to mean that the emperor has determined to proceed with the modernization of the country, and to exercise his power to rule instead of permitting himself to be the exalted agent of military overlords.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM WEIGEL, retired, one of the army's most reliable commanders, died in the army hospital on Governors island at the age of seventy-two. He served 44 years, through Indian campaigns, in the Spanish-American war and in the Philippines, and went to France in the World war as a captain. He was rapidly promoted through grades, to brigadier general on August 15, 1917, and to major general on August 8, 1918, when he was given command of the Eighty-eighth division, a new national army unit which he trained and took overseas. Previously he had commanded the Fifty-sixth brigade, Twenty-eighth division, a Pennsylvania outfit, at Chauteau-Thierry.

MORE than 150,000 workers in 11,000 buildings in New York city were called out on strike by James J. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employees' International union, and the sky-scrapers from the Battery to Washington Heights were badly crippled. Elevator men stopped their cars, furnace men banked their fires and scrubwomen threw down their mops, and all marched out of the buildings and formed picket lines. There was some scattered fighting between the pickets and men hastily hired to take their places.

Since the strike affected not only office buildings but innumerable apartment buildings also, the occupants of the latter were deprived of heat and telephone connections, and in many cases sick persons were marooned without food supplies. This lead Mayor La Guardia to call the city health officials into conference, and to declare a civic emergency and order Health Commissioner Rice to see that fires were stoked and that trips necessary to health of the tenants and care of the sick were made in all residence buildings of more than six floors.

IMMEDIATELY after President Roosevelt signed the new soil conservation-farm relief act passed to take the place of the invalidated AAA, Administrator Chester C. Davis began planning ways to spend the $500,000,000 authorized. Under his orders more than five thousand employees of the AAA who had been waiting since January 6 for something to do got busy placing the new program into effect.



C. C. Davis

The goal of the new law, Mr. Roosevelt said in announcing his signature, is parity, not of farm prices, but of farm income. He said the New Deal has "not abandoned and will not abandon" the principle of equality for agriculture.

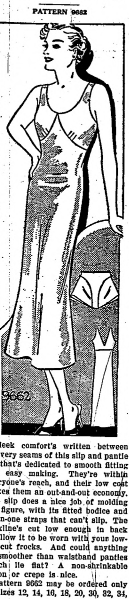
Davis planned, as the first move, a series of four conferences with agricultural leaders in Memphis, Chicago, New York and Salt Lake City to formulate plans to take 30,000,000 acres out of commercial production this year and place them in legumes and other soil conserving crops.

The new law provides benefit payments to farmers who co-operate in federal suggestions for conservation of soil fertility in 1936 and 1937. It provides, also, for federal subsidies to states setting up permanent state programs in 1938 and thereafter.

"REMEMBER the Alamo," the battle cry of Texas, was heard all over the state as its centennial celebration opened at the village of Washington-on-the-Brazos, where the declaration of independence from Mexico was signed. The old "charter of empire" was taken there from its place in the state capitol rotunda in Austin, and Gov. James V. Allred of Texas and Gov. Philip LaFollette of Wisconsin went along to take part in the ceremonies. The party then went to Huntsville, where Gen. Sam Houston gathered an army of Texans to fight the Mexicans, and there Gov. Hill McAlister of Tennessee made the address. San Antonio and other cities followed on the program, and the celebrations will continue for months, reaching a climax in the opening on June 6 of the centennial exposition at Dallas.

Slip and Pantie Set Made in Quick Time

PATTERN 9662



Sleek comfort's written between the very seams of this slip and pantie set that's dedicated to smooth fitting and easy making. They're within everyone's reach, and their low cost makes them an out-and-out economy. The slip does a nice job of molding the figure, with its fitted bodice and all-in-one straps that can't slip. The neckline's cut low enough in back to allow it to be worn with your lowest cut frocks. And could anything be smoother than waistband panties which lie flat? A non-shrinkable rayon or crepe is nice.

Pattern 9662 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 39 inch fabric. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size.

Send your order to: The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 247 W. Forty-third St., New York, N. Y.

DRIVER ANTS ARE SUPREME IN THE AFRICAN JUNGLE

If asked to name the creature that reigns supreme in the jungle, most people would instance the lion, the gorilla, or the elephant. But the great elephant with his huge strength, the gorilla with his massive muscles, the lion and all other jungle animals look upon the driver ant as their master, and get quickly out of the path of this dread enemy.

The driver ant is a black species found in the African jungle, and lives in large colonies. The chief duty allotted by Nature to the species is to act as scavengers, but they will not hesitate to attack any creature, however large, that attempts to stop their march through the forest. At certain times of the year, usually a few weeks before the rainy season, driver ants move in formation from one part of the jungle to another.

All move swiftly, determined to let no obstacle stop them. Orders from the leaders are sent down the line to those in rear. When a living creature attempts to check their progress, we discover their full power. They swarm over the animal in thousands, and all, at a given signal, inflict vicious bites. Thousands more swarm to the attack, and no matter how large or powerful the animal may be, it eventually succumbs to the driver ants.—Oliver G. Pike, F. Z. S., in Tit-Bits.

Torpedoes Self Propelled and Controlled; Cost $10,000

Torpedoes are not fired from battleships and submarines like other projectiles. Owing to their great weight, they are propelled and controlled by their own mechanism, which comprises a compressed-air engine, depth-control device, gyroscopic steering gear and other expensive machinery that, incidentally, runs their cost up to about $10,000 apiece.—Collier's.

Pity the Poor Walrus Who Sunburns Amidst Ice Floes

It seems a bit far-fetched to think of any creature living amidst the ice floes on Arctic seas having difficulties with such an affliction as sunburn. But this is what frequently happens among the Arctic walrus herds, Jack Angel, writing in the Bulletin of the New York Zoological society, declares.

"Walrus often come up on the ice, and if the sun is very warm they get sunburned," he says. "When found in this condition they actually have to be driven into the water. Then you will hear them cry and snort with pain."

CONCENTRATED SUN RAYS MELT STEEL

4,000 Degrees of Heat Produced by Invention.

Los Angeles, Calif.—H. E. McCoy, bald Los Angeles inventor, gingerly held a steel plate in front of a beam of his "concentrated sunlight" and chuckled as the ray promptly melted a hole through the plate, the molten metal dripping down like melted butter.

He waved triumphantly at a huge revolving battery of 60 mirrors which was focusing the bright California noonday sun into a beam some 4,000 degrees Fahrenheit in temperature.

"We'll run all our factories with 'sun power' through outfits like this some day," he declared. "Give me the capital to build one eight times as big as this one, and I'll make the sun generate enough electricity to light a city of 80,000 population."

Uses Three Panels.

McCoy's invention consists of three panels, each holding 20 curved slabs of silvered window glass. They tip up or down and run on a circular track, following the sun's path from east to west. The sun's rays are kept aimed constantly on a fire-brick over 15 feet away.

All the sunlight striking 60 square feet of mirror is concentrated on the small target, raising the temperature to approximately half the terrific heat of the surface of the sun itself.

McCoy says he has melted, among other metals, tungsten carbide, indicating the furnace develops well over 4,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

Confident of Adoption.

He is confident the apparatus will be adopted by industry to replace coal and oil for heating factory boilers. He says that for $25,000 he can build an ore-smelting plant equivalent to present-day smelters costing $100,000.

"It sounds fantastic," he said, "but I think the motorist of the future may drive up to a service station and, instead of buying gasoline, exchange the battery of his electric automobile for one that has just been charged by a solar furnace generating plant."

Undertakers are already consulting the inventor on the possibilities of using the device for cremation of bodies, their idea being that cremation by sunlight has a certain poetic appeal.

As a test, he placed a two-pound rabbit on the "hot spot." It vanished in smoke after two minutes under the concentrated sunbeam.

Intelligence Tests Fair Only After Some Practice

Ann Arbor.—Intelligence tests are fair in determining the comparative "I. Q.'s" of individuals only when those individuals have had equal amounts of practice in taking the tests, Dr. Edward B. Green, University of Michigan psychologist, has concluded, after repeating four times a series of 25 standard tests among 253 of his sophomore students.

In taking the tests over and over again the pupils showed improvement in performance which ranged from zero to 1,900 per cent, which led Doctor Greene to assert that the "prediction of success in vocational and educational activities would be greatly improved if individuals could be compared at known levels of efficiency. It is seldom useful to compare individuals when it is known that one of them has had considerably more practice than the other," he says. "Only those tests which show from none to 25 per cent improvement may be used as a comparison between individuals."

In easy comparisons, including the speed of easy reading and easy pencil mazes, and in hard comparisons, study of difficult cube designs, improvements ranging from 26 to 75 per cent were shown. In medium comparisons the improvement ranged up to 200 per cent and in solution of such puzzles as can be remembered the improvement was 800 per cent.

Co-Eds Firmer Than Men in Holding to Studies

Lewisburg, Pa.—Women are steadier than men, according to conclusions drawn by the "Bucknellian," student newspaper at the Bucknell university.

The paper conducted a survey of the number of students who changed courses after the opening of the term and found that 225 men switched classes, while only 129 coeds changed their programs. It was concluded that women in general may change their minds more frequently than men, but coeds exhibited more steady convictions.

Strange Whatisit of Sea Is Big Puzzle

Boston.—What is it that has a head like a serpent, a body like an eel and a tail like a rat? That was what marine biologists were trying to determine after the strange creature—12 inches long—had been picked up in a fishing net off Georges Bank, 200 miles east of Boston. Fish experts agreed it was not a baby sea serpent.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Unsavory was the old city penitentiary now being demolished by WPA workers on Welfare island. Built almost a century ago, with cells only three feet wide and the only light that from a small hole in the door of each, through the years it gathered grime and germs. It held only petty offenders but the walls are of limestone four and five feet thick and the stone partitions between cells are two feet thick while the bars and grill works are set firmly. So the workmen are having a tough time in demolishing it. They are razing the south wing now. That south wing figured largely in the news several years ago. Prisoners with political connections ruled the penitentiary. Austin H. McCormack, appointed commissioner of corrections under the Fusion administration, staged a "raid" and the city thus "recaptured" its own prison. The south wing was the dwelling place of the prison aristocracy. The cells had silk curtains. There were pieces of fine furniture and curtained wardrobes contained outfits of evening clothes.

• • •

Black as is the old prison, its history is still blacker. Within its walls have been unspeakable cruelties and many crimes of violence. There have been rebellions in which blood was shed. How many lives were wrecked completely because of it is beyond computation. Hardened, professional criminals, caught in some minor offense, were sent there. So were desperate men to whom law or human life meant nothing. Drug addicts and degenerates formed part of the motley, ugly company of felons. With them were young boys convicted of their first offenses—and ripe for further instruction in crime. The prison became obsolete as a penal institution 30 years ago. Engineers condemned the interior as unfit for human beings 15 years ago.

• • •

The island on which the prison stands is in East river. The Indians called it Minnahonock, or Long Island. Capt. John Manning acquired it in 1664 and the name became Manning's island. His stepdaughter married William Blackwell and lived on the island and in time, it became Blackwell's island. The Blackwell mansion still stands, being used as quarters for doctors connected with the hospital on the island. When the city bought the island for $25,000 in 1828, one of the provisions was that the Blackwell mansion, built in 1709 or 1798—there is conflict as to the date—be allowed to stand. To take away some of the blackness of the prison on the island, the name was changed to Welfare in 1921.

• • •

Prisoners formerly confined in the Welfare island prison have been sent to the new penitentiary on Rikers island. Rikers island for years was a city dump. In fact, the island was practically built from city refuse. Occasionally, it catches fire and the smoke is no perfume. Also Rikers island is the home of the biggest rats known to mankind—rats that chase bull dogs into East river. But the new penitentiary is far superior to the old.

• • •

That recent survey which shows that the well-known "Boston accent" seems to be on the road to extinction brings to mind the fact that "Brooklynese" is heard less frequently in New York than it was when I first arrived. In those days it seemed as if most of New York believed that "world" was spelled "wolld," and that "oil" was "erl." One night at graduation exercises of one of the uptown public schools, I heard a Supreme court justice say "foist" and a little later, he used the word "molder." That one of the members of that graduating class should remark to another, "Don't do that, Hoiby, you make me noivus," seemed perfectly proper after such an example. "Avenue" also had a peculiar pronunciation, which I can't reproduce and in many instances, "voice" was "verse." Christopher Morley's rhyme about "Anne stirred an erster stew" was an excellent example.

• • •

With the passing of the years, I thought my ear had become dulled to the idiom. But after consulting various sources, I have reached the conclusion that there is less "Brooklynese" than there was in those years past. It crops out occasionally even in the utterances of Alfred E. Smith, however. Then, at Christmas time, a young woman in a Forty-second street drug store, directed me to the "terlet goods counter." With many, "Pennsylvania" is still "Pennsylvanier" and "idea" is given a final "r." Oh, yes, the man in a change booth of the municipal subway Forty-second street station last night turned back a quarter on the ground that it was a "mutilated"—he made the first syllable rhyme with "but"—"kern." Brooklynese hasn't really passed but is passing.

Canada Boils Currency, Then Sells Pulp Paper

Ottawa, Ont.—The Canadian government now "boils" its old bank notes instead of burning them. Last year $50,000,000 in common bank notes were dumped into a huge vat and boiled to a pulp, which was sold to papermakers. Burning of old bills was abandoned as "wasteful" and because of the possibility of scraps of notes, partially burned, being carried through chimneys to the outdoors.

Land Problem Is Acute in 4 Areas

Resettlement Official Says Misery Will Increase.

Berkeley, Calif.—With virtually no good free land left in the United States for families to settle, the future of the country depends largely on the conservation and conversion to proper use of vast tracts that have been made useless by abuse in the past, believes L. C. Gray, assistant administrator of the resettlement administration.

"Less than a century ago," said Gray, "there were hundreds of thousands of acres of good land in the public domain available to citizens who wanted to stake out a homestead. Today not only is there scarcely an acre of such land but countless thousands of acres that once were profitable have been ruined unless they can be converted to other uses or restored to their original productiveness.

Gray cited four great districts in the United States where the misuse of land has not only made it unprofitable but in many cases has reduced the occupants to economic misery.

Poverty in great portions of the southern Appalachian mountains where living conditions are particularly severe, he said, is the direct result of an unscientific use of land.

Forests Rapidly Thinned.

Forests, which formerly provided the chief income, were cut off without any care for the future reproduction of trees.

The land as a rule is too steep for farming; cultivation only aggravates the problem by encouraging soil erosion, and with both the forests and top soil gone the standard of living of the inhabitants has decreased steadily.

The old forest region bordering the Great Lakes, which presents a similar problem; the western plains, where the destruction of forests has eliminated moisture and produced duststorms in recent years, and finally the old cotton belt of the South, he said, are instances of the misuse of soil that is now causing poverty for great portions of the people.

Problem Grows With Years.

The situation, he declared, is even graver for the future than it is for the present. With an inevitably increasing population the nation will require more land under cultivation in the future than now.

Whenever industrial depressions occur hundreds of thousands will go back to the land as they did during the present one.

With no virgin land left and with great sections of the country made profitless by misuse of the land in the past, the problem, he declared, can only be solved by a well-defined governmental policy of soil conversion and conservation.

Studies made by the resettlement administration, Gray believes, show that unless all people living off the soil can do so profitably a great burden of taxation is thrown on persons in other parts of the country.

Stomach "Dredge" Is New Surgical Device

Philadelphia.—Surgeons may go "fishing" in human stomachs through a new device perfected by Dr. Gabriel Tucker, professor of bronchoscopy of the University of Pennsylvania medical school.

So if you swallow your false teeth, an open safety pin or something equally dangerous, Doctor Tucker's new "tackle" is ready to be lowered into your stomach and start dredging operations.

Declared much simpler than equipment formerly used, the new invention contains a small pair of pliers at the end of the hollow rubber tube. Air is pumped in to inflate the organ and an x-ray device makes the area visible.

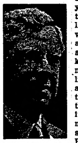
RUDYARD KIPLING

By

LEONARD A. BARRETT



In the poet's corner in Westminster abbey rest the ashes of a universally beloved poet, Rudyard Kipling. Even though we may delight to read the writings of certain authors, we do not always come to know them intimately through the literature they create. They impart their thought, but their own personalities still seem remote from us. Not so with Kipling. He himself was part and parcel of all he wrote. One learned to know the poet through his poetry, and for this gift of self-revelation as well as for the quality of his literature, Kipling will be remembered always throughout the English-speaking world.

His career was brilliant. We think of him primarily as a poet and rightly so, although his earlier work in a period through his forty-second year was in prose, mostly novels. Perhaps his first well-known book was "Plain Tales from the Hills," written when he was only twenty-two. Kipling wrote an average of one book a year from that time on until he was nearly thirty. At forty he published "Puck of Pook's Hill," his last work in prose. About this time the inspirational poetry of Tennyson had waned temporarily because of the infusion of a popularly distorted literature sponsored by Oscar Wilde who became the leader of the so-called esthetic movement in London. During this time, Kipling was engaged vigorously in writing poetry. When the opportune moment arrived, he gave to the English world his own soul in his newly created poetry. The impact was electric. It changed the current of English thought. Once more the highest and best in literature has been recaptured. In a very brief time Kipling was proclaimed universally a star of the first magnitude in literature.

Modestly he lived, and his last rites were in keeping with the spirit of his life. Much of his time was spent in the seclusion of his estate in Sussex. He declined many honors offered him by royalty, and, according to report, refused a proferred knighthood.

Perhaps his environment apart from the mad rush of life with its noise and crass materialism, contributed much to his genius. In the silence he found his own soul. In the silence the "mystery" spoke to him. Under the inspiration of that divine fire he gave to the world a poetry that will live forever.

READY FOR SPRING

Glenda Farrell shows off an outfit she bought for spring wear. The gown is of sheer black wool and is made with a diagonal treatment of the fabric showing a high neckline and fitted raglan sleeves. Her short galyak jacket has three-quarter-length bell sleeves. Her peaked turban is of soft angora yarn with a head band and three bows of black corded ribbon.

U. S. Army Clothier General

The rank of United States army clothier general was created during the Revolutionary war and was held for a time by James Wilkinson, later famous for complicity in the Aaron Burr conspiracy.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE subject of textiles is of interest to every homemaker. It is she who buys the fabrics for linen closets, for furnishings, for frocks, and all the many articles made from textiles that are used by the household or in the home. Quality, styles, durability, innovations, new developments, etc., are all features with which she wants to be, and should be, acquainted.

In the early days of silk weaving the smoothness of the texture was not satisfactory largely due to the discrepancies in size of the strands of both warp and weft. The struggle to make these strands free from irregularities has been a long one, the filaments, especially from wild silk, refusing to wind and twist with absolute evenness during the spinning of the threads. Most of us are familiar with the irregularities of this sort found in genuine Shantungs. As a matter of fact it is these very discrepancies that are an aid in distinguishing oriental Shantungs from domestic makes—an important matter.

Methods in Variety.

Sizing, weighting and pressure processes have played their part in securing smooth surfaces in silks as well as the present ability to reduce irregularities in silk threads. With all these ways and means, and manifold methods, and processes, of providing smoothness to silken surfaces, today there is a return to old-time effects.

Rough surfaced textiles are in the ascendency, and with this vogue comes the reproduction of unevenness in weaving strands. These are imitated in tussards, pongees, and those silks in which purity of silk threads without smoothing and other finishing processes are most desirable. This return to wild silk weave effects and the accenting of what once were blemishes, and now are modish touches, is another evidence of the cycle of styles.

Non-Crush Treatment.

One of the latest movements in the making of materials has to do with processes that eliminate creases. Noncrushable fabrics range from linens to velvets. In these specific articles mentioned the non-crush feature is especially welcome. Linens ordinarily crease and muss very easily and require frequent pressing to keep them looking fresh and pleasing. Linen sheets and pillow cases, table linens and frocks, have the disadvantage of losing their crisp quality quickly just because of their mussing so readily. Frequent ironing is necessary. So it is a fine movement in manufacturing methods that relieves this work, and gets such admirable results.

Velvets are more difficult to restore when they get creases and marks of folds, etc. They have to be steamed either by hanging up in a room with a steamy atmosphere, or in a sheltered spot out of doors when it is foggy or misty. Or small places can be deftly restored by holding the material taut over a bowl of boiling hot water. If very badly creased by pressure or spot marked, they require to go to a cleaners to be restored. So non-crush velvet is a most welcome addition to modern textiles.

Upholstery Fabrics.

Upholstery fabrics that do not crush are a decided innovation and are sure to please homemakers. The non-crush velvets appear at a good time since velvets are among the luxurious upholstery and decorative materials at present. It may be that the fact that velvets can be had that are not crushable, has been one element in fostering their return to style. In the realm of clothes, now is the time to wear velvets, whether crushable or not, but the latter certainly have advantages.

Some mediums react better than others to the non-crush treatments, of course, but all up and down the line of kinds and qualities, the good work of preventing textiles from crushing and mussing easily is progressing.

Hard Boiled

"KINDNESS don't pay; I ought to know." Bitterness lurked in Miss Priscilla's usually placid tones. "I've been kind to folks all my life and where do I get it?" She paused to peer inquiringly over her glasses at Lila.

"In the neck?" suggested Lila, softly.

"That's it!" exclaimed Miss Priscilla with satisfaction. "In the neck. I couldn't think of the expression."

She took a turn or two with the tatting shuttle. "And HOW!" she added, with vicious emphasis.

Lila doubled up with delighted laughter. "You're coming on fine," she assured Miss Priscilla. "Best slang pupil I ever coached."

"I like slang," murmured Miss Priscilla, "it is so forceful and right to the point."

In the little pause that followed, the canary gave his opinion of life and sunshine in a thrilling crescendo.

Lila laid her hand on Miss Priscilla's knee. "Tell me one instance where kindness did not pay," she begged.

"One instance?" cried the lady of the tatting shuttle. "One? I could give you a dozen. There's the time I broke my heart over Mrs. Gordon and her cruel husband. I helped her to leave him and for months congratulated myself on having saved her life and reason. Then, one fine spring day, back she came, broke and repentant. Her fool husband forgave her, took her in, and . . . Oh, boy! do they hate yours truly!"

"What of it? Everybody else loves you," offered Lila.

Miss Priscilla gave her a stern glance and went on: "And Reta Henderson. They wouldn't let her marry young Anson Matthews. What did I do? I nominated and elected my fool self to the position of Cupid and smoother-out of the path of true love. I took Anson in to board for next to nothing and managed so that Reta could meet him at my house from time to time. They were married on her twenty-first birthday and my heart glowed with the consciousness of a glorious deed done." She snorted with contempt.

"I think it was a glorious deed," said Lila stoutly, "to unite two loving young hearts."

"O, yes, you would," sniffed Miss Priscilla. "Well, they married and had six young ones in eight years! They hate me worse than all the rest put together. Folks can solve their own problems and fix their own mistakes from now on for all of me. I'm through. I'm hard-boiled!" She glared at Lila.

"Oh, yeah?" answered Lila, unimpressed. "About as hard-boiled as a one-minute egg. But this is all in the past. You must have had something else happen to make you feel as you do today."

"You know the Simpsons," replied Miss Priscilla, tight-lipped, "all those young ones and him out of work most of the time? A few days ago I went over there and found Hazel, the seven-year-old, humped up near the fire, moaning enough to break your heart.

"'For pity's sake, what ails her?' I asked. Mrs. Simpson told me she had fallen and broken her wrist and her father had set it.

"'Set it,' I said, in surprise, 'has he studied surgery?'

"'No, he ain't,' snapped Mrs. Simpson tartly, 'but he's handy.'

"Well, I couldn't get my night's rest thinking of that poor little girl. Soon's I got my morning work done I hurried over to Simpson's.

"'You ought to have a doctor,' I told Mrs. Simpson.

"'No sech thing,' she whined at me, 'Pa's handy an' it costs a mint a money to hev a doctor.'

"Along about teatime I couldn't stand it any longer. I had talked over the phone with several neighbors and they had agreed with me that something ought to be done. So I called up the district nurse and the head of the Associated Charities. Both passed the buck to me. They thought something ought to be done but they didn't want to be the ones to do it. Then I called the doctor. After quite a while of conversation it was arranged. Yesterday Dr. Drummond and the district nurse came out to see Hazel."

During the pause that followed, Lila's eyes studied Miss Priscilla's face. "Why should that make you feel that kindness does not pay?" she asked Miss Priscilla gently, "I should say it paid richly in the knowledge that you had saved a child from being a cripple."

Miss Priscilla looked grimly over her glasses. Her hands fell idly in her lap. "Doctor Drummond found that the child's wrist was set perfectly," she said. "I'll be the laughing-stock of the neighborhood."

The clock ticked loudly in the silence. The canary stopped singing and preened his feathers. "Never mind," soothed Lila, "don't take it so to heart. If I ever need advice and consolation I know you'll give it."

"Not even to you," declared Miss Priscilla, her eyes flashing. "I love you, Lila, but I've learned my lesson. It's hands off from now on."

Lila looked up in alarm. This had cut deeper than she had thought. Maybe Miss Priscilla had really become hard-boiled. As she opened her mouth to protest, the telephone rang. Miss Priscilla hurried to pick up the receiver.

"Yes," she said. "Yes? You don't tell me! For pity's sake!"

She listened, intently. "Martha, that's terrible! Well, something's got to be done about it. Tell her I'll be right over . . . I've got a plan in my head . . . I'll fix it up!"

Aga Khan Leads 100,000,000 Moslems

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

HE IS the political leader of 100,000,000 persons in India alone, and the spiritual leader of 70,000,000 persons in central Asia, Africa, Arabia and the Orient—yet he has not a kingdom of a single acre.

To his followers he is as holy as the Pope is to his—yet he is one of the most notorious sportsmen of the world.

His income is more than $3,000,000 a year, his houses are veritable palaces, he is able to shower gifts of fine silks, fabulous jewels and exquisite furs upon whomever he pleases—and he is happily married to the daughter of a small-town hotel manager in France.

He is the direct descendant of a major prophet—yet he won't bet on a race horse, even one from his own $5,000,000 string.

Such enigmatic sidelights on this phenomenal personality might be recorded for column after column. He is the Aga Khan, Sultan, Sir Mohammed Shah, the religious potentate over the followers of the Ismaili branch of the Mohammedan faith, and as the descendant of the prophet himself, forty-eight times removed, is to them the representative of God on earth.

Fiftieth Year of Leadership.

The year 1936, the fiftieth of such divine ambassadorship by the Aga Khan, is being made the occasion for elaborate and ceremonious celebration wherever there are believers in the Ismaili faith. From the far-flung corners of the world are pouring in voluntary tributes of even greater value and more magnificent splendor than the regular annual tributes which the Koran says must amount to 2½ per cent of the income of every Ismaili. They are being stored in the Aga Hall in Bombay, there to await redistribution to charity, educational and social institutions or the Aga's racing stables and palatial villas.

Most of his enormous power the Aga Khan owes to his paternal grandfather, Hasan Ali Shah, Aga Khan I, who was born in Persia in 1800 and died in India in 1881. Aga Khan I traced his ancestry back into prehistoric Persia and back to the Beni-Fatimite caliphs who founded Cairo in Egypt and were the sons of Fatima, the daughter of Mohammed.

Hasan Ali ruled over a province of Persia perhaps too wisely and well, for when he defended his people against cruel and oppressive taxes imposed by Fateh Ali Shah, he incurred the mortal wrath of that ruler of all Persia. Because he had been the Shah's friend, however, he was allowed to escape during the civil war which followed.

Hasan Ali, by this time an old man, fled through Afghanistan to Bombay, where he settled. He offered himself in service to the British army in Afghanistan and among the frontier tribes. His offers were accepted, but held as of little importance, until it became known that this first of the Aga Khans was receiving voluntary tribute year after year from all points over India. And when it was discovered that regular contributions were also pouring in from many other oriental countries and from Africa, John Bull's colonial representatives began to realize that the holy leader of Ismaili was a rippin' good man to have on their side. He did them a lot of good before his death, too.

Second Aga Dies Early.

The first Aga Khan's good work was carried on by his son, Aga Khan II, who lived only four years after his father's death. Aga Khan III was only eight years old when he succeeded to power.

Ever since he was a very young man, the present Aga has ruled his followers in their religious and political affairs wisely and kindly. To them he is a fit descendant of the prophet.

The Mohammedan religion recognizes many prophets, beginning with Adam. There are three, however, which are of outstanding importance, for the three "books" which they are credited with having handed down. Moses introduced the laws, Jesus the gospel, and Mohammed the Koran, or the scriptures as revealed to him by Allah (God). The Ismailis differ from the other branch of Mohammedanism, the Sunis, chiefly in the recognition of certain apostles of Mohammed.

His direct descent from the "last of the prophets" was responsible for the most colorful part of the present semi-centennial celebration of the Aga Khan's reign. This was the recent bath ceremony. A gold coach, drawn by the Aga's magnificent horses, and climaxing a great parade several miles long, set out from his place to the pearl mosque, the believers prostrating themselves by the thousands along the line of march. The coach contained that holy of holies, the Aga Khan, in his ceremonial bath. The water was scented with priceless attar found in the bath of Mumtaz, the Mogul queen whose memory is perpetuated in the wonderful monument that is the Taj Mahal. It had been acquired by the Khojas, the fabulously wealthy cotton princes of Bombay.

Millions for Bath Water.

As the coach bearing the Aga Khan passed solemnly down the processional avenue, he sprinkled water from his bath upon the prostrate subjects. In their gratitude they gave him several million dollars in tribute that night.

This important fellow, who has the portly mien and general appearance of a Wall Street broker and yet joins the most humble of his followers in beating his chest until the blood comes in extremely emotional religious rites, is a walking rejection of the theory that never the twain shall meet. His is a tempered combination of oriental and occidental culture and education.

He was reared by a strict mother who had been a member of the Persian royal family. His stern tutoring, his natural aptitude and his real understanding of and interest in his people stamped him as a true leader when he was only sixteen. Riots broke out between the Hindus and Mohammedans in Bombay. So fired with emotional hatred were the masses, a first-class race war was in prospect. The young Aga Khan issued a command to his people that they were not to engage in such racial fighting. They "bent over backwards" to obey his wish, even to the extent that Moslems were inviting Hindus home to dine with them.

The Aga Khan, political or spiritual leader of at least 100,000,000 people, pictured with the present Begum Aga Khan and their recently-arrived son.

In this instance the Aga's command was something the Ismaili could understand, but four years later, when he was still not a grown man, he issued another that was far more a test of his power. A plague ravaged India in 1897. Thousands upon thousands were dying because they refused to be inoculated with protective serum. They revolted at the thought. The young Aga went about among them, explaining the absolute necessity for inoculation. To their amazement he bared his own body time after time and accepted the prick of the needle to show them he would not ask them to do anything he wouldn't do himself. Their superstitions were broken down, they were inoculated and the plague was beaten.

What was probably the crisis in the establishment of his true power came a few years later in another racial conflict. Certain of his followers deserted the Ismaili sect to join the Sunis, and three of them were murdered in religious indignation of their fellows. At a word all India could have been thrown into mortal internal combat. The Aga Khan excommunicated the killers from the church, cursed them with denial of the burial rite and announced that if any more fighting broke out he would resign as leader of Ismaili on the spot. Peace reigned from that moment.

Test of Power Comes.

When he was not keeping the peace among his people, the Aga was establishing schools, educational and medical centers, hospitals, libraries and other institutions of learning and culture, often with money out of his own pocket. He personally collected $1,000,000 to raise the college at Aligarh to university status. He has tried in every way to abolish the depressed classes, to raise the Indian to a higher standard of living, and to secure for his country equal freedom with other British dominions.

Repeatedly this leader has appealed to the League of Nations for recognition of his people, Ismailis and others.

The Aga Khan was in East Africa when the World war broke out. He directed his followers to support the British, and was successful even when Turkey entered the war on the side of the Central powers. The Ismailis were aroused and showed tendencies toward sympathizing with their fellow Moslems, but lent their support once more to the British when the Aga, in a general order, assured them that the Allies had no quarrel with Islam (the Mohammedan religion) itself.

Aga Khan's Three Wives.

The Moslem religion permits a man to have three wives, but he must produce an heir. The Aga Khan is now living with his third Begum, or wife. His first was his cousin, the Shahzada Begum, who never bore him a child, and with whom he was unhappy. They separated early, and two years ago she died.

Theresa, an Italian princess whose fine sculpture had been exhibited many places in Europe, was his second wife. She had one son which died at birth, but later bore another, who is the Aly Khan and the rightful heir to his father. Theresa died in 1926 and was buried in the family vaults at Monaco.

The Aga Khan's present wife he married in romantic fashion for a man of such nearly limitless means. Their wedding was like a small town elopement—which indeed it really was, for it happened quietly and secretly in the little town hall of Aix-les-Bains, in the French Alps. The Cinderella story of this simple country girl called Andre Carron marrying an oriental potentate gave rise to many fanciful tales about their relationships, but it is a fact that the new Begum was an old friend of the family. She proved to be beautiful, cultured, a charming conversationalist and everything that could be desired in the way of a consort for the leader of 100,000,000 people. Not long ago she bore him a child.

Since his services in the World war, the Aga Khan has become something of a lion in British society, and the presentation of the present Begum at the Court of St. James was one of the most picturesque social affairs of recent years.

Aga Himself Plays Now.

Unusual ceremonies are occurring every day during the celebration for the Aga Khan. One day 12,000 women, clad in silk pajamas, honored him at tea. Every day in his palace grounds he serves food and drink to tens of thousands of visitors.

Annually his cabinet presents the Aga Khan with his weight in gold, determined at a public weighing. He usually tips the beam at about 225 pounds, so the "take" is a considerable one. This year, perhaps because of the significance of the occasion, he broke all records, weighed in at 237½, and collected more than $100,000. Most of it will go to charity to relieve distress among indigent Moslems.

Nipponese Typists Have but 2,000 Characters to Master

The Nipponese manipulators of typewriters have to struggle with a keyboard of 2,000 characters to be picked out by hand. The slugs have individual compartments in a sliding tray. The stenographer must press a knob in picking out these individual signs of the Katakana Hiragana forms.

Characters which once were pictured have been reduced to their simplest forms on the typewriter and now represent ideas only when placed in sound and thought sequence. When the knob is moved directly over the selected character, pressure is exerted. A metal arm pushes across a tiny ink roller and against the paper which is rolled on a drum. The drum shifts and revolves as the letter progresses.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GROUND GRIP

FIRESTONE GROUND GRIP TIRES
SPEED UP FARM WORK—MAKE IT EASIER—MORE PROFITABLE

HARVEY S. FIRESTONE pioneered and Firestone engineers developed a pneumatic tire which is the greatest contribution in recent years to more efficient and economical farming. Farmers using Ground Grip Tires on their tractors are saving more than 25% in time and fuel.

On all farm implements the Ground Grip Tire has proved of practical time-saving and money-saving value. Wagons, combines, mowers, sprayers, grain drills require up to 50% less draft to pull them. Hauling is speeded up. Plowing is done with more uniform depth. Vines and roots are not injured or cut, allowing closer planting and greater yield. Ground Grip Tires do not pack the soil and give greater protection to equipment.

It requires only a minimum investment to put all your equipment on Ground Grip Tires. With Firestone's new demountable rim and cut-down method of applying the rim to the original implement wheels, one set of tires will fit several implements. Tires can be changed quickly from one implement to another—you need only two or three sets for practically all your implements.

Firestone patented Gum-Dipped cords, with two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread, holding the patented super-traction tread to the cord body, made this great tire possible.

See the nearby Firestone Tire Dealer, Implement Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today—and in placing your order for new equipment, be sure to specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires on your new tractor or farm implement.

Listen to the Voice of Firestone featuring Richard Crooks or Nelson Eddy—with Margaret Speaks, Monday evenings over Nationwide N. B. C.—WEAF Network

Guarantee—This heavy, Super-Traction tread is guaranteed not to loosen from the tire body under any conditions, and all other parts of the tire are fully guaranteed to give satisfaction.

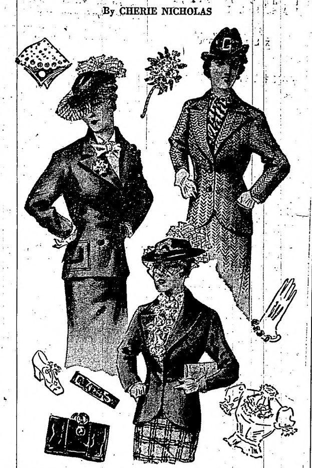
To Be Chic Is to Be Man-Tailored

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THERE is no question as to the supremacy of the smart tailleur in the early spring mode. How to wear a strictly man-tailored suit without sacrificing a prettily feminine appearance is the problem that fashion is putting up to the ladies these days. And is the fair sex proving equal to the occasion? Of course! Merely a matter of accessories, if you please. As to whether your spring tailleur goes smartly mannish or winsomely feminine depends for the most part on the hat, gloves, footwear, bag, belt, blouse and all the other items that go to make up a correct ensemble.

Here is a formula for a good antidote to the masculinity of a mannishly tailored suit of sturdy men's-wear woolen or other weave. Wear an alluring frilly, lingerie blouse for after many years' absence it has come into its own for spring. About your swanky felt Homburg or your equally as modish sailor hat see that your milliner ties a length of gaily colorful (sometimes several colors are used together) veiling in a big sprightly, fluttery, eye-compelling bow. Match your new fabric gloves to the color of your veil, for gloves in giddy colors are highly important news this season. Colorful hosiery, too, registers on the advance style program.

However, should you prefer that your spring outfit go dramatically masculine in every detail as do so many of the high-fashion tailleurs on the new style program, again may we remind you that it is for the most part a matter of choosing the proper accessories. Homburg hats, shirtmaker blouses, bags that look like a business man's brief case, a tie or ascot scarf that seems as if it might belong on brother's tie-rack, pigskin gloves, the very new square-toed and square-heeled shoes, all are contributing items to mannish styling. And don't forget to add conspicuously one of the swanky lately-arrived watch-fob pins.

Designers are playing up the tailored suit with many variations. The group pictured illustrates the idea. To the left the suit is a classic double-breasted type. In navy or black it carries a genteel air which best dressed women seek. A simple linen shirt is preferably worn, although, to vary the program, it is well to have in reserve a smart taffeta or crepe blouse. A bandanna kerchief blouse would be interesting to include in your tailored blouse wardrobe. Here you see one of the cunning new veils in high color mood that is accomplishing wonders in the way of counteracting too much masculinity in one's tailleur.

The suit to the right differentiates in that it has a two-button fastening. It is styled of a herringbone tweed. Speaking of tweeds (this promises to be a very tweedy season) also the new novelty woolens, words fail to do them justice. In their wealth of radiant colorings, in their unique flecked and nubbed rough weaves, in their artful stripes, plaids, and diagonals they simply baffle description. The ascot scarf and felt Homburg are significant style items.

The latest call of the tailored mode is for skirt and jacket to contrast as shown in the clever suit in the foreground. Stunning color effects are worked out in this way, special attention to a discriminating selection of accessories being absolutely necessary. Note that this jacket has a one-button fastening. The blouse is of the new frilly lingerie type. The sailor hat with veil is good style.

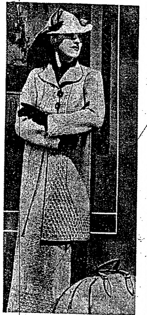
SMART KNIT SUIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Knitted fashions are as outstanding in the style parade as ever. The stunning suit pictured is the sort you will find ever ready when the "what to wear" question comes up. Not only is it eminently good-looking but it is that practical it comes near being a whole wardrobe in itself. An unusual border design done in a raised popcorn stitch achieved by knitting and purling, enhances both three-quarter coat and slender perfect fitting skirt.

SPRING STYLE SHOW STRESSES ECONOMY

Economy clothes, designed to save money, time and luggage space, starred in Paris spring fashion openings which ended a fortnight of the most varied displays Paris has shown in years.

The most striking costumes had changeable accessories which transformed their appearances or converted them to several uses.

Worth showed slender, dark satin evening dresses with draped corsages which could be drawn over the shoulder to make them sleeved dinner gowns.

Evening gowns of printed beaded organdie, crepe in brilliant modernistic designs and embroidered silk were outstanding features of Patou's collection.

Now's the Time to Indulge in Embroidered Materials

If you like embroidered materials now's the time to indulge for fashion is high-lighting thin woolens, organdies, nets, mousselines, crapes and taffetas that reflect Chinese or Spanish or peasant influence in all-over embroidered motifs and patternings. Smart fashion calls for the plain colored skirt topped with a jacket of gaily embroidered material. Embroidered net posed over taffeta foundation is a foremost evening fashion.

Sun Suits of Chintz

If the housewife misses her new glazed chintz window curtains she might see if daughter has used them to make a sun-suit. One model has shorts and bandeau of glazed chintz, topped off with a matching knee-length coat lined with Turkish toweling.

Echoes as Alarm Clocks

MODERN Americans who have to invest in alarm clocks in order to be certain of waking up in time for work each morning may well envy the good fortune of Jim Bridger, famous frontiersman, who was able to draft Mother Nature into service for assurance of early rising.

Near Bridger's ranch in Wyoming were some obsidian cliffs. Frequently he heard the sharp crack of a rifle which puzzled him, because he knew there was no one within 147 miles of his home. Finally it dawned on him that these reports were the echoes of the rifle shots which he had fired the previous day when he was getting his daily supply of fresh meat. These obsidian cliffs had caught the report of his rifle, held it overnight and then sent it back to him each day to remind him that it was time to go out hunting again.

Next it occurred to Jim that he might just as well make use of the echoes in other ways. So every time he knew that he had to get up early the next morning, he would step outside the door, face the cliffs and shout: "Hey, Jim, it's time to get up!" And, sure enough, the next morning he would be awakened by the echo penetrating the walls of his cabin and shouting in his ear: "Hey, Jim, it's time to get up!"

Cooking Under Difficulties

TEDDY BLUE of the Three Deuce ranch in Montana remembers what an annoying time he had when he came up from Texas with a trail herd back in 1883. When the cook died, the boss found out that Teddy knew something about slinging grub together and made him take charge of the chuck wagon.

In it he found plenty of bacon, flour, beans, baking powder, sugar, coffee and everything else needed to feed the hungry crew of punchers. But the only trouble was that they were out on a treeless plain where there wasn't a stick of wood visible anywhere.

Then one of the punchers lit a cigarette and snapped the still-blazing match into a bunch of buffalo grass. It flamed up and right then Teddy had an idea. He ran and got the coffee pot, filled it up, threw some bacon in a skillet and started toward the place where the fire in the buffalo grass was spreading.

Holding the coffee pot and the skillet over the flame he followed the line of blazing grass and in a short time the bacon began to sizzle and the coffee began to steam a bit. After a while Teddy said to himself, "Well, I guess she's ready to serve now." But when he looked up he discovered that he had followed the flame until he was 11½ miles from camp. By the time he got back the bacon and the coffee were cold. The boys grumbled about having to eat cold chuck, so Teddy quit as cook right then and there.

The Patriotic Hen

JIM FITCH, a former resident of Manchester, N. H., remembers it just as well as if it had happened day after tomorrow. He was riding in the cab of a locomotive on the Boston and Maine railroad with his Uncle Ira, the engineer. North of Concord a gray and white speckled hen started across the track. Uncle Ira tooted his whistle and the hen started running up the track. A moment later she disappeared.

"Too bad," said Uncle Ira, "but she ought to have made up her mind about crossing the railroad sooner."

Jim was pretty sad about the fate of that hen. But imagine his surprise when they slowed down for the next stop, the brakeman went through the train calling out "Plymouth! Plymouth!" Off the cowcatcher jumped the hen and she went clucking away as much to to say "Of course, I know when it's time for me to get off!"

Suddenly she began cackling and made a dash up the street as though looking for something. As the train pulled out the last thing Jim saw was the hen stooping down and creeping into a small dog kennel in a back yard.

Three weeks later Jim went back to Plymouth to its Fourth of July celebration and he heard some more about her. That morning the patriotic hen, who traced her ancestry back to Plymouth Rock, hatched out three chickens. One was red, one was white and one was blue. But all three had bow legs because the kennel into which their mother had stopped to enter had been built for a dachshund.

Athens Stands in Great Cup

Modern Athens stands in a great cup with mountains on three sides and the coastline on the fourth. It has grown out around Mt. Lykabettos, which rises sharply out of the cup, and the busy city makes a sharp contrast with its classic ruins, which look down serenely on it from the Acropolis. Athens is an outdoor city, where home is only the place to spend one's siesta or to sleep, and much of the buying and selling of its merchants is carried on in the streets. The Greeks are as fond of their siesta as the spaniards are, and at noon all shops close until 3 p. m., staying open later at night to make up for lost time. Dinner is not served until 9, and 2 a. m. is no later to an Athenian than midnight is to an American.

Kidnaping Is Not Entirely an American Crime, Nor New

The crime of kidnaping is not a new one or confined to this country, though the organization of kidnaping gangs for profit has been more greatly developed here in recent years than anywhere else. It is a curious fact that the word "kidnaping" came into use not in America but in England about 250 years ago and referred to the business of stealing young people in that country to provide indentured servants or laborers (virtually slaves) for the American plantations.

In Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," written in 1684, occurs the sentence, "Thou practisest the craft of a kidnaper; thou gatherest up women and children and carriest them into a strange country, to the weakening of my master's kingdom." Maj. Arthur Griffith's "Mysteries of Police and Crime" states: "Child stealing has always been a profitable trade, practiced at the instance of greedy relatives anxious to remove a rightful heir; full-grown youths of muscle and sinew were entrapped in great numbers during the first half of the Eighteenth century to be sold as white slaves for the American plantations."—Detroit News.

Dr. Eben J. Carey, dean of the Marquette university medical school, Milwaukee, asserted that "No son is a carbon copy of his father," thereby disagreeing with the old saying: "Like father like son!"

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Here's Very Fast Way to "Alkalize" Acid-Indigestion Away

Amazingly Fast Relief Now from "Acid Indigestion" Over-Indulgence, Nausea, and Upsets

IF you want really quick relief from an upset or painful stomach condition—arising from acidity following over-eating, smoking, mixtures of foods or stimulants—just try this:

Take—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a full glass of water. OR—2 Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets, the exact equivalent of the liquid form.

This acts almost immediately to alkalize the excess acid in the stomach. Neutralizes the acids that cause headaches, nausea, and indigestion pains. You feel results at once.

Try it. AND—if you are a frequent sufferer from "acid stomach," use Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after meals. You'll forget you have a stomach!

When you buy, see that any box or bottle you accept is clearly marked "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Mark Harder came with a car of stock from Hettinger, N. D. and moved onto his farm in Rocksbury.

Lars A. Loberg bought the P. A. Kolstad residence on Wall street, and planned to move in with his family the next fall.

Miss Olga Hanson finished a very successful term of school that week in the Aubol district north of town.

A. J. Barsness was re-elected principal of the local school at a meeting of the school board held that week.

Oscar Thyren, who was in charge of operations for the Larson Bros. Lumber Company at Salol, came down for a visit with his parents at their farm home southeast of the village.

CALF HAS PIG'S EARS, HIDE HALF INCH THICK

Nashwauk.—The Range usually has a hard time trying to beat the "freaks" which are born in sections where agriculture is more prominent, but a calf born at Sucker Lake about five miles north of Nashwauk will challenge anything in southern areas. A cow belonging to Nestor Maki gave birth to the freak, which resembled a pig. It took three men nine houds to assist with the birth. The calf was twice the size of a normal calf. The head resembled a cow's but had pig's ears, was so large that it was necessary to remove it in pieces with pliers. The hide of the animal was half an inch thick. The ears, hide, legs, and tail were like those of a pig. The cow survived the ordeal of the birth and is doing nicely.

Named Solomon Islands

The Solomon islands in the Pacific, east of New Guinea, were so named by Spanish explorers of the Sixteenth century who were seeking to discover the countries from which King Solomon had secured his gold and timber for the building of the temple.

Hens Pay Well for Feed, Farm Records Indicate

"You've got to feed hens well to make them lay," says Miss Cora Cooke, extension poultry specialist, University Farm, St. Paul.

Records kept by 92 Minnesota farm poultry raisers in 1935 afford striking proof of the advantage of liberal feeding, she explains. Hens in the highest-producing flock in the group averaged 131 pounds of feed each, produced 217 eggs, and returned the owner $2.25 per hen for his labor, after other expenses were paid. In the lowest-producing flock, the hens averaged 65 pounds of feed, produced only 103 eggs, and left only 45 cents for the owner's labor.

Another important factor in flock earnings, says Miss Cooke, is the percentage of chicks saved and the general health of the laying hens. The year's death losses for the lowest-producing flock were 26 per cent of chicks and 33 per cent of hens, as against 8 per cent of chicks, and 5.5 per cent of hens for the highest producing flock. Sanitation is the chief factor in disease control.

That money can be saved on home-mixed feeds is indicated by the fact that the owner of the highest-producing flock mixed her own feed at a cost of $1.48 a hundredweight as compared with $1.96 cost in the lowest-producing flock where commercial mixtures were used almost altogether.

About the same difference in methods and returns were found when records of the 19 best-laying flocks were compared with the 19 lowest, Miss Cooke reports.

The Fairmont Sentinel has worked out a scheme for preventing war. It is the passage of a law reading, "Be it enacted that from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful to start any new war till the last one is paid for."

BACK TAXES MAY BE PAID UNDER TEN YEAR PLAN

Delinquent taxpayers who had given up hope of being able to redeem their property will find in the new "installment payment plan", passed at the recent special legislative session, a "lifeline" that might save them, according to a statement from the Minnesota Taxpayers association.

Under the new law, the taxpayer can enter into a contract with the state to refinance his old taxes for a period of ten years, under the following plan:

Pay one-tenth of the back taxes each year for ten years.

Pay all current taxes each year during that period.

The delinquent must make a contract for this kind of settlement before November 1, 1937, but not thereafter.

The agreement, if strictly adhered for ten years, would cancel all penalties and accumulated interest now due on back taxes. This would cancel the confessed judgment and original judgments.

The purpose of the new law is to bring in these outstanding delinquencies, and to encourage the taxpayer to pay up his old accounts. The delinquent can regain title to his land; he can clean up all these back taxes by systematically dividing the payments over a lonfg period, and he will have a smaller amount to pay because of the cancellation of all accumulated penalties.

Should a large percentage of taxpayers take advantage of the leniency offered in this law is conceivably would help to bring down current tax levies, since the total normal delinquency would be materially reduced in the state, the Minnesota Taxpayers Association points out.

If the law is not a success, it likely will be because no provision was made to acquaint the public with the provisions of the law, and thus delinquents might not be informed of the matter. Public officials, the press, and county taxpayers' associations have an opportunity here to assist in bringing the matter to the attention of the public, to help the delinquents and to get the benefit that would come if all these old bills were paid up, the state association points out.

Hazel Young Man Edits N. W. School Yearbook

HAZEL YOUNG MAN ON MOORHEAD HONOR ROLL

Melvin Wedul, Hazel, earned an A rating on the winter quarter honor roll of the Moorhead State Teachers College, where he is enrolled as a Junior. Such an award shows that the student completed his winter course with more than 40 honor points and with no grade of less than B. Wedul, recently elected Education commissioner on the student commissian, took office when the new body met Thursday, Mar. 12.

WPA WORKERS TO BE SHIFTED TO OTHER AGENCIES

Transfer of approximately 18,000 WPA workers to work projects of other federal agencies beginning operations in the state this spring is ordered in a letter from Harry L. Hopkins to Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator.

Mr. Christgau said the reduction in the WPA rolls will be made gradually between now and June 30. The WPA employment figure at present is approximately 65,000. It will be reduced to 46,600 under the order from Washington.

In establishing the reduced quota for Minnesota, which is in line with the 700,000 nation-wide slash in WPA employment, consideration was given to such factors as seasonal employment, the opening of Spring farm work and jobs available in other phases of the work program, the letter from Mr. Hopkins states.

The reduced quotas for each of the nine WPA districts in Minnesota are now being prepared, Mr. Christgau said, and will be made on a basis of efficiency and relative need of the individual workers. Discrimination on any basis—personal, political or otherwise—will not be tolerated, he declared.

Stooped Shoulders in Children Are Held Due to Variety of Ailments

When the parent or teacher exhorts the round-shouldered child to stand up straight, he should remember, according to the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association, that stoop shoulders and round backs are not always the result of carelessness and bad training.

Today's bulletin from the doctors' committee lists a series of ailments that have been found recently to be at the bottom of a number of cases of what seemed to be perverse stooping.

Among them were stomach and intestinal disturbances, malnutrition, fatigue and even chronic infections of the nose and throat and eye defects.

Besides these, of course, changes within the spine, itself, were found that were due to tuberculosis or to growth deformities.

Ordinary mass exercises and exhortation do more harm than good in cases like these and the doctors issue a special warning in this bulletin against drastic, ill-advised efforts to make the chronically stoop shouldered to stand up straight.

A careful physical examination with the aid of X-ray should be made first to find out just what is causing the deformity. Posture exercises based upon accurate knowledge of what is wrong can be prescribed, then, and the child benefited.

CALL FOR DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION

Pursuant to the authority vested in me, as Chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Pennington County, Minnesota, and by direction of John F. D. Meighen, Chairman of the Minnesota Democratic State Committee legally composed of the majority of the Chairmen of the Democratic County Committees and representative Democrats of the State, I hereby call a Democratic County Convention of Pennington County, Minnesota, to be held at the Court House in Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on Thursday, April 16, 1936, at One o'clock P. M.

The purpose of this County Convention is to elect one delegate and one alternate at large, and fourteen (14) additional delegates and alternates to the Democratic State Convention legally called and to be held at the Auditorium in Saint Paul, Minnesota, on Tuesday, April 21, 1936, and also to elect a County Committee for Pennington County.

Party usage and custom in Pennington County does not require precinct caucuses, and the aforesaid County Convention shall be a mass convention, and as such, elect its county delegates to the State Convention and such County Committee.

Every legal voter in said precinct who affirms that he voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for President, in 1932, and that he intends to vote for the Democratic nominee for President in 1936, and every legal votor who did not vote for President in 1932 and intends to vote for the Democratic Nominee for President in 1936, shall be eligible to serve as a delegate at the said mass county convention, and be eligible to serve as a delegate to the State Convention. However, no person who is not a legal voter in the County shall be permitted to vote at the County Convention.

H. O. CHOMMIE,
County Chairman

ADOPT SIX YEAR HIGH SCHOOL HERE

The local school board has voted to adopt the six year high school plan, to become effective with the term starting next September. Many of the surrounding schools have had the six year plan this year. The increased state aid makes the change doubly attractive. Instruction in the seventh and eighth grades will be departmentalized, that is a Mathematics teacher will teach that subject, and an English teacher will teach English. There will be no changes in assembly as the seventh and eighth grades will use their room as a homeroom.

The net result will be a larger offering of subjects in high school. Two classes in typing will be offered to those who wish that course. It is hoped that a class in Economic Geography can be offered as an alternative for French II. A Foreign Language is required for college entrance so many will still wish to take a Foreign Language.

FREIGHT TRANSPORT LINE THRU THIS CITY DENIED

The application of the Janke Transfer line and Elsholtz Transportation company for motor freight transport routes from Crookston thru Red Lake Falls to Thief River Falls were denied by the Minnesota Railroad and warehouse commission Wednesday. It was held by the commission that adequate service in this territory is being given by the Great Northern and Soo Line railways.

Meetings were held in this city about a year ago relative to the establishment of the routes and a hearing was held before the commission at Crookston last July 10. Witnesses from Red Lake Falls, Brooks, Plummer, St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls testified at the hearing.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

SEED LOANS ARE NOW BEING MADE

The County Agent's Office has been designated to receive federal seed loan applications again this year, it was announced this week. Loans may be obtained for the purchase of the following seed: Ceres and Marquis wheat, durum wheat, barley, flax and potatoes. Seed loan funds are not available for the purchase of alfalfa, sweet clover, corn or other forage crop seeds. The maximum amount available to one applicant is $200. In order to save time, an applicant should have a list of the seed he will need to plant his crop acres, and the correct legal description of all the land he will farm in 1936. Waivers are required from all tenants. Tenants should have with them at the time of making the application the name and address of their landlords so that waivers can be sent out without delay, County Agent R. M. Douglass said.

Filing fees for individuals receiving seed loans will be paid by them directly to the register of deeds in the county where the land on which the seed is to be planted is located.

A county committee has been appointed to approve or disapprove all applications. All approved applications will be submitted by the district fieldman, O. T. Johnson of Warren, to the state office.

Ellsworth.—Two baby boys arrived in an Ellsworth home on the same day, and one couple became parents and grandparents at the same time. Mother and daughter are doing well, with their sons, uncle and nephew, making a good start in life from the same birth date. Mrs. Chris Tiesler, living at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meester, gave birth to a son shortly after noon, and five hours later a son was born to Mrs. Meester herself.

ANOTHER BLIZZARD

Wafted in on wings of a brisk northwest wind, a blizzard hit this section of the state and eastern North Dakota Tuesday afternoon. A drizzling rain which later changed to sleet, fell during the morning, but a sudden drop in temperature brot on the snow storm. Motorists experienced much difficulty because of poor visibility. Many roads, including the school bus routes, were blockaded by the snow.

BISKEYS LEAVE FOR DENVER, COLORADO

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Biskey and son, George, Jr., left Tuesday morning enroute to Denver, Colo. Mr. Biskey has long been a sufferer from asthma and is going west in hopes a change of climate will benefit his health. They had no definite place in view, but will stop for a time at Denver, and later may go into Nevada and New Mexico. They also plan to make a trip later up into Oregon and Washington where relatives of Mrs. Biskey reside. George, Jr., will accompany them to Denver and will return from there to resume his studies in the School of Forestry at the University of Minnesota.

Should Mr. and Mrs. Biskey find a place where climate is suitable, they may decide to purchase a place and make their home in the west. Their many friends in St. Hilaire and vicinity sincerely hope they may be successful in their quest and that Mr. Biskey will find relief from his ailment.

Surprise Birthday Party

Mrs. Ordean K. Olson was pleasantly surprised by a group of friends at her home last Saturday evening, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. A very pleasant evening was spent, and later a tasty lunch was served. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson and son, Mr. and Mrs. John Gunstad and sons, Mrs. Effie Rolland and son, Lyle, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Olness, Miss Lisa Hendrickson, Mr. and Mrs. Jens Almquist.

MINNESOTA RIVER OVERFLOWS

The Minnesota and Cannon rivers in southern part of the state have been on a rampage the past week. Huge ice gorges formed at many points causing the rivers to overflow, flooding thousands of acres of low land, and forcing residents to seek higher ground for themselves and livestock. Dynamite has been used to blast out the ice jams, and it is believed all danger of serious flood is over.

INDIANS TRY TO DOUBLE UP WOLF HIDE BOUNTY

Roseau.—County officials at Roseau are having quite a time with Indians from Warroad who are trying to double up on the bounty for wolf hides. The redskins had fixed over the pelts so the changes had escaped the detection of the town clerk. However, he became suspicious and immediately afterwards called O. A. Brager to examine the pelts and question the Indians. The Red Men were a little leary about trying to collect the money themselves, and sent a youngster to collect. Brager, acting on the suggestion of the town clerk, examined the pelts. He found that the wily Indians had sewed new skin on the ears where the pelts skin on the ears where the punches had been made. They were brought before the sheriff and county attorney for questioning, and after a good scare and lecture they were let go.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Repairs were made Wednesday and Thursday on the churn at the creamery.

The Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran church meets Friday afternoon, April 3rd. A group of ladies will serve.

G. Bergland, manager of the creamery at Thief River Falls, was down Monday for a call on friends and former neighbors.

A large number of people from St. Hilaire and vicinity attended the annual Spring Show held last week at Thief River Falls.

Regular monthly meeting of the creamery directors was held Friday at the creamery. Checks to patrons for cream delivered the previous month, were issued that day.

Because of rather uncertain road conditions, no one from here attended the St. Hilaire-Thief River Falls re-union party held last Saturday at Minneapolis.

Anton Johnson of Rocksbury, was taken ill last week with a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism or similar ailment, and is now confined to bed. He is reported to be somewhat improved, but will be unable to be out for another week or two at least.

Mention has been made at different times about radio interference and there has been much improvement in reception but Wednesday morning someone, likely unknowingly, caused a lot of noise. This is mentioned so villagers can check up on their appliances and motors.

Reemployment Office Places Men on Road Jobs

Persons interested in obtaining work on state highway construction projects this spring should apply to the National Reemployment Service, according to a bulletin from the highway department. "The state highway department has nothing to do with hiring men for construction jobs handled by contract", the bulletin explains. "Each contractor will hire his own men from the lists of the National Re-employment Service, which has offices in the various counties. Applicants for road work should apply directly to their county re-employment office and not to the highway department."

BOTTLES RIDE ON RUNNING BOARD OF CAR 28 MILES

Starbuck.—A point for the careful driving of women was scored recently when two empty oil bottles rode on the running board of a car a distance of 28 miles without falling off, the driver being Miss Louise Tharaldson. S. O. Koland filled the crank case of her car at Starbuck, forgetting to take off the two empty bottles from the running board. Miss Tharaldson also did not notice the bottles and drove to Hancock, 28 miles away, the bottles falling to the ground when she opened the door to get out.

Dr. D. S. Horn, the Ulen dentist, will visit St. Hilaire on Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Last day for payment of electric light and power bills this month, with discount, is next Saturday, March 28.

Good attendance marked monthly meeting of the Woman's Club held last Thursday night at the B. M. Club rooms.

George Biskey, Jr., who attends the school of forestry at the University of Minnesota, came up Saturday to spend a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Biskey.

Many people thruout this section report having seen crows, robins and meadowlarks the past week. Evidently they miscalculated the season a bit as the weather is anything but spring-like this week.

BRAY

Thoralf Hegstad of Bemidji, Dorothy Wilbert and Clarence Swanson and Irene Schneider visited at the Lorentz Hegstad home on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mosbeck, Ellen and George Lindbloom and Martin Anderson were Sunday visitors at the Ruben Rux home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Swanson and family and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Larson and Lillian were Friday evening visitors at George Swanson's.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosbeck visited at the home of Mrs. Olaf Mosbeck on Sunday.

Henry Ortloff called at Gust Johnson's on Wednesday.

Miss Irene Schneider visited school in Dist. 180 on Wednesday.

Mrs. J. O. Swanson and Mrs. Annie Lindbloom were Monday visitors at the Lorentz Hegstad home.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Larson, Lillian and Harry and Martin Anderson spent Wednesday evening at Christ Person's.

Miss Thora Hegstad of Minneapolis accompanied by her niece are visiting this week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lorentz Hegstad.

Alice and Vivian Olson, Raymond and Robert Ortloff and Johnnie Lindbloom were Sunday visitors at O. K. Sevre's.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosbeck visited at Gust Johnson's Thursday evening.

Rev. H. A. Larson was a Friday supper guest at A. P. Hegstrom's.

Arthur Johnson visited Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Victor Peterson who is a patient at the St. Luke's Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosbeck were Saturday visitors at Emil Larson's.

Short Walk Around World

One can technically walk around the world in just three steps by just walking round either the North or South poles.

MARQUETTES MOVE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marquette and family, who have occupied the Harry Winter residence in town the past two years, moved this week to a recently purchased place in Rocksbury township near Thief River. Mr. Marquette is busy this week moving his apiary equipment to the new home, and he will establish headquarters for his bee business there.

MINNIE ORTLOFF DIED ON SUNDAY

Miss Minnie Ortloff, age 55, died Sunday afternoon at the home of her brother, Herman Ortloff, in this village, after an illness of over a year. Miss Ortloff was born in Sibley county Feb. 12, 1881 and came to this community with her parents the following year. The Ortloff family resided on what is now the Kruse farm west of here, for many years before they moved to St. Hilaire. Since death of her mother, Miss Ortloff resided in her home in west part of town until she became ill after which she resided with her brother.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Ida Steinhauer of Holt, and Mrs. Albert Seaverson of Thief River Falls, and by five brothers: Herman, Andrew and Paul of this community, Otto at Paynesville, and Harry at Red Lake Falls.

Funeral services were held today at the Erickson & Lund funeral chapel at Thief River Falls, and interment was made in the family plot in the Rux cemetery northwest of here. Sympathy of numerous friends is extended to the bereaved relatives.

WHIST MEET POSTPONED

Because of road conditions which prevented attendance of many who had planned to be present, the whist tournament scheduled for Wednesday night this week, was postponed until a week later, Wednesday night, April 1st. It is expected roads will be passable all thruout the community by that date.

Investments in fur-farming in this country are now estimated at $50,000,000.

AGREEMENT NEAR ON PENSION PLAN

An agreement with federal officials whereby an allotment of federal funds will be made to Minnesota for payment of old-age pensions, is close at hand. Attorney General Peterson will rule this week on whether or not it will be permissible for the state to spend its $75,000.00 fund set aside for administering the pension act in the state, in 10 months instead of 16 months. If a favorable decision is given on this point, there seems to be no other difficulties of importance to prevent putting the pension act into effect.

Additional old age pension regulations, including a rule limiting pensioners to not more than $300 in cash or assets, have been forwarded to county pension agencies. Though the law provides a maximum limit of $3,500, the lower limitation is permissible as a matter of practical administration.

It is understood county agencies will take up first the applications of persons who have received payments under the old county system.

ENDORSE CONG. R. T. BUCKLER

Unanimous endorsement for Congressman R. T. Buckler was made at the Ninth district Farmer-Labor convention recently held at Erskine. Mr. Buckler has made a fine record for himself as representative in Congress from the Ninth district during his present term, and this endorsement shows his efforts are appreciated.

Harry Allen is back in fighting trim after being confined to his home a couple weeks by illness.

HOME MANAGEMENT LEADERS TO MEET

First meeting of leaders of the Home Management Project will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 20, 21 and 22 thruout the county, according to word received from County Agent R. M. Douglass. It is also stated that new groups may be formed if done in the near future so that leaders chosen may attend the meetings mentioned above, for their instruction. Any woman of this community who may be interested in joining one of the existing groups, or in forming a new one, may call on Mrs. O. Gunstad, township chairman for St. Hilaire, for further information.

Situation in Europe Is Still Threatening

SIXTY thousand German troops in the Rhineland that was supposed to be demilitarized. Practically the entire French army in and behind the vast system of fortifications along France's eastern frontier. The French government, backed by the other signers of the violated Locarno treaty and by the little entente, Poland and Russia, demanding that Germany withdraw her troops from the Rhineland or that sanctions, economic and possibly military, be imposed by the League of Nations. Great Britain trying hard to keep the peace, reproving Germany, supporting the French demands in great measure, but urging that Hitler's proposal of new non-aggression pacts be given consideration. Reichsfuehrer Hitler reviewing his forces in the reoccupied territory and receiving the loud plaudits of the inhabitants for restoring their military sovereignty.

M. Flandin

That in a nutshell was the perilous situation in Europe as the representatives of the Locarno nations and the council of the league assembled in London to consider what to do next. Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin of France was there with the full support of Premier Sarraut for his demands that immediate action be taken to bring Hitler to time.

The Franco-Russian treaty came up in the French senate and was ratified by a huge majority. It is this pact that Hitler gave as his excuse for remilitarizing the Rhineland, asserting that it was a violation of the Locarno treaty, being aimed at Germany. It is the final link in the "iron ring" around the reich.

Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy, signers of the Locarno treaty, agreed that Germany had violated that pact and the Versailles treaty and referred the matter to the council of the league. But Britain, still striving to find the peaceful way out of the row, was averse to the immediate imposition of sanctions, and naturally Italy, herself suffering from that form of punishment, felt the same way. Foreign Secretary Eden of England continued his efforts to persuade Hitler to withdraw the troops from the Rhineland pending discussions, and urged upon Flandin the advisability of considering the German chancellor's proposals for a 25-year peace pact.

Co-operating with the British for peace, the league council invited Hitler to send a representative to its meeting. His reply was considered "unsatisfactory" by the British and enraged the French. He said, in effect, that he would send a representative to the council's deliberations only on condition that the other powers meet it there on a basis of full equality and promptly consider new treaty negotiations to replace the Locarno pact.

French Premier Sarraut and his cabinet, according to officials in Paris, at once instructed Flandin to fight to the bitter end for the punishment of Germany, deciding that it would be better to take such a stand, even if it "wrecks the league," rather than bargain away "the nation's just right" by accepting Hitler's proposals for a new Locarno. Sarraut was reported to be ready even to quit the league, taking France's allies with him, if the council did not accede to his demands.

Germany's "army day" celebration was much quieter in the Rhineland than had been planned, owing to the tense situation. Troops at Frankfort were inspected by War Minister Werner von Blomberg and there was a speech by Hitler; but the military parades and other features were canceled. Elsewhere in the reich the day was duly observed, but the feeling of anxiety was general and unconcealed.

The Frankfurter Zeitung, which like all German newspapers is under close government supervision, published a warning that Germany may repudiate her foreign debts if she is penalized for the rearmament of the Rhineland.

New York's Building Service Strike Ends

COMPROMISE brought to an end the two weeks' strike of building service workers in New York and thousands of elevator operators and other employees returned to their jobs in some 2,400 apartment houses and business structures. The settlement provided for immediate re-employment of all strikers and arbitration of wages and hours, and it was hailed as a "great victory" by James J. Bambrick, head of the local union and leader in the strike.

Arbitration of minimum wages and maximum hours under supervision of Ferdinand A. Silcox, chief of the United States forestry service. Wages and hours are to be fixed at the end of each of the next three years on the basis of prevailing economic conditions.

In signing a three year contract with the realty advisory board, representing the employers, union leaders abandoned their demand for a closed or preferential shop. Building operators, in their turn, agreed to reinstate all strikers instead of insisting on the retention of 15 per cent of the replacement workers hired during the strike.

Prince Serge Mdivani Killed by Polo Pony

PRINCE SERGE MDIVANI, one of the more or less famous brothers from the Russian province of Georgia who have married so many American heiresses and movie actresses, was killed by the kick of a polo pony at Delray Beach, Fla., during a game with Cecil Smith's Texan team. Only five weeks before the prince became the husband of Louise Astor Van Alen, and she and her mother witnessed the fatal accident. Serge was divorced by Pola Negri and Mary McCormic, and then married Miss Van Alen, who had divorced his brother Alexis. The latter was killed some months ago in a motor accident in Spain shortly after his marriage to Barbara Hutton had ended in divorce. The third of the brothers is Prince David, former husband of Mae Murray.

Leftist Riots in Spain Arouse the Army

SINCE the recent elections in Spain the riots staged by the leftists have been growing more vicious daily, and after disorders at Logrono in which a number of persons were killed the Spanish army was aroused to vigorous protest. Premier Manuel Azana was told by the officers that unless his new left government adopted measures to stop the widespread violence the army would take the maintenance of order into its own hands. Gen. Carlos Masquelet, minister of war, was said to be in sympathy with the army's demand.

Manuel Azana

Azana held a heated conference with Francisco Largo Caballero, president of the Socialist party and is said to have told him that he believed revolutionary Socialists were responsible for most of the disorders, demanding that the violence cease immediately. Largo insisted that the Socialists be permitted to demonstrate, but finally gave in to the premier and issued orders to all Socialists to behave themselves.

Despite strict censorship imposed by the governor of Logrono it was learned that incendiaries there set fire to six convents and churches, four rightest centers and a rightest newspaper, and then attacked the army barracks, attempting to seize artillery.

Destruction by Floods in Eastern States

SPRING thaws and heavy rains created a serious condition throughout the northeastern states and as far southward as Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and in the Maritime provinces of Canada. The number of reported deaths was not great but many cities and towns were threatened by great ice packs that were swept down the swollen rivers, and vast areas of the countryside were under water. Textile mills and other industrial plants were forced to close down and railway traffic was handicapped.

Britain Names Inskip to Co-Ordinate Defense

PROCEEDING with its great rearmament program, the British government has named Sir Thomas Inskip, attorney general since 1932, to be the co-ordinator of the entire scheme, giving him a newly created cabinet post. This selection by Prime Minister Baldwin was a surprise. It had been thought the place might go to Winston Churchill, Neville Chamberlain, Alfred Duff Cooper or Sir Samuel Hoare.

Sir Thomas Inskip

Sir Thomas is known as an "anti-jingoist," is sixty years old and always is calm and unruffled in the house of commons or at the bar. It will be his duty as defense co-ordinating minister to synchronize activities of the army, navy, and air services.

Cummings Is Winner in Dispute With Ickes

IN UPHOLDING the conviction of Leonard Walter McIntosh, chief clerk of the department of public works of the Virgin islands, on a minor theft charge the federal circuit court of appeals at Philadelphia ruled that the federal department of justice has complete control over the district court and the government attorney of the islands. This was a victory for Attorney General Cummings over Secretary of the Interior Ickes, for the latter's department, using the suit as a test case to determine control of the civil affairs of the Virgin islands, had asked that the conviction of McIntosh be set aside as unjustified.

Newton Jenkins, Chicago, Out for Presidency

NEWTON JENKINS of Chicago, who as an independent candidate for the mayoralty of that city last April, received 11 per cent of the votes cast, has announced that he is a candidate for President of the United States.

"The Third party will nominate a President," he said in a mimeographed statement sent to the newspapers. "I am a candidate for that nomination."

The "Third party" to which he referred is an organization which he had incorporated last year. It has candidates for two municipal offices.

Legal Measures to Stop Seizures of Telegrams

CHIEF JUSTICE ALFRED A. WHEAT of the District of Columbia Supreme court checked the telegram-seizing activities of the Black senate committee on lobbying. He granted the Chicago law firm of Silas H. Strawn an injunction restraining the Western Union Telegraph company from giving the committee copies of the firm's telegrams.

The judge said the subpoena served on the telegraph company by the committee, calling for copies of telegrams "goes way beyond" the committee's powers.

Next day William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher, began a fight in court to keep an original confidential telegram out of the hands of the Black committee; and the American Newspaper Publishers' association denounced the reported seizure of that telegram, which was to one of Mr. Hearst's editors. The association advised any other editor, should he learn of similar action, to consult counsel and "take vigorous steps to protect his constitutional rights."

Franco Makes Paraguay Totalitarian State

COL. RAFAEL FRANCO, who became provisional president of Paraguay after the recent revolution there, has set up a totalitarian government modeled after German Nazism and Italian Fascism. He issued a decree which declared the state and the "liberating revolution" of February 17 as indivisible and banned for one year political, labor, or other unions which "do not emanate explicitly from the state."

Rafael Franco

Paraguay, the government asserted, will be purged of "endemic, demagogic, industrial, and sectarian evils." The official statement places in the "liberating army" the principal source of authority.

The aims of the new government, the decree said, will be the construction of a new, strong Paraguay and constitutional reorganization for a future republic.

Franco's government was formally recognized at Asuncion by diplomatic representatives of the United States, Chile, Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Uruguay, Great Britain, France, Germany and Spain.

Death of Earl Beatty, British Navy Figure

EARL BEATTY, commander of the British war fleet in 1916-18 and afterward first lord of the admiralty, died in London after a long illness at the age of sixty-five. Rising from a sick-bed to attend the funeral of Earl Jellicoe last November, he predicted that he would soon follow his colleague. Lord Beatty had a meteoric career as a naval commander and displayed his ability in the battles of Heligoland Bight and Dogger Bank, and especially in the battle of Jutland where he commanded the first battle cruiser squadron. His wife, who died in 1932, was Ethel Field, daughter of the Chicago merchant prince, Marshall Field.

Davis Sent to Europe to Study Conditions

CHESTER C. DAVIS, head of the invalidated AAA, is not going to administer the soil conservation program devised as a substitute. President Roosevelt announced that Mr. Davis would leave soon on a trip to Europe to make a special study for the government of economic conditions bearing on the agricultural plans for this country. Critics of the administration immediately assumed that Mr. Davis and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had disagreed and that the former was being gently edged out of the picture. This Mr. Wallace warmly denied, asserting there had been no friction.

England's Bachelor King Hints He May Marry

GREAT BRITAIN is interested and pleased to learn that King Edward VIII may abandon his state of bachelorhood and take unto himself a wife. This was revealed when the king authorized these lines in the message submitting the civil list to the house of commons: "His majesty desires that the contingency of his marriage should be taken into account so that, in that event, there should be a provision for her majesty."

Five princesses of Europe are considered most eligible to become Edward's spouse. These are Irene and Catherine of Greece (whose ancestry is Danish), Juliana of the Netherlands, Eugenia of Greece, and Kyra of Russia, daughter of Grand Duke Cyril of Russia who is pretender to the Russian throne.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington. — Overshadowing all else in the national capital at this writing is the controversy that is boiling and surging around the head of Alabama's Democratic Senator Black, who is the chairman of the senate's lobby investigating committee. As an offshoot of this controversy, the federal communications commission is in water much too hot for bathing and it begins to appear that when the steam blows off the communications commission is likely to be a thoroughly discredited federal agency because of the part it played in Senator Black's unprecedented seizure of private telegrams from the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies.

Need Curb on Inquiries

Speaking generally, it has been seldom that a United States senator has ever attempted to assert the authority that Senator Black has used and it is equally unprecedented that a federal agency has gone to the extremes that characterized the action of the communications commission in connection with the seizure of the messages.

But some good may come from the police court prosecution tactics employed by Senator Black and some good may come from the accusations leveled at the communications commission because that body helped Senator Black carry out his plans.

The country-wide indignation that has arisen from Senator Black's usurpation of power has brought to the front a question that needs public attention and needs it badly.

I refer, in this connection, to the steadily expanding efforts of congressional investigators, especially senatorial investigators, to take over, as their own, powers that always have been regarded as reserved exclusively to the courts. The consensus among Washington observers certainly is that the legislative inquiries have developed to a point where the most humble requirements of justice have been and are being completely ignored. Whether they are so intended, these inquiries, and this includes investigations conducted by committees not only of congress but of state legislators and even city councils, are approaching the point where they are almost tyrannical.

It goes without saying, then, that the time has arrived for citizens to assert themselves. These inquiries will not proceed when the elected legislators, state or national, learn that the people do not approve of such high-handed tactics.

* * *

In order to have an understanding of the latest of these escapades, it is necessary to review briefly what has happened in the case of the senate lobby investigating committee. Almost a year ago the committee sought the aid of the federal communications commission which had the color of authority in law for investigating the business of the telegraph companies. Senator Black issued a broad subpoena, directing the telegraph companies to make available any and all messages his committee desired. Communications commission agents then went into the telegraph company files, read everything they could find and made copies of all of the messages which those agents, under guidance of Black investigators, thought would be helpful to the Black committee in exposing operations of private individuals.

Black's Activities

The purpose of this, as outlined by Senator Black, was to locate clues to the machinations of business interests who were seeking passage or defeat for legislation pending in congress. The Alabama senator wanted to "show up" lobbyists. He contended and has maintained consistently that "these malefactors of great wealth" could not accomplish any influence in congress unless it were done secretly and "in the dark."

In other words, Senator Black persuaded members of the communications commission to help him in his fishing expedition. He persuaded that organization that it should become a party to an unrecedented effort designed as a dragnet, a movement to smear anybody and everybody who had used telegraphic service.

The Black plan was carried out in secret. Senders and receivers of messages which those agents copied knew nothing about it. The operation was just as much "in the dark" as any of the lobbying about which Senator Black complained, even more so. It was only by accident that the facts became known but when they did become known, the lid was promptly blown off.

The end is not yet, nor is it even in sight. One federal judge has issued a restraining order against such tactics and a half dozen other applications for similar orders are pending. Undoubtedly, the questions, whatever the rulings may be, will find their way eventually to the Supreme court of the United States.

The senate itself is looking into the situation. It has, by resolution, asked the federal communications commission to make a report stating the facts and by what authority it acted.

So there is much hubbub about the whole thing and if one may judge from the line of conversation generally heard around Washington, Senator Black is on the hot spot, and the spot thus far has shown no indications of entering a cooling stage.

* * *

Senate investigations long have been considered by many people as a modus operandi that creak with unfairness. Unbiased observers frequently have criticized them because of the methods employed. It seems absolutely necessary that the senate should have power to call witnesses, to ask legitimate and proper questions and to force answers. If it is going to enact legislation to correct evils, it must be equipped with such powers. But the point is that in seeking such information, the senate has consistently permitted its committees to act in a fashion that can be described by no other word than outrageous. I have watched them over a period of nearly twenty years and seldom, if ever, has there been an important investigation that did not degenerate sooner or later into a condition that savored of police court practices.

Charge Unfairness

Respectable citizens have been subpoened, have gone before the committees willing to tell their complete story, anxious to co-operate and have found themselves treated as outlaws and criminals. This situation has become so prevalent in senate investigations that when any citizen is subpoened to appear before a senate investigation these days, his neighbors and friends begin to ask each other what crookedness is involved. In other words, the psychology of the senate investigation, as it has developed through the last fifteen or twenty years, has become one that reverses the constitutional right of an individual that he is innocent until he is proved guilty.

For several years, there has been a bill pending in congress designed to prevent, or at least reduce, lynchings. The theory back of it is that many times innocent persons have been lynched and that every one has a right to a trial by jury in a properly constituted court. Over, across the Atlantic ocean, dictators have operated and have employed the "blood purge," the summary death sentence or the execution without granting the accused the right of defense. Undoubtedly some persons guilty of murder or rape have been lynched; undoubtedly the "blood purge" by the Nazi rulers destroyed some bad characters and undoubtedly the summary executions by the Soviet or the Fascists of Italy have provided death for individuals who were festering sores to humanity, but there can be no doubt that in the case of the lynchings or in the case of the "blood purge" or the summary executions, many innocent persons have had their lives snuffed out.

So it is with senate investigations. Undoubtedly they have uncovered some dirty crooked dealings. Undoubtedly they have brought to public attention activities and conditions that ought to have been exposed. Yet, the fact remains that nearly all of our people are decent people, law abiding and self-respecting. And when senate investigations go beyond proper limits they approach, if they do not wholly become, tryanny.

* * *

In defense of Senator Black's action in the lobby investigation, I think it can fairly be said that he is not wholly to blame if he has gone further than any other in the program of inquiry and prosecution upon which he has launched. Little by little, bit by bit, the senate has arrogated to itself authority hitherto not used by it. Little by little, it has encroached upon what many believe to be the jurisdiction of the courts and in a like manner it has taken unto itself powers hitherto supposed to have been exclusively reserved to the executive department of government.

Not Wholly to Blame

It would seem, then, that if other senate committees had established the precedent, Senator Black could properly use the same methods. The trouble in his case is that he did not stop at limits previously set, discreditable as those limits were, but went beyond them.

To repeat, there is every indication that some good will come out of this circumstance. Important men and brilliant lawyers and great organizations like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Liberty league have taken note of the steadily expanding power claimed by the senate. This means that the questions involved will get into the courts. It is to be hoped that they will be presented to the courts in such a manner that the questions may be finally and lastingly answered, that the powers of the legislators may be delimited and that a definite expression may come from the judiciary that will determine whether members of the house and the senate can serve at once as legislators, judges and prosecutors.

Like the Schoolmarm, Wild Duck Appreciates Hospitality

Remember the country "schoolmarm"? Spending one week with one family and the next with another, she fared well on good food and comfortable sleeping quarters. "If wild ducks could have such hospitality for three years, their annual migrations would soon resemble those of 50 years ago," says Col. H. P. Sheldon of the United States bureau of biological survey. "Like the 'schoolmarm,' a wild duck appreciates good food and good resting places."

"The 'schoolmarm' wouldn't have lasted long on starvation rations and a plank bed. Our ducks won't last long either if the public continues to let itself be guided by the slogan, "Let's kill 'em while they're here."

UNCLE SAM EASES PANAMA PAIN

New Treaty Emphasizes Isthmian Sovereignty; Paves Way for Western Hemisphere Peace Parley This Summer.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

AN ENTIRE new era of permanent peace and "good-neighborliness" may be opened up between the countries on the two American continents when and if the senate ratifies the new treaty between the United States and the Republic of Panama which was signed in March.

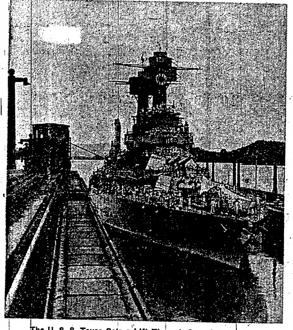
Old differences which have existed between America and her isthmian neighbor for a third of a century have been ironed out to a great extent by the new pact. So heartening has been the news of the new document through the Latin Americas generally, it is believed that the proposed "extraordinary conference" between 21 republics of the Western hemisphere this summer will be assured.

Shortly after the start of the year President Roosevelt voiced a suggestion that a conference of these republics be held, to work out means of assuring for all time the peaceful relations that now exist between the United States and the countries of South and Central America. Since it began to be apparent that in the negotiations with Panama that the United States was exhibiting a liberal attitude that had been largely absent in former bickerings (which have been going on since 1903), many messages of approval from other governments have been understood to have been received in Washington.

Conference Looms Likely.

None of the replies to the President's suggestion have been made public at the time of this writing, but in governmental circles it is considered virtually certain that the peace conference will take place this summer in Buenos Aires.

The attitude of Panama, as well as that of several other Latin-American countries toward the United States has, for the last two or three decades, been something similar to that of the stripling youth who feels that he is being "minded" altogether too closely by his older brother, when he is perfectly able now to look after his own interests. The Roosevelt administration evidently feels this attitude is justified, it appears from the provisions of the new treaty.



The U. S. S. Texas Gets a Lift Through One of the Locks.

Three points, particularly, have always been sore spots in the relations of the United States and Panama. They grew out of the agreement of 1903, under which the United States constructed the Panama canal, and they are:

Our right to intervene when necessary to preserve the peace in Panama, our exercise of the right of eminent domain in acquiring auxiliary lands, and our guarantee of Panama's independence. It is this latter provision which has been the most provocative of "little brother" objections; Panama citizens have always regarded this assumed guaranty of their independence as an outright statement of protectorate.

Although the new treaty is the third attempt to straighten out the differences between the two nations it is the first which has not been a dodge of these three points.

The first attempt was a series of five executive orders, known as the "Taft agreement," which was intended to interpret the original treaty of 1903. It went into effect in December, 1904. By May, 1924, it was decided that the real effectiveness of this expedient had disappeared with the completion of the canal and the agreement was abrogated.

1926 Pact Fails.

For two years the diplomats of the two countries bargained and in July, 1926, a new treaty, intended to be permanent, was signed. But when it came up for ratification in the Panamanian assembly, it went down under a deluge of adverse votes. It had failed even to mention the points of sovereignty, possession of land and paternalism which for 23 years had so grated upon the Panamanian soul.

Not only did real hard feelings develop between the United States and Panama, but other Latin-American countries openly threw their sympathies with Panama.

First indications that the United States was ready to loosen a little came in October, 1933, when President Roosevelt and President Arias of Panama conversed in Washington. It was there that the plans were laid for the new treaty, which is characteristic of the administration's policy of liberal treaties and free trade. The exact terms of the new pact have never been released to the newspapers, but it is known that the theme underlying the entire document is the renunciation of the misconception that Panama is a protectorate of the United States.

Points of Accord.

Actually, the changes brought about by the new treaty will be paper ones, largely, with the exceptions of an agreement to construct a new highway across the isthmus and of certain commercial concessions by the United States. Should the time ever come when Panama's independence needed protection the job would more than likely fall to Uncle Sam for Panama has no army, merely a police force trained by American officers.

The new agreement was consummated under the principle that the protection and operation of the canal is vital to the interests of both nations, and can best be assured through friendly co-operation. The accord reached in 1933, and which it is reasonable to suppose is contained in the treaty, embodies the following chief points:

The United States will use, occupy and control the Canal zone only for the purpose of maintenance, operation, sanitation and protection of the canal.

President Roosevelt Meets President Arias.

Panama is recognized as the sovereign nation, and as such is entitled to enjoy whatever commercial advantages its juxtaposition with the canal shall bring it, provided that these do not prejudice the purposes of the operation of the canal zone by the United States.

Economic questions which do not in any way affect those purposes may, if they cannot be solved through direct negotiation, be submitted to arbitration.

The original treaty held that while Panama was the sovereign nation, the United States was to have jurisdiction over the ten-mile-wide strip that is the Canal Zone, and would possess and exercise all rights just as it would "if it were the sovereign of the territory." The confusion arising from this clause is not hard to understand. For many years Panamanians have felt that it gave the United States sovereign power; and in the Pan-American conference at Havana in 1928 the Panamanian delegate, Dr. Alfredo J. Alfaro, strenuously objected when it was intimated that this was the truth. It was he who signed the new treaty for Panama, where he expects to run for president in 1937.

Dr. Alfredo J. Alfaro, Panamanian Minister.

U. S. Must Buy Land.

Under the old treaty the United States could acquire by right of eminent domain lands and waters outside the Canal Zone "which may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation and protection" of the canal. Technically, of course, this could have been regarded as giving the United States the right to take over any territory in the isthmian republic. Such a "lien" could hardly allow the nation a clear title to its own property, and certainly would have made territorial agreements with other nations embarrassing. The new arrangement takes away the United States' right to acquire territory by condemnation, but gives Uncle Sam the right to acquire it by purchase.

At present the Panamanian city of Colon is separated from the rest of the republic by the Canal Zone, but the new treaty provides a corridor of connection across the zone.

By the treaty of 1903, the Panama Railway company, whose shares are owned entirely by the United States government, was given the sole right of communication across the isthmus. Panam itself was forbidden to build an automobile highway to cover the 47 miles from Panama City to Colon; under the new treaty, such a highway will be constructed.

The railway company has been operating commissaries along its right of way; these were originally intended to serve only American employees, but Panama merchants claim the commissaries have been doing a thriving tourist business and want the business themselves. Now they will get it.

Terminate Gold Payment.

Now that the American dollar has been devalued, the treaty will allow the United States to make its annual payments to Panama in balboas, the Panamanian unit of currency, instead of in gold coins. The 430,000 balboas which constitute the annual payment are worth a little more than the $250,000 in gold formerly paid every year.

To date it has not become known what the United States army and navy think of the new pact, but this will come out when it is placed before the senate for ratification. It can be construed as weakening American control over the canal, and for that reason may fail to make the grade.

The Navy department, under the new agreement, already has turned over two radio stations to the Panama government, and new agreements for the regulation of radio communication have been reached.

May Remove Customs Collector.

The United States still maintains a collector of customs in the Dominican republic, to assure that the Dominican debt to this country is properly serviced. This officer is something of an irritation to the citizens there.

When the conference of American nations gets under way this summer, there is little likelihood that the purposes of preserving the peace will be carried so far as to establish a "league of nations" for the western hemisphere. What is more likely is a joint treaty which all nations can rely on to aid settlement of disputes.

Any agency so created would probably be given the right to investigate the causes of disputes, to try to effect conciliations and, if necessary, to sit as a board of arbitration. It is improbable that any real instrument, such as sanctions, for enforcing decisions will be agreed upon.

'Phooey!' Gives Way to 'Um-m-m!' in Medicines

New Drugs Will Have More Pleasant Taste

PHILADELPHIA.—Better-tasting medicines will apparently be one result of changes in the National Formulary, which might be called an official recipe book for pharmacists. The changes embodied in the sixth revision of this volume which becomes official on June 1, 1936, were explained by Dr. Adley B. Nichols, secretary of the National Formulary committee on revision, at a conference at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science.

The National Formulary—known as N. F. for short—is a companion to that other legal standard for drugs in the United States, the United States Pharmacopoeia. The latter includes drugs and remedies of proven efficacy, regardless of whether they are widely used or seldom used. Products are included in the N. F., on the other hand, on the basis of how generally they are used, Doctor Nichols pointed out.

321 Items Dropped.

In the present revision 321 items were dropped from the book because survey of over a hundred thousand prescriptions, collected from all parts of the country, showed that these items were not used in actual practice. A total of 233 new items were admitted.

Six glandular products were admitted, namely corpus luteum, ovary, ovarian residue, anterior pituitary, whole pituitary and superarenal.

Salty-tasting medicines such as the bromides should taste better because syrup of raspberry is the official "vehicle" for these preparations. The resulting effect is like adding a pinch of salt to bring out the flavor of the syrup.

Syrup of acacia is another new vehicle which makes disagreeable medicines pleasant to take because the colloidal action of the acacia keeps the medicine from coming in contact with the taste buds on the tongue.

Praise Cherry Flavor.

Syrup of cherry is another new addition which has been widely acclaimed.

"Its specific value lies in its fruity tartness which makes it a delightful mask for sour products such as the diluted acids, where the acid almost enhances the taste rather than destroys it," Doctor Nichols says.

For a change, pharmacists are advised to use syrup of thyme which has "a markedly different taste."

A valuable feature of the new N. F. is the addition of many dental products. Among these is aromatized sodium perborate. Because this is now so widely used by laymen without specific directions from a dentist, pharmacists are advised to caution customers about its promiscuous use.

"It has been the cause of severe mouth burns when used as a powder which lodges in cavities and eventually hydrolizes to sodium hydroxide."

Onions' 'Breath' Measured to Find Its Strength by Cornell U. Scientist

ITHACA, N. Y.—Onions can now have the strength of their "breath" measured.

Stated in slightly more technical terms, a definitely quantitative measurement can be made of their pungency, by a new distillation process devised by Hans Platenius, a young research scientist at Cornell university. Mr. Platenius' technique is no mere chemical stunt, either: anyone who has ever bought or sold onions in quantity knows that strength or mildness in onions is reflected in cold cash on the hard cobblestones of the produce marketplace.

The Cornell onion-"breath" measuring system is based on the fact that the pungency of an onion depends on a sulphur-containing oil. There is very little of this in an onion. One mass analysis some years ago used up more than five tons of onions and yielded less than a pound of the oil. But it goes a long way.

The oil, which is known chemically as allyl-propyl-disulphide, contains about 43 per cent of sulphur by weight. Hence, any method which will measure the amount of sulphur that can be evaporated out of a given lot of onions should give an indirect measurement of the quantity of the oniony oil present, and hence of the strength of the onions' "breath."

Sport of Persian Kings and Ladies Was Polo

WASHINGTON.—Polo was sport of kings in Persia over three hundred years ago. Popularity of the fast riding game spread through Asia from Japan to Baghdad, and even veiled ladies had their own sprightly polo matches on the field.

This romantic old chapter in sport history is revived through addition of two polo scenes in Persian miniature painting to Oriental collections in the Freer gallery of art of the Smithsonian institution.

THOSE awards made by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are still causing violent debates all over Hollywood. Executives of the Screen Actors Guild and the Screen Writers Guild telegraphed the members the day before the awards were made, urging them not to attend the presentation banquet. They charged that the academy is producer-controlled, and that studio politics controlled the giving of the awards. Of course the Academy heads denied that, and the battle has been on ever since. It is claimed that Bette Davis was given the prize for the best performance given by a woman during the year, not because of her work in "Dangerous," but because she didn't get the award last year for her performance in "Of Human Bondage." It is urged that Victor McLaglen, who won the prize for the men, gave just one good performance, in "The Informer," whereas Charles Laughton and Paul Muni each gave several. In fact, there are arguments about everything but that belated award of D. W. Griffith for his work in the days before there was any Academy. People wept when Henry Walthall introduced D. W.

If you want to go into the movies, you'll be interested in the news that several of the big companies are planning to develop their own actors, by establishing schools in New York. In fact, Paramount already has such a school, and RKO and Metro are thinking of following their example. It's all caused by the fact that the picture companies have not been able to recruit suitable players from the stage. They've scoured the field of vaudeville, radio, night clubs and college dramatic societies, and have concluded that training schools are the best solution of the problem.

Walt Disney has a school, too, devoted to training artists to animate the Disney pictures. Recently he advertised for help, and only fifty people out of the 1,700 who answered made the grade. Now he's advertising again. The candidates whom he accepts receive a small salary while they're learning the work, and then go on the pay roll as animators.

Randolph Scott, who went into pictures, not because he was stellar material, but because it looked like a good way to make a living, is to be starred in "The Last of the Mohicans."

John Boles had to cut short his personal appearance tour and rush back to Hollywood to be starred in "White Fang." Incidentally, if you have to diet to keep your weight down John can sympathize with you. He starts the day by drinking lemon juice in hot water, and the big moment of dinner, for him, is two lamb chops.

Sunny O'Dea, who danced so well in Eddie Cantor's "Strike Me Pink" that she's headed for the top in pictures, still has to go to school in the studio, because she's not yet eighteen. The fact that she has already made a name for herself as a dancer in New York and London makes not the slightest difference.

Gary Cooper's wife, Sandra, who doesn't care for the movie spotlights, has made a reputation in spite of herself; she's known as one of the best dressed women in Hollywood. The other is Kay Francis.

Uncle Sam Fast Becoming the Greatest Tree Planter

Tree planting in this country is looking up, according to the United States forest service. In 1935 the forest service's own planting on national forest lands was very close to a quarter million acres, more than that planted by all agencies—federal, state, and private—in 1934 when the total was 206,333 acres. Many of the other agencies planted substantially greater acreages in 1935 than the year before.

Uncle Sam, although relatively new at it, is becoming the world's leading tree planter. Up to last year his grand total of plantings by all agencies amounted to only 2,394,397 acres, equal to about half the area of Massachusetts. This year's plantings in the national forests alone will increase the total by more than 10 per cent. There are more than 162,000,000 acres in our national forests alone, and the estimated total forest acreage in this country is over 500,000,000 acres.

MINNEHAHA KILLED BY BROTHER-IN-LAW

Real Fate of Bride of Hiawatha Is Revealed.

Washington.—Minnehaha, the lovely Laughing Water, was murdered by her brother-in-law. Such at least, was the fate of the bride of Hiawatha, according to new details of the Iroquois legend gathered by Dr. J. N. B. Hewitt, ethnologist of the Smithsonian institution.

Her real name is unknown, and it certainly was not Laughing Water, but that does not affect the significance of the story which Mr. Hewitt is placing, step by step, on a historical basis. He is working with details furnished nearly forty years ago by a blind Iroquois ritual leader who was one of the last to have kept uncontaminated the story of his people.

According to this version, which checks in details sufficiently to indicate considerable historical validity, Hiawatha was the child of a Mohawk woman who became the second wife of an Onondaga who had a son by a previous marriage with a woman of his own tribe.

A Ruthless Gangster.

This stepbrother of the future apostle of the Iroquois was, from all accounts, a ruthless gangster who, operating with a band of ruffians, terrorized his own tribe by the typical gangster methods of today. Anybody who opposed him in tribal councils or elsewhere was promptly "put on the spot."

Even in his youth Hiawatha, Mr. Hewitt finds, had decidedly liberal leanings which were to crystallize into a gospel of social action only after tragic and mystical experiences. He was disgusted with the gang rule of his stepbrother, Wa-ta-do-da-ho. He tried to organize a rival party, but could obtain no followers for obvious reasons.

The one man whom Wa-ta-do-da-ho did not dare to "put on the spot" was Hiawatha, owing to a curious combination of circumstances. The Iroquois child took the tribal affiliation of its mother. Hence Hiawatha was not an Onondaga but a Mohawk. If the stepbrother had brought about the murder of a Mohawk he would have brought upon himself the vengeance of that powerful tribe.

He compromised by murdering his stepsister-in-law and her children. She was an Onondaga and her children were Onondagas, and it was no concern of the Mohawks what happened to them. One of these children was a daughter already married and about to become a mother.

Started His Wanderings.

But when Hiawatha returned to his lodge to find his loved one slain, he became temporarily insane and started the strange wilderness "Pilgrim's Progress" which, had the white settlement of America been delayed for a century, might well have been one of the most significant in human history.

At this point, says Mr. Hewitt, the story of Hiawatha becomes so overloaded with legendry and supernatural happenings that it is entirely unhistorical. But at some time in his grief-crazed wanderings the future apostle came under the influence of the great Deganawida, the Christ-figure of the Iroquois epic, and the partnership resulted in the establishment of the strange politico-religious system, based on the doctrine of human brotherhood, which entered into the League of the Iroquois.

Believe Indians Traded Widely in Western U. S.

Tucson, Ariz.—Indians inhabiting western America 2,000 years ago traded throughout a territory thousands of miles in extent, A. F. Hemenway, of the University of Arizona faculty, said.

Evidences of their traffic in furs, shells, roots, and plant fibers have been found, in a nondescript lot of prehistoric strings, cords and woven objects sent the Carnegie institution's desert laboratory here by the Peabody museum of Harvard university.

They were gathered from Indian ruins in Arizona, New Mexico, California, Utah and Texas by Peabody museum workers.

The 33 ancient pieces were turned over to Hemenway for identification. Among the woven objects, apparently garments and ceremonial costumes, Hemenway found Indian hemp, milk weeds of the desert variety from California, and the broad leaf type from northern Arizona; yucca, agave or the century plant, cotton and the Mexican sore eye plant.

Men Stand Higher Than Wives in Class Rooms

Palo Alto, Calif.—Married men make better grades in college than they did before they were married.

Married women may make lower grades.

Those are among the deductions of Mrs. Helen Berg, education graduate at Stanford university, who is making a study of college marriages.

The increased scholarship of men after marriage is accounted for by their greater application to their studies and a more serious attitude toward college growing out of the added responsibility of marriage.

Mrs. Berg feels that when the married coed falls a little in scholarship it may be because of the added work and worry involved in housekeeping.

In company with other American universities, there has been a definite increase in the proportion of married students enrolled at Stanford

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

It didn't strike Benny the Rabbit as queer that a big bozo in a big fur coat should pass by a lot of others huddled under the elevated in Cooper Square and come straight up to him. It was time he was getting a break, Benny figured. Things hadn't been coming his way in a long time. Too many panhandlers working down town. The take was hardly anything—only enough for one deck of snow all day. The big bozo looked good for at least two bits. Maybe a buck. A dollar would be wealth. Instead of opening up, the big bozo told Benny to get into a taxi with him. Benny didn't hesitate. Maybe the big bozo wanted to show him off to some friends uptown. He was willing to be exhibited as a Bowery bum for Park avenue—that surely meant dough and maybe a lot of it.

• • •

The apartment in which Benny found himself took away his breath. There were all kinds of silk curtains, gold chairs—and gold doorknobs! He heard music, too, not the kind that came from Bowery radios but the kind that leaked out from the Metropolitan Opera house—class stuff. The big bozo was talking to him. He could have anything he wanted to eat—all he had to do was order it. So Benny said he'd like a thick steak, cooked rare, with the juice oozing out, a lot of scallions, mashed potatoes, gravy, any other knicknacks handy, coconut custard pie and coffee. That was o. k. with the big bozo but first Benny would have to take a bath. Benny hesitated. He knew there was some kind of a catch to it. But steak and onions were worth even a bath.

• • •

Surprised was Benny to find that bathing was actually pleasant—when done in a sunken marble tub instead of standing on a slippery floor under a shower that some times squirted only cold water. It wasn't ordinary water either because it had perfume in it. So he took his time about getting through. When he did come out, he got mad. His clothes had disappeared from the dressing room in which he had left them. He wasn't mad long. In place of his rags was a brand new suit that just fitted—and silk underwear!

• • •

Feeling as if he owned the whole world, Benny came out and sat down at the table with the big bozo. He was glad that there were only two places—he wouldn't have to do any act until after he had been fed. A butler came in with a silver platter on which was a huge steak with red juice oozing out of it. Other flunkeys brought in mashed potatoes, green peas, mushrooms and a dish heaped high with scallions. The big bozo heaped Benny's plate and Benny went to work.

• • •

Having scraped up the last crumbs of the cocoanut custard pie, Benny drained his coffee cup and lighted the gold-banded cigar the big bozo handed him. Even if he didn't get anything more out of it he had no kick coming. Never in his life had he ever even imagined there could be such a meal. But he had to have a showdown. The big bozo said he knew Benny hadn't been getting the breaks so he had thought it was up to him to even things a little.

• • •

He wanted Benny to get a new start in life. The new suit he was wearing was a part of it. In the hall was hanging a new heater which was his—an overcoat exactly like the one the big bozo wore. That wasn't all. To make a new start, took dough. Removing a roll from his pocket, the big bozo started peeling off fifties. He didn't stop until he piled up $1,000 which he handed to Benny.

• • •

Just as Benny's fingers closed around that $1,000, smart raps on the thin soles of his shoes caused him to leap to his feet. Before him stood a big bozo but he was wearing a blue instead of a fur overcoat. Benny, fearful of the works, took it on the lam.

"I hate to do it," said the copper to himself. "But if I didn't wake those junkers up, they'd freeze to death before morning."

Gland Is Love Center

Accidents in 1935 Take 99,000 Lives

Motor Vehicle Deaths Lead the Ghastly Total.

Chicago.—Accidents in the United States last year caused approximately 99,000 deaths, according to estimates made public by the national safety council. There were 365,000 permanent disabilities and 9,100,000 temporary injuries. The cost of these accidents, including wage loss, medical expense and property damage, was approximately $3,400,000,000.

The accidental death total was the third highest in history. It was exceeded in 1934 and in 1930.

Motor vehicle accidents again led as a cause of death, with home accidents second. Council tabulations show that the 99,000 deaths occurred as follows:

Motor Vehicle	36,400
Other Public	17,500
Home	31,500
Occupational	16,500
Total	99,000

Accidental deaths of children under fifteen declined from 15,400 in 1934 to 14,300 in 1935, a drop of approximately 7 per cent. The decline in adult deaths was only about 1 per cent—from 85,600 to 84,700.

Motor Vehicle Deaths Lead.

The motor vehicle death total last year registered an all-time high, increasing 1 per cent over the 1934 figure. Deaths were twice as high as in 1923 and nearly 50 per cent above 1927.

Two-thirds of all traffic accidents last year occurred in small towns under 10,000 population and in rural areas. Rural fatalities have increased 44 per cent since 1924, whereas deaths in cities have advanced but 27 per cent. More than 40 per cent of the traffic accident victims last year were pedestrians.

Only among children of school age were there fewer motor vehicle deaths last year than in 1934. No change occurred in the fifteen to twenty-four age group, and in all other age classifications there were increases. Child motor vehicle accidents have increased much less than those of adults since 1922, when safety education began on a national scale.

Fourteen individual states succeeded in reducing traffic deaths 7 per cent or more. They were Delaware, District of Columbia, Illinois, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Wyoming and Washington.

There were more motor vehicle deaths in October than in any other single month, the total reaching 3,850. November and December ran second and third, in that order, as the "most dangerous" months.

250,000 Workers Saved.

The number of workers killed last year, 16,500, was less than half the number of deaths in occupational accidents 25 years ago. The national safety council estimates that during the years of organized industrial safety work, from 1913 to 1935, the lives of about 250,000 workers have been saved.

Home fatalities in 1935 registered a reduction of nearly 9 per cent from 1934. The decrease came largely from the fact that in 1935 the summer temperature was more nearly normal, and consequently deaths from excessive heat (the majority of which are classed as home accidents) were relatively few.

Public accidents not involving a motor vehicle remained the same as in 1934. Drownings and firearms accidents accounted for a large percentage of the total. Railroad deaths were about the same as in 1934, and there was only a small decrease in airplane deaths.

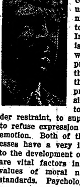
SUBLIMATION

By

LEONARD A. BARRETT



Sublimation is a chemical term and is defined as the process by which a solid is converted to a vapor by heat and then made to solidify again by cooling. The word used in a non-technical sense means to refine or purify. In other words, it is a process by which refuse or impurity is forcibly thrown off. It is the opposite of the process of repression which means to keep forcibly under restraint, to suppress, to conceal, to refuse expression to an impulse or emotion. Both of these mental processes have a very important relation to the development of character. Both are vital factors in determining the values of moral norms and social standards. Psychologists tell us that an unexpressed impulse dies. Unexpressed anger has prevented many a tragedy. But when the will controls emotions and refuses their expression, serious psychic disturbances may occur. Suppressed emotions will ultimately master us if we do not master them. The strain may cause a serious condition of fatigue which in some cases, has resulted in an acute mental aberration or nervous breakdown.

From the field of chemistry we borrow the word sublimate, and apply it to character and all human values. It produces a result similar to the chemical result, namely, the elimination of irritating and destructive impulses through a process of expression rather than suppression. This act of expression is the opposite of repression. Relief from the strain of deep sorrow comes if the one who sorrows expresses a real and not an assumed sympathy to another who is passing through a similar experience. The sense of fear vanishes when we try to bring to timid souls a wealth of sunshine and cheer. The thing that is weighing us down is automatically dispelled when we hasten to the relief of some other person similarly afflicted. Mobilization of the will for the purpose of directing us into active service for others, when our inclination is a suppression of the thing which is depressing us, may not always be an easy task.

But experience has shown that sublimation redirects the energy of an impulse and establishes a positive response to a total situation. Getting rid of the thing that bears us down is far better than nursing it in negative silence.

When we find a person who needs us we may be very sure we need that person. In ministering to human need the "dross" of life is refined. The constructive values in life are always more powerful and stimulating than the destructive values. What we endeavor to give away returns to us greatly multiplied. In this experience of sublimation we find the solution of our own personal problem. We also discover, perhaps to our surprise, that we have received in a perfected pattern of mental resilience the very thing we tried to give away.

If Patty Berg, seventeen-year-old golf star of Minneapolis, continues to win tournaments she is likely to become the leading woman in the game. The photograph was made at Coral Gables, Fla., where she captured the Miami Biltmore women's championship. Last year she was runner up for [illegible] national title.

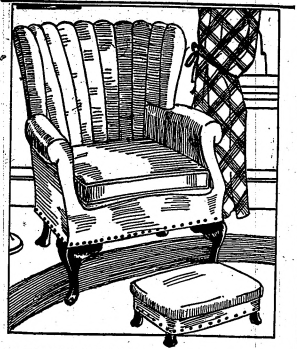
The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker



The acquisition of the footstool added a note of luxury to the organ pipe upholstered easy chair.

THERE are two seasons of a year when it is a good plan to see what refurnishing and refurbishing can be done. One is in the first two months of the year, and one in mid-summer. There are excellent reasons for choosing these times. It is then that stores offer inducements to buy. Clearance sales to make ready for the coming season's merchandise are necessary. Furniture occupies a great deal of space in showrooms, so the stock must be moved either by selling or storing. The former is preferable. So it is both to the advantage of shops and of homemakers to have these semi-yearly refurnishing and refurbishing times.

Advantages of New Things.

It is in mid-summer and mid-winter that a house gets to looking a bit stale. It needs little touches to dress it up, just as one's wardrobe requires refurbishing with new neckwear, and dainty touches. It is stimulating to buy some new article for the home, a new footstool, a side chair, an occasional table, a change of window curtains, a good picture, a scatter rug, etc. It is surprising what one new thing does to spur the homemaker to fix everything to accord with the new article. It acts on her spirits and strengthens her energy. It is like a good tonic.

When making purchases is unwise because of the family purse, the homemaker can do a bit herself, as for instance in the making of novel pulls for the window shades. These can be crocheted over rings of several strands of the rather coarse medium, and have tassels pendant from them. Or they can be of rings covered with sealing wax, in plain or ornamental style. Or the refurbishing can be a wall picture in stitchery, a handsome table cover, or anyone of the many things she can fashion with her own hands and at small cost.

Sofa Cushions.

Sofa cushions are continually needing new covers in order to keep them spic and span. It is a delight to be able to go to a store and pick out just what you want for this purpose. It is when the cushions are shabby and the purse is low, that the homemaker has to consider how to have new covers at little or no cost. Let me suggest some successful ways.

What about that velvet dress that has badly worn places? Wouldn't the good parts make a cover? One ingenious friend made a smart cover for a soft cushion, and had enough left from the frock to cover a large foot stool besides. The ensemble was very attractive.

The piece bag supplied the goods for another top. Sapphire blue velvet was used for the main part. A wide strip of changeable gold and blue drapery fabric was used across the center of the top. This material was strong, but too lightweight to use without the firm backing of the velvet. The lace box contributed very narrow gold lace which was used to edge the gold strip. And now a stunning cushion adorns the davenport. Narrow fancy gimp could have been substituted for the gold metal lace and other combinations of materials could be used with equal success.

"The Camera Cannot Lie"

British statesman W. E. Gladstone coined the expression: "The camera cannot lie" in August, 1896, during a speech at Liverpool. The speech tried to rouse indignation of the public over Armenian massacres at Constantinople. Reports of the horrible carnage seemed incredible. Yet photographs showed many heaps of slain Armenians lying in the streets. "Exaggerated atrocity stories?" "No," retorted Gladstone. "The camera never lies."

At Eight O'Clock

By VERA PAYNE ROCKWELL

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

"YOUR husband is a very sick man, Mrs. Elliott," Doctor Drummond had said, "these white pills I am leaving are powerful stuff, setting up a poisonous reaction that is counteracted by the eight o'clock medicine. I want to impress upon you the extreme importance of being on time; without the dark pill the action of the white ones would be fatal."

When he had gone, the whisperings began, ceaseless and insidious.

"Here is your chance," they told Hester Elliott, "your way out. Forget the pill at eight o'clock. . . . No one will know. . . . And you'll be free. . . . Free to live."

Hester, no longer young, but aged beyond her years by the constant, relentless cruelty; the battling down of all of her individual life; the sapping of her spiritual vitality, by the man who now lay ill, at her mercy.

She looked at him lying there, ugly and cruel, how she wished he were dead.

"But he will live," her bitter thoughts told her, "I shall give him his medicine on time. I'll never know how blessed life might be."

She shuddered and dropped her head in her hands.

"God, let me forget the time," she prayed.

Twenty-six years of living as Bert Elliott's wife, of bearing his children, keeping his house, existing as the automaton he demanded her to be.

All that she loved he had taken away; little things and big. Why did the memory persist so strongly, of the kittens—little fuzzy, adorable bundles of fur and round eyes and pointed ears?

Did he have to kill them in such a cruel way, growling that they were a nuisance, crushing them half dead beneath his heavy heel, leaving her to the shuddering task she must, in mercy, finish?

Did he have to shut his door against Rachel, their only daughter, when she married honest, young Howard Pearson? His objection to the marriage was all pretense; he did not really care; he only wanted to be cruel and arbitrary.

That was four years ago. Hester had only seen little Kenneth twice, each time in dire fear of Bert's wrath. The baby girl, six months old now, she had never seen.

She visioned her life without him—peaceful, well-ordered, happy. Ralph could come back home and run the farm. She had not seen him to talk to since he was twelve years old. His father had beaten him that day with more than usual ferocity and he had left in the night.

Hester had never considered divorce. She had scruples against it. Scruples against divorce and praying God to help her kill her husband. Again the wild laughter welled up and was suppressed.

Yes, Ralph could come back. She could go to church on Sunday, teach a class of little girls. How she had always wanted to do that! She could write letters when she wanted to; could plant flowers and love them, knowing that each year they would be coming up in their accustomed places; no unexpected spading up, no ruining, in half an hour, what had taken two years to grow.

What was right and what was wrong? Where did duty lie? Was it not her duty to help her son, to give herself a normal life, to know her grandchildren? Why did duty have to lie solely with the man she had married? It was two minutes to eight.

She lay in her little rocking chair, completely relaxing her tired body, her tense nerves. She closed her eyes and prayed without words. An agonized reaching out to the power that rules the universe, "Dear God, teach me what to do."

Only a minute; but when she opened her eyes again the futile miseries and perplexities of her daily life had slipped into their proper proportions. She, who had no power to create life, had no right to take it. She knew what she had to do.

With a steady hand she filled a glass half full of cold water, just as steadily she slipped the dark pill into it. Dissolving instantly, it colored the water a ruby red. She put her arm beneath the pillow, lifted her husband a little and held the glass to his lips.

"Drink, Bert," she said, softly.

He opened his eyes and glared at her, his mouth set in the cruel curves she knew so well. He raised his clenched fist in the sudden frenzied strength of rage and smashed the glass in her hand.

"Darn you," he snarled, "want to poison me? Where's my white pill?"

Hester stood very still, her eyes going from his hate-distorted face to the fragments of glass on the floor. Her hands were clasped tightly over her heart, in a familiar gesture, and deep in that heart she was saying to God, "I thank you . . . Oh, I thank you!"

All Leads to Ocean

The rain falling on the earth carries to the ocean waters vast quantities of material in suspension and solution. According to the results of analyses of river waters by scientists of the geological survey the mass of material that goes to tidewater in 9,000 years from the United States alone is equivalent to a blanket one foot in thickness over this country

Simplicity and Honesty of Language Advocated by Dean

"In writing and speaking, be simple," says Dean Alford, "be unaffected, be honest in your speaking and writing. Never use a long word where a short one will do, you always lose by using a long one.

"You lose in clearness; you lose in honest expression of your meaning, and in the estimate of all people who are qualified to judge, you lose in reputation of ability. Elegance of language may not be in the power of all of us, but simplicity and straightforwardness are."

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

BEFORE BABY COMES

Elimination of Body Waste Is Doubly Important

In the crucial months before baby arrives it is vitally important that the body be rid of waste matter. Your intestines must function—regularly, completely without griping.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—much pleasanter to take than liquid. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system, and insure regular, complete elimination without pain or effort.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Fellas From South Won't Keep Giants From Third Position

THERE may be no truth to the whisper that Eddie Brannick, the singing secretary, has been warned to get off the River Shannon and to concentrate upon the Suwanee in all his future vocalizing. Likewise there may be some overstatement in the report that no Giants' rally henceforth can start until Horace Stoneham rears up in his presidential box and emits the rebel yell.

Yet—while I am not hinting that Brooklyn fans could do themselves a lot of good next summer by substituting "Marching Through Georgia" for their equally celebrated version of the Bronx cheer—one thing is certain.

When the Giants now speak of how they would like to meet and beat those d—n Yankees they are not necessarly kidding themselves about a possible World Series. Instead they merely are speaking their native language since, right here and now, the New York club is bedding and boarding more home-grown southerners than might be found elsewhere throughout the entire length and breadth of that tourist state.

If he wished to do so Billy Terry—whose grandpappy was a Georgia colonel long before the Virginia legislature got around to conferring the same title upon the National league's leading hitter—could assemble a very fine team of athletes who were born below the Mason-Dixon line. With Gus Mancuso of the Houston, Texas, Mancusos as the catcher and with Clydell Castleman of the Donelson, Tenn., Castlemans as the pitcher it would include all save two of the regulars.

Incidentally something might even be done about those two who were so unfortunate as not to obtain their early nourishment from bacon, cornbread, hominy and turnip greens.

Even though Phoenix, Ariz., more or less belonged to the Indians at the time when the Confederacy was trying to shake itself loose, it has displayed a very liberal inclination when interpreting other laws and rules—might let Hank Leiber into the outfield if big Jim Asbell faltered.

By the same token Dick Bartell, the unreconstructed Philly who was born in California, need not necessarily have these things held against him. He is such a tireless upholder of States' (and shortstops') rights that he might very well be admitted to the fold in case Charley English of Darlington, S. C., wished to be relieved from the unfamiliar shortstop post.

Since, all over Florida, limbs are creaking under the burdens of experts who have yielded to similar temptation, I make no such rash prediction, though. Indeed if the mighty Frank Merriwell was within the lineup—as he sometimes seemed to be during the pennant-winning campaign of 1933—I still would be beset with doubts.

Terry Is Tops; Giants Have Ambition

To achieve success a team must have excellent pitching, a powerful punch or a fairly generous combination of the two. Good reserves or—as was the case with the Tigers of 1934—such good luck that no substitutes are needed comes next in importance. Finally there are the matters of team spirit and managerial strategy.

Bill Terry

Bill Terry is one of the best of managers. Probably no other camp contains as many happy, energetic and ambitious young men as this one. There will be more speed than was displayed last year, some good pitching and probably some better hitting, but—

Carl Hubbell still is a good pitcher, but he is not the sensation he was two years ago. Even though their ailing wings seem to be doing nicely, Hal Schumacher and Fred Fitzsimmons must continue "ifs" until the season is at least a month advanced.

So it is with the rest of the staff. The newcomer veterans, Marberry and Coffman, can scarcely be depended upon to rise much above spot or relief duty. Howard Sipler, the Giant Swarthmore collegian, is a tidy prospect but he is a year or two away from the big time. So also is twenty-year-old Clem Dreisewerd, the most impressive rookie in the camp.

There is Jackson's jumpy knee, the question as to whether Dick Bartell can overcome the jinx which leaped upon him last season as it has leaped upon so many former Phillies. Terry definitely is almost through even if he beats the old knee injury that now is perturbing him

NOT in the box score.

The biggest fee ever paid an American race rider for a single race was the $20,000 Georgie Ellis received for doing his best with the Warm Stable's Victorian in the $94,000 Aqua Caliente Handicap of 1930. . . Waiters in one of Brooklyn's more celebrated restaurants are highly elated over the recent Dodger deals. It seems that some of the departed athletes were accustomed to leave nothing on the table save the plates. . . Although most of the fans seem to think he is of Swedish or Norwegian descent, Gene Venzke, the Penn miler, will tell you that his ancestors were Germans.

Horace Stoneham, young president of the Giants, once was a better player than Ross Youngs, one of the all-time baseball greats. That was when they both performed on a team Horace had organized on the Seventy-ninth street (Manhattan) docks. Youngs, who had been recalled from Rochester but was ineligible to play for the Giants so late in the season, functioned in mediocre fashion at second base while Horace was the team's star. So Youngs became an outfielder when he returned to the professional pastures. . . . Curley Byrd, new president of the University of Maryland, used to be a sports writer as well as a highly competent coach of football, basketball, baseball and track.

When Primo Carnera was in Miami Mike Jacobs signed him to a contract calling for his services to be the exclusive property of the Hearst A. C. He did this without consulting manager Louis Soresi. So Soresi immediately forgot that he was mad with the Garden and now we have the Carnera-Gastanaga affair. . . Either the bike races are slipping or New Yorkers have quit staying up late at nights. For the past year the 2:30 a. m. sprints have been unable to attract more than a sprinkling of spectators. . . . Another remarkable thing about Top Row that went unnoticed was that he recovered so well after having the "flu" last year. This complaint often ruins horses' lungs.

Jack Torrance, the shot-putting star who starts off with size 14 shoes and ends up with a size 7⅜ hat stuck on top of a 19-inch neck, weighs 312 pounds. That is just 30 pounds less than the combined weight of his parents, his Pappy weighing 198 and his Mammy 144. . . . Bobby Roberts, who plays such a very good center half for the Manhattan F. C. (soccer), is the son of the famous John Roberts, outside left for the Barrow F. C. in the days when that team had all England cheering. . . . Probably it is just as well that the country is too far away for Japan to have a big-time baseball team. Once, (in Tokyo) I saw a 135-pound Jap play a swell game at shortstop, although he had to perform with his 20-pound son strapped on his back

New Orleans Pulls Ponies From Hialeah

Racing at Hialeah park is so poor this year that even New Orleans is luring star thoroughbreds away from the beeooteeful spot. One of them, the crack colt Grog, is now pointing for the Louisiana Derby on March 29. . . . Mulleavy, the Buffalo shortstop who had several big-time tries, runs a table tennis emporium in the winter. . . . His teammate, First Baseman Jack Smith, is a private detective. . . . When picking an all-time, all-star Washington team the other day, Clark Griffith named Walter Johnson, p; Muddy Ruel, c; Joe Judge, 1b; Meyer, 2b; Cronin, ss; Bluege 3b; Goslin, Milan and Rice outfielders.

Eighty-five per cent of the employees at Florida racetracks must be natives of the state. The item is mentioned for the benefit of the New York State Racing commission, which wanders all over the country while selecting its helpers. . . . Jimmy Johnston, the Garden matchmaker, is on an orange juice diet. . . . The Crescent Hamilton A. C. soccer team, managed by Joseph J. Barriskill, president of the U. S. F. A., is a League of Nations outfit. Among the players are men from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Russia, France, South Africa and, of course, the United States.

It never will happen, but the finders of loopholes in basketball rules insist that a man could score seven points on one play. This is the set-up: In shooting a goal from the field a player is ganged by all five opponents. Therefore the referee awards him a free shot for each man who fouls him. . . . Although they may be backward in some things the Chinese make it easy for you to bet on the races. All you have to do is to sit in a restaurant with a tall glass in your hand and give the wager to the waiter.

Kiki Cuyler, who carries his own movie camera, took eight reels of films while the Reds were training in Puerto Rico. . . . Rube Marquard, who won so many in a row for the Giants in the good old days and now peddles ducats in the pari-mutuels, says that baseball has softened up. . . . Claims that if a pitcher can get past two or three good hitters he has easy going.

Don Meade, who was the leading jockey in Miami when he was suspended for (among other things) "unsatisfactory riding," is a cocky little fellow. He speaks in clipped accents and is no hand at all among strangers. His friends, though, dote upon him and are promising to scream from the housetops if the brass hats of racing do not open up and announce what they really have against him.

Colorado's Story

Crude Forerunner of the Modern Ore Mill.

THE story of Colorado's swift development in the short space of one lifetime is crammed with romance, tragedy, and high adventure, with strokes of good fortune and ill, as are few chapters in the national chronicle.

One day the region was raw, virtually untouched by civilization. The next, almost, men were starting to make a state out of thin mountain air and dusty sagebrush flats; were selling town lots at auction; issuing newspapers; building homes, churches, saloons, and theaters; organizing stagecoach companies; talking politics!

The stage probably had never been better set during American history than during 1859 for a rush to new lands. The country was in the middle of a great financial depression. Tens of thousands of others were barely making livings and were restless.

Then the news of gold discoveries in the Pikes Peak country sifted back East—not the true facts, but preposterously glowing accounts. Before the winter snows had melted, long lines of travelers were in motion, converging on the frontier towns nearest the Pikes Peak country—Leavenworth, Lawrence, Nebraska City.

What a mad scramble it became, that mass march to find the rainbow's end! Over the boundless prairie west of the settlements it spread, with scarcely a break from the Missouri to the Rockies Sturdy covered wagons, some with three yokes of oxen; light wagons drawn by horses and mules; horseback riders; men and women on foot trundling loaded pushcarts; other pedestrians with knapsacks; some reckless souls with nothing but the clothes they wore—all poured on toward the Promised Land. "Pikes Peak or Bust" was blazoned on many a wagon in the motley train. Some of these were to meet disappointment at the meager gold showings in river sands, and to return in a few months with only a sense of humor left, the old sign marked out and below a laconic new one: "Busted, by Gosh!"

Pikes Peak Diggings.

Before the discouraged return stampede to the East could run its course, there came news of really substantial gold discoveries in veins; then new hopes and a new and bigger gold rush. Where 10,000 had gone before, now probably 100,000 crossed the plains.

The Colorado mountains, it seemed, might be America's last frontier, and Americans turned toward them as children troop to a street parade. They overran the existing towns, built new ones, clambered into the mountains, staked claims or jumped them, dug, played riotously, fought, organized vigilante committees and courts, and began, ineptly at first, but determinedly, to iron the rough edges of the frontier into a civilized community.

So began the Pikes Peak Diggings, a group of communities that was to spread over a great area and to become 17 years later the Centennial state.

Mapwise, Colorado is something of an anomaly. Across it marches North America's mightiest mountain range and within it are concentrated Uncle Sam's greatest group of lofty peaks. Among these mountains rise some of the country's major rivers. Yet at no point does range or stream mark Colorado's boundaries. Its straight lines of meridians and parallels, hurdling all natural geographic features, actually bear a closer relationship to Greenwich, England, and the Equator than they do to the Rocky mountains or the Colorado river.

The eastern two-fifths of the state is a plains country, a continuation of the gently undulating and always rather dry prairies of western Kansas and Nebraska.

Approach from the west and you find that Utah carries over into the extreme western part of Colorado as Kansas and its neighbors do on the east. Dry plains alternate with tablelands, their rocky slopes clad with scraggy bushes.

It is in the middle panel of the state that you find the quintessence of Colorado—a land of foothills and sentinel peaks, tangled mountain ranges, and wide valleys.

Central Area of Colorado.

This great central area, where the earth has been thrust skyward, is the region of glittering gold to which Colorado owes its birth as a state. If you would plunge into this old Colorado of pioneer gold-mining days, drive west from Denver on paved roads, over the foothills, and up Clear creek for 25 miles. There, strung out in a canyon, you will find Idaho Springs, famous as "the town that is three miles long and three blocks wide."

Look up to sights that will become more and more familiar as you poke about the mountains: holes torn in the hillsides with steeply sloping dumps outside, as though huge animals had dug lairs, scratching the debris out behind them. A few are mere prospect holes, where some treasure-seeker guessed wrong. Others are portals of long tunnels. There are steep-roofed mills, some abandoned, some preserved for a better day.

But push deeper into the pioneer country. Turn up Virginia canyon and over a tremendous ridge to Central City and Black Hawk, the cradle of the Colorado mining industry. Here, at the "Gregory Diggings," the first gold was dug from veins, the first crude ore-crusher was evolved, the first steam quartz mill was erected. It was the miner's laboratory. Steam, fire, chemicals were tried in the battle to pry precious gold from worthless rock; and finally, in 1867, the first experimental smelter was set up.

Central City was a lusty town in those days, vying with Denver itself until well after Colorado became a state. At one time both United States senators and the state's single member of the house of representatives hailed from this little mountain town. It has never become a ghost town, like many of the early mining camps, but at times in recent years it has seemed to have at least one foot in the grave.

Gold has been a fetish in Colorado, as it has in all other parts of the world where it might be had for the digging; but it has played a mighty part in the state's life.

Gold Still the Magic Word.

Colorado has manifold interests and diverse activities now, but she hasn't deserted the old love. Talk for half an hour to any substantial Coloradan west of the one hundred and fifth meridian and inevitably the magic word "gold" will crop into the conversation. Through a new quest, a newly discovered vein, a new process, perhaps only a new personality whose genius for management is taking hold of a seemingly worthless property and making it pay, interest in gold is continually kept alive.

Panning from the gravels and sands of streams was the earliest method of gold recovery practiced in Colorado, as it has been in most of the world's gold fields. Then, in the mountains, prospectors found the weathered veins of ore from which the golden grains had been washed, and Colorado's second chapter in gold recovery started.

The third phase came when the hard, unweathered veins were followed into the rocky hearts of the mountains. It was then that Colorado gold mining ceased to be a one-man possibility. Much capital was required. Companies took hold; complicated treating plants were erected, and finally the era of smelters was ushered in.

Colorado has entered the fourth stage of gold mining now, and it is a typically modern American stage. Because of more efficient organization, better machinery, and more careful management, mining companies today are able to make money from ore so low in grade that a generation ago it was of no more value for mining than the top soil of an Iowa corn farm.

Visit one of these modern gold mines in the San Juan Mountain country and you will find it to be a self-contained little mining world, with its varied activities geared smoothly together, and with a steady outturn of product that reminds one of automobiles rolling from the assembly line of a Detroit factory.

Fine Motor Highways.

As you explore Colorado's mountain region, rich alike in gold and superb scenery, you find excellent motor roads penetrating the roughest terrain. The state's mountain highway system has opened up this region of tumbled peaks only in recent years. Twenty years ago the state's "summer land" consisted almost exclusively of the foothill country and the eastern slopes of the front range.

Now, with four excellent main highways crossing the Continental divide and with a network of minor roads and trails available, increasing numbers of the holiday crowds are pushing into the back country, where the fishing is better, where the highways are less crowded, and where, if one wishes to penetrate still farther, he can leave civilization itself behind and live for a time in an unspoiled wilderness.

Mountain highway building may appear simple enough to the vacationist, as he bowls along "in high" over loop after loop of gently rising road that lifts him eventually to a lofty ridge of the Rockies,

Boat Sinks, So Indiana Town No Longer Is Port

An ancient wharf-boat, partly submerged in the Ohio river, is the last remaining vestige of what once was a thriving river traffic which prevailed here for more than a century, states a Madison (Ind.) correspondent in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Recently the Madison wharf-boat sank when ice floes knifed through her hull and officials of the Greene line thereupon abandoned this city as a port of call between Cincinnati and Louisville. Declining river shipping and high wharf maintenance costs were given as the reason.

Many Madison merchants recall when this city had four wharfs. In those days the town had a large pork industry, a starch works, furniture, cotton and woolen factories, as well as big trade in tobacco, wheat and other farm products. There were several competing steamboat lines making regular calls at Madison daily. Fifty years ago Madison also had the only railway connection with Indianapolis between Cincinnati and Louisville. Now all is different. This is still a river town, nestling between the hills and the stream, but hard-surfaced roads, bridges and trucks have eliminated the port of Madison. A few packets still ply the river, but none stops here.

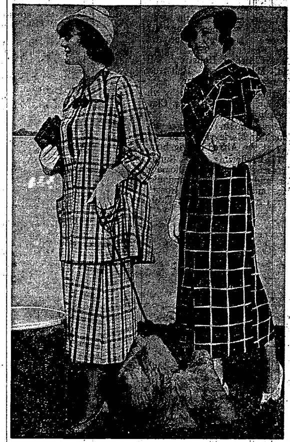
Cottons and Linens Go Style-High

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



COMES spring! By the signs of the times in fashion's realm you know it. When the new cottons and linens announce their arrival and when to celebrate the event, merchants and style creators hold high carnival in the way of style-revealing previews, then be assured that spring is here no matter what the calendar and the calendar and the elements at large may have to say.

As a tonic that will revive jaded and winter-weary spirits like magic we know of none better than the new spring and summer fashions, created of refreshing, crisp and dainty wash fabrics—the new prints, sheer and otherwise, the gloriously colorful rough cottons that tailor so beautifully and the exotic printed linens that bespeak India, Tahiti, and picturesque Tyrolean peasantry.

In the advance showings there is a cotton or linen for every occasion, sportsy, tailored, formal or otherwise. Dresses, suits, ensembles for morning, for street, for afternoon wear, for dinner, dancing, active and spectator sports, all are included in the spring and summer parade of stylish cottons and linens. Children's fashions play a big part in the displays of spring and summer cottons and linens.

Front page news in regard to linens and cottons is they have gone that highbrow they have entered society in the form of lovely gowns as pretentiously styled as finest of silks and woolens. Then, too, as media for smart tailored suits, cottons that are as handsome-looking as woolens and linens (the new non-crush and non-wrinkle kind) are featuring big this season.

Outstanding among the new widely heralded fabrics are shantungs, hand-blocked linens, printed piques, lace that lends itself to tailoring, blistered sheers, and rough cottons and countless other attractive washable weaves. Plaids, stripes, checks, gorgeous floral patternings and interesting geometric motifs often of leaf influence, go to make up vast print collections.

Color is literally on the rampage with the primary hues strongly evident and pastels retaining their importance. Designers express enthusiasm for dark monotones with high-color contrasts. Brown, black, the darker greens and wine shades, are especially promoted as key colors. Two-piece suits with black skirts topped by bright colored or white jackets are expected to enjoy wide vogue during the coming months.

The attractive models pictured are positive proof that cottons and linens are going style high this season. This stunning suit of rough-surfaced plaid cotton and the frock of printed linen called forth much admiration from an enthusiastic audience who witnessed a most brilliant and dramatically staged style revue and cotton carnival held recently in Chicago in the famous Merchandise Mart where it is claimed more floor space is devoted to merchandise and fashion interests than any other building in the world.

A dark blouse is worn with the plaid suit. The charming linen frock in navy with red and white checkings is enlivened with heavy bright red braid frog fasteners on the blouse, thus sounding a voguish military note.

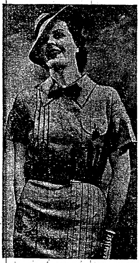
PADLOCK AND KEY

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



Here is the frock of your day dreams, a fitting theme for a happy spring-song. It is of rose colored linen with dark stitched linen belt. Despite the fact that it's leap year the young lady in the picture is taking no chances with her affections and so she puts a decorative padlock above her heart (see it on the clever pocket) and another on the corresponding pocket on her skirt. Then she tucks the key in her belt, as she models this smart frock in a preview of spring and summer styles introduced during a cotton and linen carnival held recently in Chicago at the Merchandise Mart.

Printed Slip

A gay printed slip to wear under a dark dress is just feminine enough to delight any woman. The print shows bright flowers on a black ground.

SPRING MILLINERY OF MANY PERIODS

New French millinery for advance spring fashions shows the influence of various period styles, according to recent reports from the Paris office of the Du Pont Style News Service. Hats reflecting the Flemish art are seen at several of the houses, the style being interpreted in different ways by leading designers.

The Chinese art and costume is especially apparent in creations by Agnes, who also favors the Abyssinian trend, finding inspiration for her triangular and pointed crowns in the Negus coiffure.

The strong influence of the Medici period and coiffure of the Reine Margot are themes which have been developed by Marie Alphonsine.

8 Basic Colors Adopted for Women's Fall Shoes

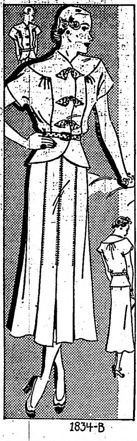
Eight basic colors for women's shoes have been officially adopted for fall, 1936, by the joint committee of tanners, shoe manufacturers and retailers in cooperation with the Textile Color Card association, it was announced by Margaret Hayden Rorke, managing director of the association. High style shoe and leather colors will be selected later, it was stated.

Five of the colors have been repeated from recent seasons. They are marrona, marine blue, chaudron, Oriental oxblood and Araby green. The three new colors, which have not been named as yet, consist of a ginger type of brown, a russet brown and a dark gray.

Paris Accessory Ideas

Paris is sending over grand accessory ideas, little things that can do so much for a costume. Mainbocher has colored bead flower bouquets trimming the waistline of sheer black woolen frocks, while another house features frogs of supple metal in silver or gilt. Chessmen in metal dangle from the neckline of a smart frock, and Schiaparelli uses gold chains to hold up the trains of evening gowns when dancing.

Smart Jacket Dress With Bows of Print



1834-B

Versatility is an engaging quality in this little two piece frock. Make it feminine with bows and a belt of bright print, or slightly mannish with round buttons and a narrow belt.

The hip length jacket with its cutaway effect and front panel are the dominating features of the dress. Notice how the gathers peep cunningly in back and front beneath the circular yoke. A simple skirt, but not too simple to be attractive. Individualism is attributed to the wide tailored pleats in the front.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1834-B is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 (34) requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch fabric plus ⅓ yard of contrasting material.

Postal Hitch Hiker

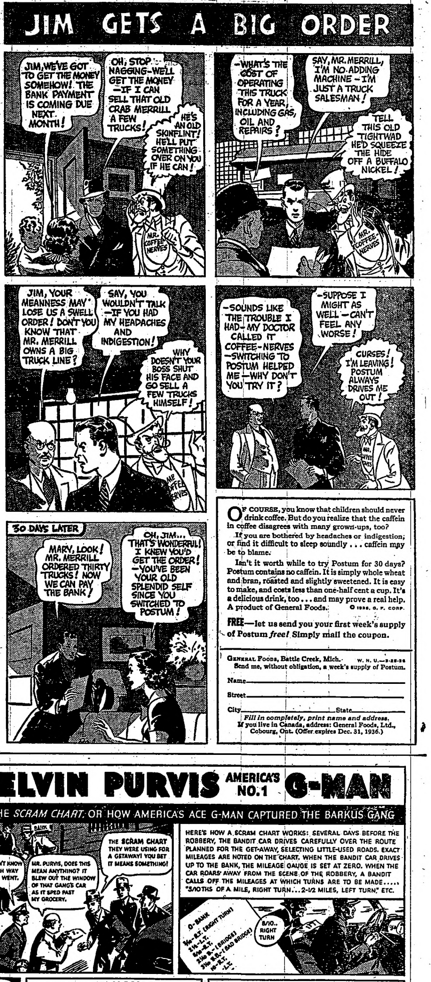
J. L. Douglas, Omaha bank clerk, discovered a postal hitch hiker on a letter from Buenos Aires, Argentina. Accidentally stuck to a letter addressed to the bank was a second addressed to a firm in Barcelona, Spain. The errant missive had traveled 7,000 miles out of its way.

Clovelly's Beauty a Thing of Pride to Inhabitants

Clovelly is the old-established beauty queen of England, a beauty queen so proud of its appearance that its residents all do their family washing on one day, so that tourists will not be greeted by anything as prosaic as clothes lines of pajamas and stockings. When an old cottage there decays, H. V. Morton writes in "In Search of England," it rises again just as it was, looking at least five hundred years old.

PREJUDICE

No wise man can have a contempt for the prejudices of others; and he should even stand in a certain awe of his own, as if they were aged parents and monitors. They may in the end prove wiser than he.



JIM GETS A BIG ORDER
JIM, WE'VE GOT TO GET THE MONEY SOMEHOW! THE BANK PAYMENT IS COMING DUE NEXT MONTH!
OH, STOP NAGGING—WE'LL GET THE MONEY—IF I CAN SELL THAT OLD CRAB MERRILL A FEW TRUCKS!
HE'S AN OLD SKINFLINT! HE'LL PUT SOMETHING OVER ON YOU IF HE CAN!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
—WHAT'S THE COST OF OPERATING THIS TRUCK FOR A YEAR, INCLUDING GAS, OIL AND REPAIRS?
SAY, MR. MERRILL, I'M NO ADDING MACHINE—I'M JUST A TRUCK SALESMAN!
TELL THIS OLD TIGHTWAD HE'D SQUEEZE THE HIDE OFF A BUFFALO NICKEL!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
JIM, YOUR MEANNESS MAY LOSE US A SWELL ORDER! DON'T YOU KNOW THAT MR. MERRILL OWNS A BIG TRUCK LINE?
SAY, YOU WOULDN'T TALK—IF YOU HAD MY HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION!
WHY DOESN'T YOUR BOSS SHUT HIS FACE AND GO SELL A FEW TRUCKS HIMSELF!
MR. COFFEE NERVES
—SOUNDS LIKE THE TROUBLE I HAD—MY DOCTOR CALLED IT COFFEE-NERVES—SWITCHING TO POSTUM HELPED ME—WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?
—SUPPOSE I MIGHT AS WELL—CAN'T FEEL ANY WORSE!
CURSES! I'M LEAVING! POSTUM ALWAYS DRIVES ME OUT!
30 DAYS LATER
MARY, LOOK! MR. MERRILL ORDERED THIRTY TRUCKS! NOW WE CAN PAY THE BANK!
OH, JIM... THAT'S WONDERFUL! I KNEW YOU'D GET THE ORDER! —YOU'VE BEEN YOUR OLD SPLENDID SELF SINCE YOU SWITCHED TO POSTUM!

OF COURSE, you know that children should never drink coffee. But do you realize that the caffein in coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?

If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion; or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . caffein may be to blame.

Isn't it worth while to try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too . . . and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods. © 1936, G. F. CORP.

The Inside Story of MELVIN PURVIS AMERICA'S NO.1 G-MAN
THE SCRAM CHART, OR HOW AMERICA'S ACE G-MAN CAPTURED THE BARKUS GANG BANK
WE DON'T KNOW WHICH WAY THEY WENT.
MR. PURVIS, DOES THIS MEAN ANYTHING? IT BLEW OUT THE WINDOW OF THAT GANG'S CAR AS IT SPED PAST MY GROCERY.
THE SCRAM CHART THEY WERE USING FOR A GETAWAY! YOU BET IT MEANS SOMETHING!
HERE'S HOW A SCRAM CHART WORKS: SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE THE ROBBERY, THE BANDIT CAR DRIVES CAREFULLY OVER THE ROUTE PLANNED FOR THE GET-AWAY, SELECTING LITTLE-USED ROADS. EXACT MILEAGES ARE NOTED ON THE CHART. WHEN THE BANDIT CAR DRIVES UP TO THE BANK, THE MILEAGE GAUGE IS SET AT ZERO. WHEN THE CAR ROARS AWAY FROM THE SCENE OF THE ROBBERY, A BANDIT CALLS OFF THE MILEAGES AT WHICH TURNS ARE TO BE MADE..... "3/10THS OF A MILE, RIGHT TURN...2-1/2 MILES, LEFT TURN," ETC.
O-BANK
3/10-R.T. (RIGHT TURN)
2½-L.T.
8/10-R.T.
2⅘ B.-(BRIDGE)
3⅒ B.B.-(BAD BRIDGE)
10-R.T.
-L.T.
8/10.. RIGHT TURN
THE G-MEN SPEED AFTER THE BANDIT GANG!
MY HUNCH IS THAT WHEN THEY LOST THAT SCRAM CHART, THEY HAD TO CHANGE THEIR WHOLE PLAN OF GET-AWAY. I THINK THEY'LL KEEP ON THE MAIN HIGHWAY TO THE BORDER—AND I'M GOING TO HEAD THEM OFF! I KNOW A SHORT CUT TO THE CROSS ROAD... STEP ON IT AND WE'LL CATCH BARKUS YET!
AT THE CROSSROADS
THERE THEY GO! WE'RE TOO LATE TO STOP THEM!
TOO LATE, NOTHING! I'LL SHOOT OUT THEIR TIRES!
STICK 'EM UP, JOE BARKUS! WE'VE GOT YOU AND YOUR GANG DEAD TO RIGHTS THIS TIME!
IT'S MELVIN PURVIS!

25 Years Ago

B. H. Pierson bought the Melting house in west part of town and moved it to his farm northwest of the village.

Philip Lee returned with his carload of horses after having spent the winter in the pine woods near Blackduck.

Martin Williams of Wadena was here for a visit with old friends. He was one of the first hotel keepers in St. Hilaire.

A. J. Hed of Winthrop, Minn. arrived in town to assume management of the local creamery. He had had charge of the creamery at Fertile for three years before coming here.

A ball game between Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire teams was scheduled to be played here April 2nd.

Miss Ida Hanson left for Crookston to reside for a time while learning the millinery business.

New York's magnificent capitol building at Albany was partially destroyed by fire that week with loss estimated at ten millions of dollars.

SEARLES TALKS ON DAIRY PROBLEMS AT SESSIONS HERE

H. R. Searles, University Farm extension specialist, discussed dairy feeding and breeding problems at meetings held at Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire on March 17th and 18th.

Mr. Searles pointed out that in the future, dairymen will have to pay closer attention to their cost of production. Cost of production may be decreased by higher individual production which is based on better feeding and breeding practices.

The need of using high quality roughage and more of it, was emphasized. To meet the pasture needs of late July and August, Mr. Searles suggested early cutting of sweet clover and pasturing of second growth, and planting of special crops, such as, sudan grass.

The need of using proven sires and the function of the Bull Association in producing them was discussed at length. For the benefit of some that were interested, Mr. Searles discussed principles of genetics involved in breeding for milk production.

FARM PRODUCTION KEPT IN BALANCE BY 1936 PROGRAM

The new farm bill, replacing the AAA, unquestionably affords an opportunity to hold the progress made in keeping farm production in balance with marketing demands and in sustaining farm prices, says J. S. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.

"While not as spectacular and possibly lacking the immediate appeal to farmers, as the AAA program," Mr. Jones declared, "I firmly believe that the new legislation, if practically administered and given the whole-hearted support of farmers will not only conserve soil fertility, our greatest natural resource, but also will prevent the accumulation of burdensome crop surplusses.

"Soil conservation is of unquestioned material interest not only to the present and future generations of farmers but to all our people. The future welfare and prosperity of the country is inseparably linked with the fertility of our soil," Mr. Jones declared.

The greatest handicap to the success of the new program this year is the slowness with which Washington is proceeding in appropriating the necessary funds to get the work under way. It appeared on March 17 that funds finally had been allotted, and as soon as the financial setup is completed the program will get under way. In Minnesota the College of Agriculture, working through County Farm Bureaus and other groups, will take the lead in administering the program.

Assistant County Agent Gets Post in Missouri

E. B. Norum of Hallock, who has served as assistant to County Agent R. M. Douglass since February, 1935, late last week received word of his appointment under the United States civil service to work on a soil survey to be conducted by the department of agriculture in Missouri. Mr. Norum left Wednesday evening to visit at his family home, and will report for his new duties at Springfield, Missouri, April 1. His successor in the local office has not yet been announced.

Greeks Liked Asparagus

Asparagus was a popular vegetable with the ancient Greeks and Elizabethan Englishmen.

FARMERS TO HEAR NEW FARM PROGRAM

The long-awaited facts about the government's new soil conservation program will be available next week, announces R. M. Douglass, county agent. They will be given to Pennington County farmers in a serie sof townty farmers in a series of town-Monday.

Many farmers have inquired about the program, Mr. Douglass reports, but the announcement of details has been held up awaiting the completion of four regional conferences, in which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration sought farmer advice about the program. The last of these conferences has now been held and the program shaped for presentation to farmers.

The county agent and county committee will meet with federal and state administrators at University Farm, St. Paul, late this week to learn the provisions. They will pass this information along to farmers in next week's meetings.

Every farmer will be given an opportunity to take part in the program, Mr. Douglass says, and each will receive a payment providing he does his part in maintaining or increasing the fertility of his soil. Since planting time is near, only one meeting will be held in each township. Following is a schedule of these meetings:

North and Rocksbury townships, Monday, March 30th 2 P. M., Thief River Falls court room. Silverton, Tuesday, March 31st, 8 P. M., Elwell School in Silverton. River Falls and Black River, Wednesday, April 1, 2 P. M., Bilden & Olson hall, St. Hilaire.

Bray and Polk Centre, Wednesday, April 1, 8 P. M., Luttmer school house in Bray Twp. Norden and Numedal, Thursday, April 2, 8 P. M., Dimmen school in Norden twp. Mayfield and Wyandotte, Friday, April 3, 8 P. M., Bruggeman school. Reiner and Star, Saturday, April 4, 2 P. M., Hampen school, Dist. 59.

Meetings for the balance of the county will be held the following week and notices will be sent out from the county agent's office, Mr. Douglass said.

LOCAL STUDENTS HONORED ON N. W. SCHOOL CAMPUS

Many Northwest School students were given special recognition at an impressive assembly held during the closing week of the winter term. Members of the inter-school livestock judging team were presented gold medals by O. M. Kiser, coach. This group included Leroy Peterson, Thief River Falls; Harlan Pester, Crookston, and Glenn Tasa, Trail. Similar medals were presented to members of the crops judging team by R. S. Dunham, agronomist. This team was composed of Axel Rynning, Kennedy; Melvin Pearson, Hallock, and Morris Maruska, Angus.

C. H. Ritzman, coach of debate, presented the official gold "A" to the members of the two debate teams, Duane Moen, Gary; Ellsworth Rolstad and James Burns, Crookston; Earl Lindberg, Beltrami; Burnett Bergerson, Twin Valley and Marvin Nabben, Goodridge.

School letters were also presented to the members of the school basketball team by T. M. McCall, chairman of the athletic committee. Members of the team included Clearance Stromberg, Rosewood; Elmer Ross, Fisher; Harry Fink, Kenneth Albertson, and Lester MacGregor, Crookston.

Other awards included the presentation of scholarship certificates to Delene Hegreberg, Ada and Edgar Ramberg, Pitt by Registrar J. W. Mlinar, who also announced special awards to Laura Hanson, Thief River Falls, Virginia Watt, Bagley and Werner Weindorf, Jordan, for their work in the Pepster organization.

Class trophies and numerals were awarded to the girls' and boys' class championship basketball teams by Miss Elsie Kingston and Coach R. J. Christgau. Members of the girls' Junior Class Championship team included: Marie Blakely, Fisher; Cora Dalager, Pelican Rapids: Lois Haug, Oslo; Delene Hegreberg, Ada; Janet Krogstad, Fertile; Ivy McVeety, Bernadette Jeffrey, and Jean Barrett, of East Grand Forks. Members of the Advanced team, winners of the boys' basketball contest, were: Noel Hanson, Detroit Lakes; Olaf Dahlen, Erie; Earl Lindberg, Beltrami; Wayne Bellamy, Drayton, N. D.; Ellwood Billberg, Wannaska; Donald Gandrud, Callaway; Glenn Tasa, Trail; and Harlan Pester, Crookston.

Coach R. J. Christgau announced Elmer Ross, Aggie captain, as the winner of the Ruettell Company sweater, which is presented each year to the most valuable man on the Aggie basketball team.

Other special awards, including the Caleb Dorr cash scholarship prizes, LaVoi-Widseth medal, and the highest ranking fourth year student, will be announced during Commencement Week. Activities will close with the Commencement Exercises this evening, when Dr. David Bryn-Jones, Minneapolis, is scheduled to deliver the Commencement address.

Zimmerman Explains Relief Aid to Counties

Minnesota has $7,211,000 relief funds available for expenditure in 1936, beginning January 1, L. P. Zimmerman, SERA administrator, said last week. Whether a county handles its own relief or not, it is entitled to a share of the state relief fund, he stated following a conference with Blue Earth representatives who had raised the question. However, every county must have some kind of set-up to report to the state, he explained. The state agency is not dictating definite procedure but is asking compliance with certain regulations in order that it may regulate county allotments.

N. D. 'U' WOMAN TO SPEAK APRIL 17TH

Meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association has been postponed until Friday, April 17th. Miss M. Beatrice Johnstone, head of the North Dakota University extension division, will speak at this meeting.

Miss Johnstone recently was re-appointed trustee of the state teachers insurance and retirement fund, by the governor of North Dakota, a position she has held since 1916. She is nationally known as a speaker and has appeared on national education and Parent-Teachers Association programs in New York, Chicago, Washington, D. C., and elsewhere.

Miss Johnstone is past president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the North Dakota Educational Association, and is rated as one of the ten leading women of North Dakota. Everyone in this community who is interested in P. T. A. and educational work should make an extra effort to hear Miss Johnstone, Friday, April 17th.

Several musical numbers will also be given, and lunch will be served at conclusion of the program.

WHIST TOURNAMENT BEGAN WEDNESDAY

After being postponed several times because of weather and road conditions, first meeting of the whist tournament was held Wednesday night at the Bilden & Olsen hall. Some over fifty people from the village and surrounding country participated in the first session. Colors chosen for the two teams this year were red and gold. Neither side appeared to have much advantage over the other at this meeting, and final checkup at the end of five games showed the Red team had won by the narrow margin of less than 20 points. Winners were served lunch at Johnson's Cafe, and losers had their lunch and talked about their hard luck, at Walt's place. Next meeting is scheduled to be held Thursday night, April 16th. The date was first set for April 8th but was postponed because of Holy week observance. Plans are being made to entertain a larger crowd at the next meeting.

DR. A. A. STOMBERG HONORED AT PARTY

Dr. A. A. Stomberg of the University of Minnesota was honored for his contribution to Swedish culture at a birthday party given for him Monday night by members and friends of the Society for the Advancement of Swedish culture. More than 100 guests celebrated Dr. Stomberg's sixty-fifth birthday with him at the headquarters of the society, 2615 Park avenue.—Mpls. Journal.

Dr. Stomberg is a brother of Mrs. A. P. Hegstrom of Black River community. He visits here frequently, and is well known in this locality.

HI-JACKERS GET RED LAKE FALLS LIQUOR

A group of hi-jackers, working in latest city style, got an auto truckload of liquor that was coming thru from the Twin Cities to the municipal liquor store at Red Lake Falls late Monday night near Mentor. While only a short distance from their destination, drivers of the truck were stopped by what appeared to be an auto wreck in the road, and were ordered out of the truck. After having their eyes and mouths securely taped, they were taken from the scene in a passenger car while the hi-jackers drove away with the load which is estimated to be worth more than $3,000.00. Later in the night, the truck drivers were taken to a point near Red Lake Falls and let out near where their truck was standing minus its load. The liquor was insured while in transit so the liquor store will suffer but small loss.

RED CROSS—Next meeting of the local Red Cross will be held Tuesday, April 7, at the home of Mrs. A. W. Brink.

Postponed from last Thursday because of impassable roads, funeral services for the late Minnie Ortloff were held Tuesday at the Erickson & Lund chapel at Thief River. Interment was made the following day at the Rux cemetery west of here.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Schantzen and family moved this week from the H. L. Hanson residence on Water street to the Harry Winter place which was recently vacated by Fred Marquette and family.

NEW FARM PROGRAM BEING EXPLAINED

The new soil conservation program now being put into effect thruout the nation by the federal government is being explained to Pennington county farmers by County Agent R. M. Douglass in a series of meetings now being held in the various townships.

Under the program farmers will be paid for retiring lands from production of soil depleting crops such as grains and substituting instead sweet clover, alfalfa and other soil building crops. Mr. Douglass stated that the amount of benefits per acre for this county has not yet been determined, a lump sum having been designated to be paid in Minnesota which is now in process of being allocated to the various counties.

Following meetings held during the past week committees were named in two townships to aid in administering the program. In Rocksbury the group includes Hans Anton, chairman; Elmer Satre and Lloyd Johnson; while for the town of North the committee consists of Alfred Longren, chairman; Renold Johnson and William Smith.

Mr. Douglass announced today the following meetings to be held next week, at which the program will be explained.

Deer Park and Hickory, Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Lundeen school house in Deer Park.

FIREMEN'S HEADACHE

Little Falls, Minn., fire fighters received a frantic call that "somewhere east of town there is a huge, glowing fire." Refusing to make an outside run until there were more details, Chief George Olsen waited, was merrily relieved when the informant called several minutes later to report it wasn't a fire, merely the moon preparing to rise.—St. Paul Daily News.

FORMER RESIDENTS AT TWIN CITY PARTY

Between two and three hundred former residents of St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls attended the annual re-union party that was held Saturday evening, March 21, at the Curtis Hotel at Minneapolis and had a most enjoyable time. Some of the out-of-town residents who attended were Miss Huldah Gigstad of Moorhead, Mrs. Ruth Patnode of Crookston, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nelson of Fargo, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hall and daughter, Kathleen, of Albert Lea, Minn. During the evening a telegram of "best wishes" was received from Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hed of Crandon, Wisc., formerly of St. Hilaire. Altho they were unable to attend the re-union party, two of their children took part in the good time.

A very fine program was arranged by the members of the Thief River Falls committee, and Mrs. Howard Bilden, Mrs. Siguard Engh and Miss Lulu Beebe of the St. Hilaire committee. The program included an Amateur Major Bowes program, D. P. O'Neill formerly of Thief River Falls acting as Major Bowes. The following numbers were given:

Bob Biederman	Art Sketches
Dickie Lindquist	Reading
Buddy Snyder	Solo
Buzzie Schantzen	Drum
Eldora Torrison	Reading
Norman Bakke	Solo

Five specialty dance numbers, donated by Miss Vavro's School of Music, St. Paul, also were given. Dr. H. Froehlich of the Thief River Falls group, and Mrs. Milton Schantzen of the St. Hilaire group, were reelected chairmen for the coming year. It was decided to have a picnic the coming summer on the ship Capitol which runs from St. Paul to Hastings, Minn.

After the business meeting, the evening was spent in visiting and dancing, and at midnight light refreshments were served.

Before adjourning, the St. Hilaire group had a meeting and decided that the Twin City folks would make a trip some time in July to the old home town to renew acquaintances. Siguard Engh was elected to take charge of arrangements for the trip.

AGREEMENT MADE ON PENSION PLAN

Minnesota's old age pension plan received the approval of the federal social security board this week which means that the state's old age pension system, provided for by special session of the legislature last winter, will go into effect immediately. It is estimated the federal government will contribute about half the cost.

Several differences arose as soon as the Minnesota plan was submitted to the federal social security board, but all were ironed out with exception of administrative expense. The law as passed, allowed expenditure of $75,000 for administration in a period of 16 months. This was deemed by federal officials to be inadequate. A ruling by Attorney General Harvey Peterson that this sum could be spent in 10 months, removed the last difficulty and won federal approval. Applications for old age assistance are now being considered in all counties in the state, and it is understood all that are approved will receive payments from March 1st, the date the law went into effect. The maximum any person can receive is $30.00 per month, but it is not anticipated many will be granted that sum.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Regular meeting of the village council of St. Hilaire held March 2, 1936 at Corbet's shop at 8:00 P. M.

Meeting called to order by the president. All members present. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

On motion the following bills were allowed:

Mussolini Abolishes Chamber of Deputies

BENITO MUSSOLINI evidently expects another European war, and in preparation for it he announced several drastic measures on the seventeenth anniversary of the founding of the Fascist party. He abolished the chamber of deputies, substituting for it a council of guilds; and he also eliminated the country's large industries, leaving the medium and small private industries in existence. This latter move, he told the council of the 22 guilds of the corporative state, was to increase the nation's economic self-sufficiency. "When and how war will come, one does not know," he said, "but the wheel of fate turns fast."

Benito Mussolini

Mussolini asserted the large industries, particularly those working for the defense of the nation, would be formed into organizations called "key industries." These, he said, "will be run directly or indirectly by the government. Some will have mixed organization."

He drew tremendous cheers from the audience, rising in the gorgeous Julius Caesar hall of the capitol building, on Capitoline hill, when he declared that with this reform, the Fascist party reached fulfillment of its purposes.

Russia and Poland Don't Trust Negotiations

EASTERN Europe, especially soviet Russia and Poland, is distrustful of the negotiations among the Locarno powers. Russia, according to Karl Radek, authoritative writer in Moscow, is convinced she must rely for her safety mainly on her own resources for defense, and accordingly will strengthen her armed forces, already numbering 1,300,000 men. He described commitments of the four Locarno powers in regard to future action as "so uncertain that they can be discounted as not existing at all."

Suggestions offered in London for the summoning of an international conference to discuss new agreements Radek found to be "so vague" as to apthe world to know we will never capitulate before the resolutions and forfor which Hitler has expressed no particular love."

The Polish government was decidedly worried by reports of secret negotiations in London behind the scenes of the conference of the Locarno powers. These reports were forwarded by Col. Josef Beck, the foreign minister, who scented a plot to secure peace in western Europe at the expense of eastern Europe by granting Germany a free hand in the latter region. Beck thought there were possibilities of revision of the Versailles and other treaties. The information he sent to Warsaw led the press there to publish bitter attacks on the course Great Britain apparently was pursuing.

Hitler Considers Reply to Peace Proposals

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER recalled Joachim von Ribbentrop from London, where that diplomat had heard Germany condemned as a treaty violator by the council of the League of Nations, and with him spent several days carefully planning his response to the proposals of the other four Locarno powers. Others of his advisers participated in the conferences, but there was no doubt that Hitler himself would determine the course of the reich, and from the demonstrations in his honor over the week-end it appeared certain the German people would sustain him in his decision. Going to Breslau, still accompanied by Van Ribbentrop, Hitler told a big gathering of citizens: "We will not make a single compromise in internal or external politics. We want the world to know we will never capitulate before the resolutions and formulations of others."

Joachim von Ribbentrop

Declaring the world is getting itself entangled in military alliances, Hitler promised: "We Germans will not allow ourselves to be entangled because we have reconquered our sovereignty and intend to keep it."

The Fuehrer answered charges that his peace proposals were merely a gesture by saying: "I make no empty gestures. These were proposals to insure the peace of the world for 25 years. Let other statesmen ask their peoples to express their opinion in votes as to whether they want war or peace. Maybe then the nations will come to agreement. May God show us the right way."

Parts of the peace plan offered by the four Locarno powers that were most objectionable to the Germans were the creation of an international police zone 12 miles wide along the Rhineland frontier, and the submission of the Franco-Russian mutual aid treaty to the world court.

Foreign Secretary Eden urged Von Ribbentrop before the latter left London for Berlin to prevail on Hitler to submit counter proposals. Eden emphasized that the four power proposals were not intended to be final.

Believing Hitler would be obdurate, the French cabinet prepared a program of sanctions against Germany for proposal to the league, although Foreign Minister Flandin and others doubted that England would agree to support it. Flandin was prepared for a struggle to keep Britain, Belgium and Italy in a united front with France against German efforts to drive them apart four Locarno powers are agreed on a virtual military alliance if the reichsfuehrer fails to accept their proposals for a new Rhineland settlement.

Great Floods Recede and Reconstruction Begins

INTREPID citizens of scores of cities and towns in the eastern and New England states which were devastated by the unprecedented floods were digging out their homes and places of business from the mud and debris as the turbulent waters of many rivers subsided. Reconstruction and refitting began everywhere immediately, and this, as well as the relief of the suffering thousands, was aided by funds totaling more than $43,000,000 allocated by President Roosevelt before he left Washington for Florida.

Rough estimates were that the total dead in 13 states were 169; the homeless were 221,500, and the total property damage, $271,500,000. The last figure probably would be tripled if one took into account the losses from interruption to industry and trade and the stoppage of the wages of labor.

Cities along the lower Ohio were threatened as the flood waters raced down to the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico, but they had had plenty of warning and were in a measure prepared. Of course many communities were submerged, but the residents had moved to higher land.

Everywhere in the devastated regions the Red Cross workers were busy with food, clothing and medical supplies, and in many places National Guardsmen were kept on duty to prevent looting. The people of the nation were responding liberally to the call of President Roosevelt and Admiral Grayson, head of the Red Cross, for a fund of $3,000,000.

Isabella Greenway Will Retire From Congress

ISABELLA GREENWAY, the capable lady who has represented Arizona in congress since October, 1933, has announced in Tucson that she will retire from public life at the conclusion of her present term. She was first elected for the remainder of the term of Lewis Douglas, who resigned to become director of the budget, and was reelected in 1934.

Mrs. Greenway

Mrs. Greenway owns and operates several ranches in Arizona and New Mexico and a hotel in Tucson, and is also interested in some mining companies. Undoubtedly she could go back to congress without opposition, but she says she wants to devote more time to her private activities.

Doings of the Senators and Representatives

STILL refusing to appropriate $12,000,000 for the Florida ship canal, the senate passed the army bill carrying approximately $611,000,000. More than half the sum goes for the military activities of the War department.

There will be no reduction in the number of CCC camps during most of the coming fiscal year, and the enrollees will be kept up to about the 350,000 mark. This was the decision of President Roosevelt after a threatened revolt of Democratic representatives induced him to change his mind in the matter.

Senator Black, chairman of the senate lobbying committee, has added the Wichita Beacon to the papers whose telegrams he has seized or attempted to seize. The list also includes the Hearst publications, the Cowles papers, and the Times Publishing company of Wichita Falls, Tex. John Henry Kirby, an anti-Roosevelt Democrat of Texas, learned Black had subpoenaed all his telegrams and warned the senator not to exhibit to anyone any family or private business messages.

President Goes South on His Fishing Trip

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT packed up his fishing tackle and started South for his annual angling cruise, this time on the new Presidential boat, the Potomac. He made a brief stop at Winter Park, Fla., where he received an honorary degree from Rollins college. His plan was then to board the Potomac and spend about two weeks on his old fishing grounds off the Florida coast.

Three Powers Agree to Limit Battleship Size

GREAT BRITAIN, the United States and France, the only nations remaining in the London naval conference, accepted the final draft of a new treaty limiting the size of battleships to 35,000 tons, retaining 10,000 tons as the maximum for cruisers and providing that none of that size shall be built for six years.

Norman H. Davis, chief of the American delegation, served notice that the United States would consider herself free from the large cruiser limit if Great Britain should build more than 70 cruisers.

Unsuccessful in keeping Japan and Italy pledged to naval limitation, the conferees wrote escape clauses in the treaty which would permit them to disregard the limits if Japan and other nonsigners exceeded them.

Dr. Townsend Comes Out for Senator Borah

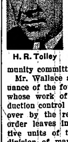
SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH is campaigning earnestly for the Republican Presidential nomination, and has just received a big boost for his cause in the announcement that Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the old age pension plan that bears his name, will give the Idahoan all his support. Repudiating President Roosevelt and changing his registration at Long Beach, Calif., from Democratic to Republican, Townsend said Borah was the only Republican candidate who "even approached" the standard of the Townsendites, although the senator has refused to indorse the Townsend pension plan as it stands.

Hitherto the Townsend organization had favored circulation of third party petitions in every state to enlist millions of people as a demonstration of strength.

In a speech in Chicago opening his campaign for Illinois delegates, Senator Borah lambasted the old guard of the Republican party, asserting that in 1932 10,000,000 voters were driven out of that party by leaders who "sacrificed the party" for their own aggrandizement, and that the 10,000,000 will not come back to the old fold if the old leadership controls at the Cleveland convention in June.

Plans Announced for Soil Conservation Program

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE announced the establishment of five regions for administration of the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, substitute for the invalid AAA. H. R. Tolley, administrator of the new plan, said the department already has begun a field service to administer the program in various states. As under the AAA, the leading part within the states is to be played by the farmers' county and community committees.



H. R. Tolley

Mr. Wallace also directed discontinuance of the four commodity divisions whose work of liquidating AAA production control programs will be taken over by the regional directors. The order leaves intact other administrative units of the AAA, such as the division of marketing and marketing agreements, division of program planning, and the division of the consumers' counsel.

Billion and a Half Asked for Relief for Year

ONE and one-half billion dollars will be needed to carry the Works Progress administration through the coming fiscal year, according to President Roosevelt's figuring. Therefore he asked congress to appropriate that sum. He thought it would be sufficient to care for the destitute unemployed, together with $1,000,000,000 in unexpended previous appropriations and the $600,000,000 carried in the budget for the civilian conservation corps and various public works.

Limitation of federal relief expenditures to this figure, however, is dependent upon re-employment of substantial numbers of the idle by private industry, the President said.

As the President's message was presented, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns revealed that Mr. Roosevelt had advised his leaders that any increase in the appropriation over his estimates must be accompanied by new taxes to provide revenues to cover the added cost.

Effort to Keep Politics Out of WPA Administration

RUSH D. HOLT, the young Democratic senator from West Virginia, gave notice that he would continue to hammer at the Works Progress administration until a senate investigation was ordered. He demanded an inquiry into all relief activities under charge of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, and other agencies affecting relief, the RFC, CWA, and FERA.

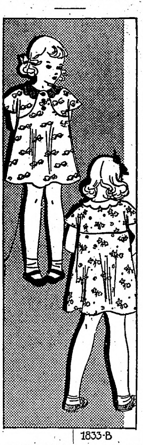
In reply to some of the charges made, Mr. Hopkins issued this bulletin:

"No employee of WPA is required to make any contribution to any political party. No WPA employee's job will be in jeopardy because of failure to make such contribution.

"No employee of the WPA shall at any time solicit contributions for any political party, and evidence of such solicitation will be cause for immediate discharge. The question whether or not to contribute to any political party is a matter entirely for the voluntary decision of employees.

"No person will be employed or discharged on the ground of his support or nonsupport of any candidate."

Distinctive Dress With Scalloped Collar for the Charming Little Girl



1833-B

Any little girl from two to six will look simply charming in this distinctive tiny frock which has a high waist finished off with a dainty scalloped collar, and three little buttons.

The shape of the collar gives the dress a fetchingly demure look that is adorable on all little girls. Notice the soft flare of the skirt and the loose short sleeves—simplicity is the keynote. This design requires a minimum of time and effort to make. Try it in gingham, wool challis, muslin or a silk with a wee little flower design. You can also make this version in a simple crepe which is used in party frocks.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1833-B is available for sizes: 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1⅝ yards of 35-inch fabric, plus ⅓ yard of contrasting.

Armies Like Stuffed Effigy of a Prehistoric Monster

The armies of 1914 had more than two months of grace before they lapsed into the stagnation of trench warfare. Nowadays the proportion of machine guns and other automatic firearms has increased enormously.

It is thus a safe deduction and prediction that the armies of today would sink into trenches within a week—if they ever got to grips—for there is more than a possibility that these infantry bodies would be dispersed by air attack or hamstrung by the bombing of their transport while they were still groping forward.

The more one reflects upon the present type of armies, which is still the prewar type, with a few additions, the more do they appear like the stuffed museum effigy of some prehistoric monster—harmless if horrifying.—B. H. Liddell Hart in Current History.

TALLEST STRUCTURE

Until New York's Chrysler building came along in 1930, with its height of 1,046 feet, the Eiffel Tower in Paris, 984 feet, was the world's tallest structure. Later, of course, the Empire State building topped both with 1,248 feet.

After First Look, Dumb-bell Longed to Look for Life

It is true that once in a while, at a dinner, for instance, a woman is put next to a man who stolidly stares at his plate and answers "yes" or "no" to everything she says, writes Emily Post in the New York Herald Tribune.

I remember one occasion when a certain very attractive young woman struggled throughout the soup course and the fish course and halfway through the meat course without getting so much as a glance in her direction. Finally she said firmly:

"Will you please turn your head and look at me?"

He turned a face that was quite blank unless slightly raised eyebrows meant a glimmer of inquiry.

"I want to be sure you know," said she, "that I've tried my best to talk to you, and now I'm going to try no more."

Whereupon she turned to the man on the other side.

The end of this incident sounds like fiction, but I vouch for its truth. She is now the wife of the first man.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Thunder Over Relief

Washington.—The President's latest message to congress, asking more than a billion and a half in new money to spend on relief as he sees fit has caused political thunder to rumble again. It has brought out in the open much of the undercurrent of gossip that has been going on about political racketeering with federal funds and it has brought into sharp relief, just ahead of the spring campaigning, the fact that the federal government has used something like $8,000,000,000 under the guise of relief since President Roosevelt took office.

Naturally, the situation is immersed in politics. All of the charges that were flung at Mr. Roosevelt during previous sessions of congress when he had requested that he be given, as he was given, blank checks on the treasury, have been revived. In addition, new accusations and disclosures of petty graft and political machinations have been dug up and flaunted in the face of the New Deal leaders. More and more of these are coming to the surface and there is no longer any question that throughout the relief organization there is politics. This is true notwithstanding the strongly worded statement by Mr. Roosevelt that politics was not to figure in the administration of relief in any way.

All of this leads up to the conclusion that whenever the federal government horns in on administrative affairs of states, counties or municipalities, the organization becomes so extensive that it is impossible for those at the top in Washington to know what goes on. It is but another way of saying that the federal government ought to confine itself to federal affairs, matters of national scope instead of attempting to supersede the local governments in any function.

Charge Waste

Since we are heading into a campaign in which Mr. Roosevelt is seeking re-election, his opposition is making much of two phases of the spending and relief situations. They are stressing the waste that they charge has permeated every phase of the relief effort in the last three years as well as the waste that has taken place in the countless alphabetical agencies that Mr. Roosevelt has built up in the federal government.

The relief machinery, Roosevelt opponents claim, has been converted into a gigantic political machine, the chief object of which is to re-elect Mr. Roosevelt. They claim as well that there has been created a bureaucracy that makes us, as individuals, responsible to a thousand little dictators who act as prosecution, judge and jury over our every coming and going.

All of these are harsh accusations but there is enough evidence available now to make it appear that there is, at least, some truth upon which such charges can be based.

Of course, politicians will magnify all phases of every subject which they discuss. The opposition will make the crimes look heinous and the administration spokesmen will make everything look pure. Neither one is justified in going quite to the extent of the indicated trend. It seems to me that voters ought not be fully convinced by either side but that they ought to examine the picture from the local viewpoint where the evidence is first-hand and where the people who did a good job or who were guilty of fraud or corruption are known to the voters. Then, if in November the election results for the whole country show a preponderance one way or another, the voters will have established their will as being either in favor of or definitely opposed to management of such things from Washington.

• • •

More Politics

There are 3,071 counties in the United States. In nearly every one of them, there are a Republican and a Democratic county chairman. In many of the counties the Democratic county chairmen are trying to use the WPA and its relief setup for political advantage. In an equal number of counties Republican county chairmen are watching for and reporting irregularities. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the charges about relief being used politically will increase in number as the campaign progresses if there is ground for the charges. So, it is made to appear that the local voters will have a complete picture of conditions upon which to base their judgment.

Two recent instances where important individuals have called attention to alleged corruption and political maneuvering under guidance of relief leaders serve to support the contention I have just advanced that the local communities will have complete facts before them: I refer to the charges by Senator Holt, Democrat, of West Virginia, that the whole relief organization in his state is honeycombed with politics and the bitter attack by Governor Pinchot, Pennsylvania Republican, upon what he called the manhandling of relief administration in the state in which he formerly was the chief executive. Relief Administrator Hopkins, with the aid of politicians, has denied these charges in toto. Senator Holt called the Hopkin's denial a whitewash of his own appointees and Mr. Pinchot turned loose a fresh fire.

This sort of thing probably will develop in every state in the Union.

And Asks New Taxes

I referred to the Presidential message asking an additional billion and a half for relief. This would not have created quite so much of a storm had it not followed closely on the heels of the White House request for new taxes. The combination of taxes and an additional appropriation to be used as previous blank checks have been used by Mr. Roosevelt has enabled those who are opposed to the President and those who, while they may support him for re-election, are not in accord with some of his policies, to make public statements of their positions to a better advantage than was possible before. If they had been able only to oppose relief, administration supporters could have accused them of being opposed to the relief of destitute. To put taxes and a blank check together simply offers additional ammunition and a good many members of congress will use it before the new relief appropriation is voted.

I think there is no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt will get the money but there will be a great deal of accusing and denying, respectively, before the vote is taken. That will be necessary in order to "make a record" upon which senators and representatives can seek re-election.

When Mr. Roosevelt was voted $4,880,000,000 a year ago, his opponents threw up their hands and said that "you can't beat $4,880,000,000 for re-election." Now, one hears observations frequently expressed that while "you can't beat $4,880,000,000 for re-election," it is entirely possible that $4,880,000,000 plus almost that much more may beat itself. In other words, I have attempted here to present a comprehensive analysis of the pros and cons in order to show that since politics has crept in, has permeated the relief setup, the AAA organization and other New Deal agencies, it is entirely possible for a reaction to develop whereby the vast sum of money would be the cause of defeat rather than the cause of re-election for Mr. Roosevelt.

I am making no election prediction. That would be utterly foolish. What I have sought to do, however, plainly and simply, is to show how local communities are going to rule the roost to a greater extent in the 1936 election than usually is the case.

Split on Tax Plan

Much is being made of the President's proposal to tax the surpluses of corporations. I have hitherto reported to you something of the nature of the tax proposals but there have been developments that bring the subject again to the fore. One of these, perhaps the most interesting one, is differences that have arisen between men who are supposed to be the President's closest advisers. Professor Raymond Moley, now a magazine editor, lately criticized the tax plan most vigorously in his publication. At the same time, attention was directed here to the recorded attitude of Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell. Professor Tugwell published a book called "The Industrial Decline" not so long ago and in that volume he advocated the control of capital by the "driving of corporate surpluses into the open investment market" by taxation. These two views simply cannot be reconciled and yet they came from two individuals who have been very close to Mr. Roosevelt in an advisory way ever since Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House.

Professor Moley takes the position, editorially, that if, during the depression, American industry had been stripped of all surpluses, few of even the greatest corporations could have survived. He regards surpluses as life insurance policies for corporations and holds the conviction that unless a corporation is permitted to retain funds as it sees fit, it cannot protect itself when our economic structure goes into a tailspin such as that through which we have been passing.

The difference in viewpoint of these two men shows a sad state of confusion among the "economic planners of the more abundant life," and demonstrates, among other things, that Professor Tugwell still has very great influence with the President. While we have not heard many of Professor Tugwell's speeches lately, and it is probably true, as publicly stated by the opposition, that Professor Tugwell has been muzzled for the period of the campaign, there are many things being done under Presidential orders that have their origin in the Tugwell brain. He is proceeding merrily on his way with the Resettlement Administration program, of which he is head, and has 14,000 employees on his pay roll. All of which seems to indicate that while Professor Tugwell will not make any more speeches calling upon farmers and laborers to ally themselves against "our common enemy," he is still a very effective member of the New Deal administration.

WHEN Mae West's effects were moved off the Paramount lot, a fashionable gallery of Hollywood celebrities watched the strong men carry her furniture out to a red moving van. The list of onlookers included Carole Lombard, Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Jack Oakie and Herbert Marshall. Mae, who voluntarily relinquished her contract, was not there. She will begin a new picture for Columbia which is headed by Emanuel Cohen, who was her boss at Paramount when she made her first film hit. She is to receive $300,000 for this picture. Mae was represented at the moving party by Jim Timony, her manager, who checked over the list of furnishings from her dressing room which were moved to the new studio. These included a piano, a desk, a divan, a chair and an oil painting of Mae.

Grace Moore has never sung the aria "Woman Is Fickle" in Rigoletto, for that is the tenor's job, but it might be a theme song for her off-again, on-again act with the movies. After announcing that she was through, she says she has changed her mind and is going to make some more pictures at Columbia. She has made one important reservation, though. No more scenes where she is singing while milking a cow.

Hard luck has dogged the footsteps of many a movie star of yesteryear but it has nipped rather constantly at the heels of Alice Lake. She is now the ward of the Film Welfare league in St. Vincent's hospital. Fifteen years ago she was in the big money and had an immense following. Recently when brought into court and her plight revealed, she said she could not even get work as an extra. She still gets fan letters, however.

The success which has followed David O. Selznick's ventures in reviving classics of literature has won him a well-deserved acclaim. "Little Lord Fauntleroy," in which young Freddie Bartholomew, the English star, is featured, has attracted about as much attention as "David Copperfield," which endeared Selznick to the Dickens fans of America and abroad. Faithful adherence to the story itself in the talkie version was responsible for much of its effectiveness.

Lucien Littlefield, co-author of the screen version of "Early to Bed," has joined the cast which already includes Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland. The picture, originally called: "Where Am I?" is a farce detailing the life and love of a clerk in a glass-eye factory. Ruggles plays the role of the clerk who is engaged to Mary Boland. The picture develops a kick when the downtrodden Ruggles goes berserk, quits his job and successfully establishes a rival glass-eye company.

FARMER SMOTHERED AS SILAGE FALLS ON HIM

Milaca. — Jerry Keefe, well known farmer of Benton county, was killed recently by being smothered to death in his silo. Accompanied by a young man in the neighborhood, William Messenson, Keefe entered the silo to try and dislodge a lot of frozen silage that was clinging to the upper part of the structure. A large amount of the silage suddenly fell, burying both men under it. but Messenson managed to crawl out from under the mass. Keefe was unable to get out, and was smothered to death. Messenson is confined to his bed as a result of his injuries. It took 45 minutes to dig Keefe's body out from under the silage, about eight feet of the silage having piled down on him.

Early T. B. Diagnosis Campaign Instituted by Public Health Group

Endorsed by health authorities, medical societies, and leaders in industry, health and education, the annual "Early Diagnosis Campaign," sponsored throughout Minnesota by the Minnesota Public Health Association will get under way the first week in April. Under the slogan "Fight Tuberculosis With Modern Weapons" two phases of the tuberculosis problem will be emphasized:

(a) Anticipating tuberculosis among youth of high school and college age by examination with the tuberculin test and X-rays.

(b) The discovery of tuberculosis in its early stages and the need for going to the doctor promptly when symptoms are first apparent.

"In contrast to the association's annual Christmas Seal appeal for funds, the Early Diagnosis Campaign is a strictly educational effort," explained the bulletin from the Minnesota Public Health Association.

"In this campaign, we are urging that boys and girls of high school and college age be examined routinely for tuberculosis with the tuberculin test and the X-ray, which are the modern weapons referred to in the slogan. By means of these two diagnostic aids it is possible to discover not only whether the germs of tuberculosis are in a person's body but, if so, how much damage, if any, has been done to the lungs."

$1,100,000 in Highway Jobs Includes Paving on Trunk Highway 75

Bids on highway jobs estimated to cost approximately $1,100,000 have been called for April 17 by the Minnesota Highway department. Four paving, four grading and two heavy grading and stablized base projects are divided among the following 9 counties: Aitkin, Big Stone, Kittson, Murray, Nobles, Rock, Wabasha, Wilkin and Wright. Included in the jobs for which bids are asked are:

T. H. No. 75 between Doran and Breckenridge; length 6.9 miles; 93,837 cu. yds. of excavation, 20,149 cu. yds. of aggregate base and 82,481 square yards of concrete paving.

T. H. No. 75 between Hallock and 1 mile north; length 1.6 miles; 10,784 cubic yards of excavation and 18,496 square yards of concrete paving.

UNINTENTIONALLY BECOMES PICKPOCKET IN BIG CROWD

Mountain Lake.—The ease with which pickpockets work in a crowd was forcibly demonstrated to Jake E. Dick, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dick of Mountain Lake, when he caught himself "redhanded" with the "goods" after the basketball tournament in that village recently. For a time he hardly knew whether to throw himself into jail or permit a plea for clemency. Young Dick, attending the basketball games, found himself in the center of the crowd which surged through the door after the last whistle. When he emerged, he found a watch hanging to his coat button. While pressing through the crowd, the chain of the watch had caught young Dick's coat button, and the watch was pulled from its owner's vest pocket. Dick later discovered the watch belonged to C. O. Castledine of Windom, who prized it very highly in that he had won it in a salesmanship contest. Dick made the trip to Windom to return the watch, valued at $100, and received a ten dollar reward for his honesty.

COUNTY STUDENTS WERE GRADUATED AT N. W. SCHOOL

Three Pennington County students were graduated from the advanced course at the Northwest School last week. This group included Laura Hanson, Thief River Falls; Orissa Prestegaard and Olaf Dahlen of Erie.

Laura Hanson was the highest ranking girl from the standpoint of progress and scholarship during her freshman year and again during her Junior year. She was a member of the Pepster organization throughout her school course, member of the senior class play cast, glee club, mixed chorus, Aggie Board, class basketball team, and served as an officer of the Y. W. C. A. during the past year. Laura also took part in the Red River Valley historical pageant presented during Winter Shows week one year ago.

Graduates at the regular school of agriculture course included James Weckwerth, and Stella Omundson, Hazel; Martin Hanson, Gladyce Ose and Leroy Peterson, Thief River Falls and Harold Nabben, Goodridge.

James Weckwerth served as editor-in-chief of the Aggie Board; vice president of his class, and was the highest ranking boy in scholarship during his freshman year. James also presided over the senior class exercises presented during commencement week.

Leroy Peterson was awarded a gold medal for his work on the school livestock judging team. He also served as vice president of the "A" club and his name appeared on the honor roll during the year. Gladyce Ose was a member of the class basketball team, while Stella Omundson won a high scholarship rating during the year. Martin Hanson was a member of the school cross country team during the fall of 1935, a member of the mixed chorus, boy's glee club, 4-H club, Aggie board, and class football team. Harold Nabben also won honor roll rating during the year and took part in many school activities including the boys glee club, mixed chorus, debate, class football and won first place on the Variety Night program presented during the winter term.

Marlen Augustine, Thief River Falls, a junior, won first place in the humorous reading contest during commencement week. Marlan read "The Man Who Died at Twelve O'Clock" by Green. Glennie Iverson, Erie, also received recognition for superior work in the study of violin. He was presented with a Caleb Dorr scholarship as a result of the greatest progress in violin during the year.

IRISH-SWEDE IS REAL FISHERMAN

Truman. — A valuable addition has been made to the Truman community in the person of the world's most truthful man, Leonard Anderson, who hails from Brainerd. As he stepped off the train he told the following story. Fishing on Mille Lacs, he was kept 24 hours by a huge muskie on his line which towed him all over the lake at express train speed. Cold, hungry, and exhausted, Anderson finally decided that the only way out was to cut the line. As the muskie was traveling in circles several miles wide, Anderson figured to hold on until the big fish had brought him around to the nearest point to his home dock. At exactly the right moment, he lopped the line. The boat was pointed straight towards Anderson's port, and the momentum carried it to shore, a distance of slightly more than four miles. Of Swedish-Irish descent, Anderson has a number of truthful stories along the same line. All that has to be done is to wind him up.

BUYS OLD CAN FOR 10c; FINDS $69 IN BOTTOM

Cokato.—The boom days of 1929 are with us again. An investment of 10 cents by a Cokato man brought a return of $69 last week. It isn't often in ordinary life that an investment of a few pennies cast upon the waters come back in the form of more than half a hundred dollars, but that is just what happened to Emory Davidson when he purchased an old cream can at the Leo York auction sale, and found on returning home that he had $69. The money was found in an old tin pail in the bottom of a pile of assorted bolts, nuts, chains and things which had been thrown into the cream can. However, the investment profits were not long-lived. The money was promptly returned to the bank, to be credited to Mr. York, although there seems to be no reason in law why the money did not belong to the man who purchased the cream can.

CATTLE SLAUGHTER INCREASE THIS YEAR

Indication of why the cattle market has been showing weakness is shown in the large number of cattle that have been slaughtered at federally inspected packing plants of the United States, says the Livestock Market Digest published by the Central Co-Operative Association, farmer-owned livestock selling agency at South St. Paul. February slaughter was 741,000 head or the largest for the month since 1918, the record year. For the first two months this year, cattle slaughter has been heavy in spite of the weather conditions, which have greatly hampered the marketward movement of livestock.

HIGHER ANGLING FEES NECESSARY, WILLARD STATES

An increase of present fishing license fees to provide a higher revenue for law enforcement, research, and propagation was urged in a statement made last week by E. V. Willard, commissioner of conservation.

Annual funds of $10,000 for educational work, $10,000 for wildlife research in cooperation with the United States biological survey, and a permanent warden force with reasonable assurance of tenure" are recommended in the statement.

"Present revenues simply cannot be made to embrace some of the most needed activities," Mr. Willard stated "After the cost of a modest fish propagation program has been met, law enforcement consumes the remainder of the receipts, with an emergency lay-off facing the game wardens each winter when revenues are at their lowest ebb."

"If the sportsmen of the state concerned with perpetuating angling in the future believe that the license fee of 50 cents now paid by resident anglers is sufficient, and that an increase to add to the revenues of the department is not necessary or will be inimical to the best interests of the conservation of fish life, the conservation commission, I am sure, is not going to press for an increase.

"All that the commission desires is that sportsmen recognize the limitations which confront the department and the commission in their effort to maintain an adequate supply of game fish."

Low Seed Cost Favors Sowing of Reed Canary Grass, U Farm Man Says

With reed canary grass seed selling for 30 cents or less per pound, compared with 75 cents or more per pound previously, farmers have an unusually good opportunity this year to begin growing this remarkable hay and pasture crop, says A. C. Arny, agronomist at University Farm, St. Paul.

When grown on moist rich peat or muck soils, this grass yields from 3 to 4 tons of hay per acre. Dairy cattle eat it as readily as timothy. It is also excellent for pasture, producing heavily all season long, and bearing heavy animals without hummocking. Unlike timothy and other tame grasses, it can stand considerable flooding without smothering.

Although it is best to plow the land, if possible, in preparation for the crop, good stands have been obtained on land merely disked. Disking of course is the only method of preparation that can be undertaken on land so wet as to bear horses only when partially frozen. Such places should be disked as soon as the surface thaws to a depth of 3 or 4 inches. The crop may be seeded either in the spring or fall, as conditions permit.

Before reed canary is planted, the land should be carefully studied as to fertilizer needs and the requisite materials applied. Peats very frequently require phosphate and potash, available either in barnyard manure or commercial materials.

Four pounds of seed per acre will make a fairly good stand, which will "thicken" considerably after the roots have become established. With the seed as cheap as it is, however, the seeding of 6 to 8 pounds per acre is justified. Peat land should be packed with a heavy roller after planting.

BARKING DOG SAVES LIVES IN NIGHT FIRE

Perham.—A barking dog undoubtedly saved the lives of Mrs. Alois Morgenroth and her daughter, Madrine, the other morning when the animal became alarmed at the noise of a fire which was freely burning on the second floor of their home in Perham. The fire is believed to have started from a pipe which lead through the floor of an upper store room. Apparently it was at work for some time before it broke forth and aroused the dog. During the evening the lights in the house suddenly went out, and Mrs. Morgenroth, thinking it was an interruption which affected the entire village, decided to retire for the night. They went to sleep without being alarmed, and were only aroused when the faithful dog set up a clamor. The house was burned to the ground, but articles of furniture on the first floor were saved.

BIG ROCK WEIGHS 45 TONS WORTH $1,200

Isle.—A huge block of gray granite weighing approximately 45 tons and valued at $1,200 in its rough stage was wheeled into Isle the other day for shipment by railroad to the polishing plant at Cold Spring. The big rock measured about 15 feet by 6 feet by 7 feet for a total cubic content of some 600 feet. Approximately 20 gallons of gasoline were used in bringing the "pebble" five miles into Isle. Elmer Anderson, Isle contractor who specializes in heavy moving, brought in the stone with an arrangement of a truck, semi-trailer and a pusher truck. To the casual on-looker it appeared that the truck was mostly wheels, as there were seven axles supporting the load, exclusive of the pusher truck. There seems to be a good demand for the product of the Isle quarry, with 10 men having been employed all winter.

HAZEL NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Prestby and family spent Friday evening at the Hans Pretsby home. They helped Hanlon Prestby celebrate his 7th birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Carl Finstad and children, Miss Beatrice Lokken, Mrs. Andrew Arne and son Irvin and Omar Seeland visited at the Carl Alberg home Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sjosvold, children Dorothy and Robert were Friday evening visitors at the Ted Johnson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Prestby and children visited at the Carl Prestby home Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Ole Odegaard visited at the Adrian Anderson home Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. C. Pike and son William visited at the C. A. Roese home Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Pete Nelson and Mrs. Oscar Seeland visited at the Carl Alberg home Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Prestby were visitors at the Oscar Odegaard home Saturday.

Mrs. Peter Sather returned Tuesday to her home at Melvin after spending a week visiting with Mrs. Arnt Wedul.

Mrs. Ode Wedul and son Martin of Mayfield visited at the Arnt Wedul home Monday.

Roy Lokken spent a few days visiting in Plummer at the Arthur Torstveit home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Roese, Joyce and Stanley Roese, Mr. and Mrs. C. Pike and son, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Peterson, Hjalmer and Carl Peterson were Sunday evening visitors at the Henry Sandberg home.

Mr. Harry Peterson, who is employed at Thief River Falls spent the week end visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Peterson.

Tuesday evening visitors at the Carl Alberg home were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Melby and Mrs. Elofson of Thief River Falls.

The Birthday Club met at the C. Pike home Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Pike's birthday anniversary.

Longest Railroad Tunnel

The longest railroad tunnel in the United States and in the world is the Cascade tunnel in Washington, on the Great Northern railroad 7.79 miles long, and the Simplon tunnel in Switzerland. 12.3 miles long.

NO EXCEPTIONS TO RESTRICTIONS ON HIGHWAY LOADS

Load restrictions placed on trunk highways during the spring break-up must be enforced against school buses and all other vehicles without exception, according to an announcement by W. F. Rosenwald, chief maintenance engineer of the Minnesota highway department.

"We are besieged with requests to exempt certain vehicles from the posted load limits on restricted highways", Mr. Rosenwald said. "This we cannot do. Load limits are put in effect at this season to prevent roads from becoming absolutely impassable and to guard against tremendous damage to the highway system.

"A few weeks inconvenience results for trucks and busses, but this is necessary in the public interest. Hundreds of thousands of dollars damage to our highways would result without the restrictions. We make the load limits as high as possible without sacrificing protection of the road. Since no exceptions can be made to the restrictions, we ask the co-operation of everyone in this effort to protect the highways."

TAKES TAME DEER FOR RIDE IN CAR

Hallock.—S. G. Foss had an unusual experience the other evening while returning from Lancaster, when a yearling buck deer was apparently claiming the right of way on the highway. In order to protect the animal from possible injury, Foss got out of his car and tried to remove the buck from the road, which proved unsuccessful, as the animal showed no fear on being approached and refused to leave the road. Foss loaded the deer into his car and brought it to Hallock, where he notified Game Warden Blid, who immediately solved the mystery. Blid had turned the fawn into the game refuge last fall after having had the little fellow at his home for several months while a fractured leg was being cared for. Reports are to the effect that this young deer had frequented various farm yards in Hazelton township ever since he was turned out last summer, and has even at times tagged along with school children going to school, and spent the day around the grounds.

FARM PLACEMENT SERVICE OFFERED

Under Section III of the Wagner-Peyser Act passed by the last session of Congress, the National Reemployment Service, a parallel branch of the United States Employment Service under the jurisdiction of the United States Department of Labor, is required to maintain a Farm Placement Service. This ruling became effective January 1, 1936.

One of the purposes of the Farm Placement Service is to furnish statistics to the Department of Labor which reflect conditions of employment in agriculture throughout the United States and especially when migratory farm labor is a major factor. The other function of the service is to supply farmers with farm workers and to obtain jobs for farm employes. The service is free of charge both to employer and employe. The office of the National Reemployment Service requests that all farmers in need of workers place their orders early. Persons desiring farm work are also requested to notify the office that they are in search of employment. Offices for this district are located at Crookston and Thief River Falls.

HONOR STUDENTS ARE ANNOUNCED

At a meeting of the high school faculty, the final grades, for the Seniors of 1935-36 for their four years, were averaged. Carl Nelson with an average of 92.1 was selected as Valedictorian, and Woodrow Almquist with an average of 89.3 was named Salutatorian. These two young men have taken an active part in extra-activities and still ranked at the head of their class.

W. J. Janda is making preparations for opening of his local hatchery located in the Bjerk building. Mr. Janda has had years of experience in this line and has very good equipment. He specializes in custom hatching, having tray space for handling of about 6000 eggs at the time.

Regular monthly meeting of the village council was held at the Corbet shop Monday night.

Last week Art Vik advertised a set of tractor rims for sale. Monday he came in and had the adv discontinued as he had sold the rims and had fully a dozen calls for them after making the sale. Judging by number of calls, Art figures it would pay him better to start manufacturing rims than it would to farm.

PAY SCHEDULE OUT FOR NEW FARM PLAN

Payments available to Minnesota farmers for "soil-building" practices in 1936, under the new federal soil program, have recently been approved by the Secretary of Agriculture and transmitted to the county soil conservation committee.

Farmers have been waiting this information to use in figuring their possible secondary payments, which will be in addition to the $10 per acre, more or less, according to the productivity of the soil, which they will receive for shifting from soil-depleting to soil-building and soil-conserving crops. In general, the soil depleting crops are those which are comparatively "hard" on the land, whereas the soil-conserving and soil-building crops are those which tend to maintain or increase soil fertility.

The schedule of "soil-building" payments, in amounts per acre, is as follows:

Two dollars for alfalfa; $1.50 or medium or mammoth red clover; $1 for alsike, sweet or white clover; and $1.50 for soybeans plowed under as green manure. To qualify as "soil-building", all of the foregoing crops must be seeded on crop land between October 1, 1935 and September 30, 1936.

In addition, $2.50 per acre will be paid when crop land or pasture is limed at the rate of 2 tons per acre between January 1, and September 30, 1936.

The total of all secondary payments the farmer may receive, however, may not exceed $1 for every acre of soil building and soil conserving crops grown on his farm in 1936, Mr. R. M. Douglass explains. Thus, although the farmer might lime and seed 10 acres to red clover in 1936, he would not be eligible to receive the full secondary payment of $40 ($2.50 plus $1.50 times 10) unless he should grow on his farm this year at least 40 acres of new and old-crop tame grasses and legumes (40 acres at $1 per acre equals $40.)

Farmers wishing for a more detailed explanation of the program and how it will affect their individual farms are advised to consult the county agent, or members of the county or community committees.

In order to explain the new soil consedvation program, another meeting will be held in the court rooms at the court house in Thief River Falls, on Saturday afternoon, April 11th, at 2 o'clock. This meeting has been called so those who were unable to attend the meeting held a week ago will have an opportunity to hear the program discussed.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Mrs. O. Gunstad left today to spend Easter wtih her mother and sisters at Minneapolis.

Miss Huldah Gigstad, teacher in the public schools at Moorhead, is expected home this week to spend her Easter vacation.

County Commissioner Paul Roy was at Thief River Falls both Tuesday and Wednesday to preside at regular monthly meeting of the county board.

Manford Dahle, student at the University of North Dakota will be home this week to spend a short vacation with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle.

The Women's Missionary Society meets at the home of Mrs. Richard Larson on Wednesday, April 15 at 2 o'clock. A hearty welcome is extended to all to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Graham and baby daughter left this morning for a short visit with his parents at Wells and with Mrs. Graham's parents at Bertha, Minn.

Howard Grow, the new assistant county agent of Pennington county, was here Wednesday making arrangements for meetings of leaders of the Home Management project which is to get under way soon.

A small steam boiler was put into service Wednesday at thawing out frozen culverts and catch basins about town. The little outfit does good work, and should be part of the village equipment.

Annual spring vacation at the local school will be shorter than usual this year, the school closing Thursday and re-opening Tuesday morning. Making up of time lost at opening of the term is the reason for the short vacation.

Tornadoes which swept thru several southern states first of this week, took a toll of nearly five hundred lives, and injured over two thousands of people. The property damage is estimated to be between five and ten millions of dollars.

Al Brink, Aug. Berglund and Harry Winter have been very busy lately turning out bee hives and equipment at their plant. They plan to double the size of their apiaries this spring, and will have shipment of new bees here as soon as weather conditions permit.

Ed. Christensen has under construction at his workshop in the south garage, a touring auto trailer. The trailer, which is substantially built, will provide ample room for four people. Ed. has put in a neat workshop outfit, and intends to continue building trailers if there is demand for them.

The Borgen Players went Saturday to Goodridge to put on a performance in that village.

Meeting of the local Red Cross was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. W. Brink.

It is quite apparent now that this spring is going to be no record breaker insofar as early seeding is concerned.

Friends of Anton Johnson of Rocksbury will be pleased to know he is improving after a severe attack of rheumatic fever and will soon be able to be out again.

Next whist meeting will be Thursday evening, April 16. It is anticipated roads will be in fair condition by that time so that people from all parts of the community may attend.

DR. WATSON DIES IN RED LAKE FALLS

Funeral services for Dr. Neill M. Watson, prominent Red Lake Falls physician, civic leader and politician, who died as a result of a heart attack at his apartment Monday night, will be held in the Presbyterian church in Red Lake Falls today at 2 p. m. The body will be taken to his boyhood home in Ontario for burial.

Dr. Watson served his city as mayor and in other capacities and was prominently connected with various civic and business projects. A republican, he was a leader in county, state and national politics.

Born in Williamstown, Ont., August 20, 1865, Dr. Watson received his M. D. at McGill university, Montreal, in 1891 and in 1892, the year he came to Red Lake Falls, he was granted a license to practice. During his college days he was an outstanding athlete and was a member of the world's champion lacrosse team.

An influential citizen Dr. Watson served as mayor several terms, was pdesident of the Red Lake County Fair association many years, members of the city school board 29 years serving as president 26 years until he retired voluntarily in 1934, local surgeon for the Northern Pacific Railway company many years and vice president and director of the First National bank.

He was appointed a members of the Minnesota board of health by Governor Burnquist in 1918 and served in that capacity 15 years.

Dr. Watson was Republican county chairman for 32 years and was elected a delegate to the state Republican convention next April 18. Dr. Watson never married.

BULL ATTACKS TRUCK DRIVER WHO RUNS, JUMPS, HIDES

Lafayette—It was a case of quick presence of mind, a fast run, jump and hide, to save the life of James Isenberg, Lafayette truck driver, who was attacked by a vicious bull the other day. While loading the animal at the John Holmberg farm, Isenberg led the bull into the chute, only to have it make a roaring attack. Isenberg ran up into the truck and jumped over the rack. The bull did likewise. Isenberg slid under the truck, and the animal was unable to get at its victim. For sometime, the bull kept pawing away close to the truck, but finally walked off, giving up the job.

Just as a reminder that spring might be expected most any time this month, a nice thaw occurred last Saturday afternoon. No one has reported seeing crows, robins and meadowlarks heading south as yet, so there may be a spring this year too if one has plenty of patience to wait for it.

ANOTHER BLIZZARD HITS AREA MONDAY

Another blizzard, which is to be hoped will be the last for this spring season, hit this section of the state Monday. While no great amount of snow fell, the powdery snow was fanned by a strong northwest wind. Motorists had much difficulty in driving between Red Lake Falls and St. Hilaire and from here to Thief River because of the whirling snow. One collision of cars occurred south of town, and two north of the village because of poor visibility. School busses were unable to make the routes either east or west of town, and the children were compelled to stay in town during the night. Several other motorists also were stranded and compelled to spend the night here. Plows opened the main roads Tuesday morning.

Edgar Johnson, principal of schools at Lancaster, motored down Saturday for a brief visit with friends while enroute to St. Paul to spend a few days during Easter vacation.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE IN ATTACK BY BULL

Otto Johnson had a narrow escape Thursday from serious injury or death when set upon and mauled by a bull at his farm. The animal, which had not previously shown any ugly temper, suddenly turned on Mr. Johnson and knocked him down in a small inclosure near the barn. Mr. Johnson managed to get a grip in the ring in the animal's nose, but was fast losing strength and was being pushed thru the barb wire fence when his cries attracted the attention of Mrs. Johnson. She immediately procured a pitchfork and drove the infuriated animal away. Aside from some bruises and being badly shaken, Mr. Johnson apparently suffered no injury.

Because of snow drifts, the school bus running to Hazel has been able to travel over only about half of the route this week. Children are brot from Hazel by team and meet the bus near the Anton Anderson farm.

ASTORIA: THE WESTERNMOST OUTPOST OF A FAR-FLUNG EMPIRE OF FUR

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE hundred and twenty-five years ago this month, an event of historic importance occurred in what is now the state of Oregon.

On April 12, 1811, the little ship, Tonquin, dropped anchor in one of the bays which form the mouth of the Columbia river. Seven months earlier she had set sail in New York harbor and pointed her prow toward Cape Horn. Now, after a voyage filled with danger and dissension, she had reached her objective.

On board her was a strangely-assorted company of men who had come on an important mission. Here on the distant shores of the Pacific they were about to establish the westernmost outpost in the far-flung empire of fur which John Jacob Astor, merchant-prince of New York, was building throughout North America.

A party of 16 men had already gone ashore and when the Tonquin came to anchor, she was "saluted with three volleys of musketry and three cheers. She returned the salute with three cheers and three guns." Thus writes Washington Irving, the earliest chronicler of this incident in American history. He continues:

"All hands now set to work cutting down trees, clearing away thickets and marking out the place for the residence, storehouse and powder magazine, which were to be built of logs and covered with bark. Others landed the timbers intended for the frame of the coasting vessel and proceeded to put them together, while others prepared a garden spot and sowed the seeds of various vegetables.

"The next thought was to give a name to the embryo metropolis; the one that naturally suggested itself was that of the projector and supporter of the whole enterprise. It was accordingly called ASTORIA."

They little dreamed how short-lived this "embryo metropolis" was to be nor that history would write down the Astor project as a "magnificent failure." If it had been a success, the course of American history might have been profoundly affected by their labors. For, in the words of a recent historian—Arthur D. Howden Smith, author of "John Jacob Astor—Landlord of New York" (Lippincott)—the significance of Astoria was this:

ASTORIA AS IT WAS IN 1813

"There is a tinge of epic quality in the affair, all the more human, and therefore the more interesting, for the failure which dogged it. The stake was the coastlands of North America, from the borders of the Spanish Crown to the fiords of Alaska, where Count Baronhoff ruled for the czar. Had Astor won, Canada would have been barred from the Pacific, and who can say what might have been the resulting effect upon the relations between the United States and their northern neighbor?

"Canada, denied a western seaport, must have been urged to closer ties with American industrialism: all the wealth of timber, minerals and agriculture that flow to Vancouver contributing to American prosperity; a railroad linking Puget Sound with Alaska—the possibilities are limitless and fruitless to discuss. For Astor didn't win.

"But even in failing, and despite the errors of his course, he established the American title to Oregon and its hinterland, and so helped secure an empire sufficiently ample to satisfy most Americans, except the rabid breed who presently commenced to shout: 'Manifest Destiny!' By which cryptic utterance they implied a conviction that Divine Providence favored the extension of the Eagle's sway the length and breadth of the continent. We have them with us yet."

The story of John Jacob Astor is a familiar one to most Americans—how the sixteen-year-old son of a butcher in Waldorf, Germany, left home in 1779, and worked in London for four years before he had enough money to buy a steerage to Baltimore; how he invested the rest of his money, after paying his passage, in seven flutes, from the sale of which he expected to lay the foundation of his fortune in the new country; how the vessel was delayed by ice in Chesapeake bay for several weeks and young Astor improved the time by talking with a countryman, who was in the fur business, and learning all about that important industry.

Arriving in New York Astor became a clerk for a fur dealer. After a while he was sent into the Iroquois country to buy from the Indians, and soon he was in business for himself, first handling musical instruments, then musical instruments and furs, and finally furs alone. At first he went on foot, with a heavy pack on his back, camping out or living in the lodges of the Indians. He went to Montreal and from Montreal followed the fur traders westward, pushing beyond Lake Superior into the prairie country. Industrious, prudent and thrifty, the young German was soon on his way to a fortune.

In the year that Astor sailed from England several of the principal merchants of Montreal had organized the Northwest company to compete with the powerful Hudson's Bay company, and soon had a virtual monopoly over the fur business in the Great Lakes region. Their success encouraged the founding of other companies and resulted in the organization of a new association of British merchants to exploit the region south of the Great Lakes, an almost untapped reservoir of wealth in peltries. The principal post or "factory" of this company was historic Michilimackinac, from which place the new company took its name of the Mackinaw company.

In the meantime young Jacob Astor had been industriously building up his own fur business. At first he shipped his furs to London, but as soon as he discovered that China was a good market for fine peltries he embarked upon a venture into the Orient. He first chartered, then bought or built ships to carry furs to China and bring back tea until, as he said, he "had a million dollars afloat which represented a dozen vessels." When the treaty of 1795 between Great Britain and America opened up a chance for direct commercial intercourse between Canada and the United States, Astor embarked upon this trade but soon found himself balked by the power and influence of the Mackinaw company.

"So John Jacob Astor, fur trader, gave place to the American Fur company, incorporated in New York April 6, 1808," writes his biographer, Arthur D. Howden Smith. "The capital of $1,000,000 was entirely subscribed by himself, which gives an inkling of the wealth he had acquired . . . It is obvious, too, that he still intended to make his business a one-man affair. He had a very definite plan in view. He'd stretch out his chain of posts along the Great Lakes to the Mississippi as far as St. Louis, running a second string along the Missouri westward to the Rockies. Intermediate posts in the mountains would link the Missouri chain with a third chain down the Columbia to the Pacific.

"The main distributing and collecting center for the east-bound trade would be at St. Louis. A fort at the mouth of the Columbia would afford a haven for his China ships, which would load there direct for Canton. A post in the Sandwich Islands would be a stopping place both on the voyage to Canton and from New York to the Columbia.

"This was a grandiose scheme, but sound. Developed logically, it must assure him control of the entire region. His brigades would be so situated that they could repel any invaders, while the complementary arrangements for marketing the catch would give him an east and west dispersion, guaranteeing a maximum of economy. He'd be able to buy furs cheaper, and sell them at a lower price.

"But he wasn't contented with the arrangements already outlined. The Russian Fur company, in Alaska, practically a government subsidiary, worked under several difficulties. It lacked transportation facilities at sea, and was opposed by the Northwesters. Astor conceived the idea of joining forces with the Russians, so that their furs, too, should pass through his hands.

"He contemplated eventual dominance of the fur trade of the continent.

"He carried the idea to Washington. 'I considered it a great public acquisition,' President Jefferson stated later, 'the commencement of a settlement on that point of the western coast of America . . .'

"American free trappers and traders west of the Mississippi were quite as jealous of Astor's company as they were of the Northwest men. In 1809, Manuel Lisa, one of the ablest of the Missouri traders, organized the St. Louis-Missouri Fur company, known historically as the Missouri Fur company.

"It is difficult to understand why Astor didn't effect a combination with Manuel Lisa and his men. Instead, he turned to the Northwest company, to men who were Canadians, active trade enemies, who very readily might become national enemies, in the troubled state of public opinion."

For at this time relations between America and England were strained and it was apparent to every one—except Astor, who seems to have been strangely blind to the dangers threatening his enterprise—that war between the two nations was inevitable. Heedless of this fact, Astor went ahead with his plans, and on June 23, 1810, organized the Pacific Fur company, the first subsidiary of the American Fur company, with a capital stock of $200,000, all of which he furnished. Personal risks, however, were to be borne by ten partners, five of whom were former Northwest company factors—Alexander McKay, Donald McKenzie, Duncan McDougal, David Stuart, and his nephew, Robert Stuart. Another was Wilson Price Hunt, a native of New Jersey, who was to be Astor's chief agent and represent him in the establishment of the post on the Pacific.

Astor's plan was to send two expeditions west, one by land and one by sea, with the expectation that they would arrive on the Columbia the following year at about the same time. Hunt was to lead the expedition overland and for the ocean voyage he secured the ship, the Tonquin, and placed in command of it Jonathan Thorn, a lieutenant in the United States navy, then on leave of absence. As it turned out both choices were unfortunate. Hunt had no western experience to qualify him for such a perilous overland journey and Thorn was a "petty tyrant and a martinet."

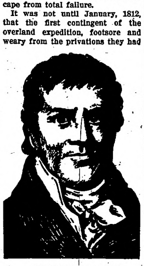
Almost from the beginning of the voyage of the Tonquin there was friction between Thorn and Astor's Canadian partners. By the time they reached the Columbia they were on the verge of mutiny. Thorn hurried the Astor men in their selection of a site for their fort and in unloading the tools to build it and a part of their supplies. Then accompanied by McKay, the most experienced of the Northwest men, he sailed away north to get ahead of the British rivals in trading with the Alaska Indians.

Despite McKay's warnings about letting too many Indians aboard at one time, Thorn persisted in this dangerous practice. One day the irascible captain became angered at the Indians and struck one of their chiefs. The next day the red men came swarming on the ship again, ostensibly to trade, but in reality to avenge the insult to their leader. There was a sudden attack and Thorn and McKay were killed at the first onslaught. A few survivors managed to beat off the savages and took refuge below decks. The next morning the Indians came back to plunder the ship. Suddenly there was a loud explosion and the sea was covered with fragments of the ship and parts of human bodies both red and white. The crew of the Tonquin had sold their lives dearly.

The loss of the Tonquin with the greater part of the trading supplies and ammunition intended for the new trading post was an almost irreparable loss. When news of the tragedy came back to Astoria, the men there knew that the only thing for them to do was to hang on and await the coming of the overland expedition.

Autumn passed, and still no sign of Hunt and his men. Despite the assistance of experienced men, such as Donald McKenzie and Ramsey Crooks, formerly associated with Lisa's Missouri Fur company, Hunt's poor leadership had resulted in innumerable delays and a narrow escape from total failure.

It was not until January, 1812, that the first contingent of the overland expedition, footsore and weary from the privations they had undergone, arrived at Astoria. During the next month some more straggled in.



JOHN JACOB ASTOR

That summer the United States and Great Britain went to war, but it was not until the following December that news of the conflict reached Astoria, and it was brought by representatives of the Northwest company. In the meantime Astor had been pleading with President Madison to send a warship to protect his outpost on the banks of the Columbia and help hold that region for the Americans. But Madison was too harassed with more pressing problems near at hand, and Astor's plea went unheeded.

Eventually his partners in the Pacific enterprise sold the property to the Northwest company at a heavy sacrifice to the firm, although they made good terms for themselves with the Canadian company, to which they had once belonged. "The Astor enterprise was at an end . . . The ultimate responsibility for the failure of the enterprise rests on Astor himself, who entrusted the carrying out of the undertaking to a group of men almost all of whom were British subjects and who abandoned him when confronted with the crisis of war."

The Astoria experiment had cost him dearly. He lost $800,000 in the venture, but as his biographer says, "he lost without whimpering, a sum in excess of the fortunes of all except perhaps a score of individual Americans in 1815; nobody else saw the vision he glimpsed, however imperfectly, and nobody else was willing to undertake the job after he failed at it. But for his blind stumbling effort, our frontier north of California might conceivably have terminated at the line of the Rockies.

"The Astoria venture might have furnished material for a splendid national saga. As matters fell out, the best we can say for it is that it dramatized Oregon for our people, fixing in the memories of a busy generation the fact that our flag had flown on the Pacific coast."

After the War of 1812 ended, the ownership of the Pacific Northwest was a subject for heated controversy between England and America. A treaty signed in 1818 provided for joint occupation for a period of ten years. In 1846, as a result of the cry of "54-40 or Fight!" another treaty was made which established the claim of the United States to the Columbia river region and the American flag once more floated over Astoria, never to be lowered again.

BOULDER MARKING THE SITE OF ASTORIA

The inscription reads: "Site of Original Settlement of Astoria. Erection of a fort was begun April 12, 1811, by the thirty-three members of the Astor party who sailed around Cape Horn in the ship Tonquin and established here the famous fur-trading post which was the first American settlement west of the Rocky Mountains. Placed by Astoria chapter, D. A. R., October 6, 1924."

MELANCHOLY SONG LEADS 18 TO TAKE THEIR OWN LIVES

"Sorrowful Sunday" Is Banned in Budapest After Sunday Epidemic.

Chicago.—"Sorrowful Sunday" is now a banned song in Budapest—a song of death. Hungarian orchestra leaders shake their heads when it is mentioned.

Its haunting melody, its bitter words, have driven 18 persons, disappointed in love, to commit suicide.

Frank J. Kovach, Hungaian radio entertainer who has broadcast the song a few times from a local station, has supplied what is believed to be the only copy extant in the United States. He brought it back with him from a recent trip to Budapest.

Now that so many persons there have ended their lives after hearing it, Mr. Kovach understands why he found "Sorrowful Sunday" so depressing—and why he did not care to continue broadcasting it.

Tried to Forget It.

From the time of the first suicide, Budapest orchestra leaders have tried to forget the song. But requests of patrons cannot be ignored.

Joseph Keller was the eighteenth to take his life. He asked an orchestra to play the mournful dirge—and fell dead at the leader's feet, clutching a note asking that 1,000 flowers be placed on his bier.

Then police acted. They ordered that the song never be played again in Budapest. But that order cannot stop the phonograph records, whose sale is reported to have been phenomenal.

Housemaids Stab Selves.

Several of the victims have shot themselves while listening to the record. Two fired bullets into their hearts as Hungarian gypsies strummed the song on their guitars.

Two housemaids heard the music in the drawing rooms of the families that employed them, and ended their lives with daggers.

Kovach, who was director of the first Hungarian air program broadcast from Chicago, translated the words into English:

Sorrowful Sunday, I waited for you, my dearest.
With hundreds of flowers and church prayers.
With dreams gone astray, Sunday before noon.
My own carriage of anguish returned without you.
Since then my Sundays have been sorrowful.
Tears are my drink and sorrow my bread.
Sorrowful Sunday.

On my last Sunday, dearest, again I will await you.
There will be a priest, a coffin, a shroud-covered bier.
Again flowers will await you.
Under the blooming trees my journey will be the last;
My eyes will be open so I can see you for the last time.
Don't be afraid of my eyes, because even in death they idolize you.
On my last Sunday.

Man Escapes Death Four Times in a Few Seconds

New York.—Charles Nundorff, forty-seven years old, of Babylon, N. Y., escaped death in a smashup, by electric shock, by explosion, and by fire all within a few seconds.

His coupe was struck by a Long Island railroad train at a crossing near Babylon. The machine was hurled against the third rail of an adjoining track, overturning as it went. Current from the rail caused the gasoline tank to explode, enveloping the wreckage in flames.

Nundorff retained presence of mind enough to smash a rear window of the car and drag himself out before the flames reached him. A short time later, while the train crew stood helplessly by, believing him trapped in the burning wreckage, he was seen wandering in a daze in a field alongside the railroad right of way.

He suffered concussion of the brain and severe burns about the head, face and arms.

World Output of Gold Is Highest in History

New Haven, Conn.—The world's rate of gold production is now at the highest point in history, according to a report by Dr. Adolph Knopf, professor of geology at Yale university here.

During 1934 the precious metal mined totaled 27,475,000 ounces, he said. That is equivalent to slightly more than $900,000,000. The low point in gold mining was reached in 1922, he said, adding:

"More than half the annual supply of newly mined gold since that time has come from South Africa, from the world's greatest gold field, the Rand."

Clock Collection Shows Trends Through History

Boston.—James Conlon, a clock maker for 35 years, has a clock collection that depicts their progress through history.

He has Quaker clocks, grandfather clocks, cable and wooden clocks, ones that tick on monotonously and some that have two-octave chimes.

The Quaker timepiece is called the "coffin clock" because of its construction—a long wooden case with only a simple wooden scroll and a chaste metal ornament on the outside.

Conlon's wooden clocks probably were made in Holland or Germany about the Seventeenth century.

THE FERRY-MORSE SEED BREEDING INSTITUTE knows its business from the ground up

You can depend on Ferry's seeds to produce true to type and quality wherever you live—in any climate. How can we say this? Because we conduct over 50,000 tests annually, to make sure they will grow. Over 9000 tests to make sure of their quality. And that's just part of the continuous activity at our Rochester, Mich., and Salinas, Cal., stations. For 80 years this work has progressed—improving and maintaining the established quality of vegetable and flower seeds.

We develop our foundation stock at the stations. It is then used for seed production on our farms or under our supervision. The resulting seed is sold only after tests have shown that it is of proper quality and germination. You can buy Ferry seeds today in your own neighborhood, many for as little as 5c a packet.

Write for a free copy of our Home Garden Catalog to help you plan your purchases from the Ferry display in your local stores. Ferry-Morse Seed Co., Detroit and San Francisco.

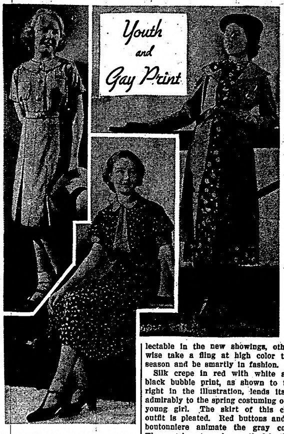
Smart Silk Prints for Young Girls

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



FOR as refreshing and lovely a threesome as ever fancy can picture, we suggest the alliance of springtime, youth and gay silk print. In the new season's style parade it is very evident that designers of young-girl fashions are all enthusiasm over joyous colorful printed silk crepes and silk taffetas.

Agreed that pretty young girls and happy bright prints belong together, the next logical step is to plan the wardrobe of Miss Sweet Sixteen and her younger sisters accordingly. To secure satisfaction in selection of a voguish silk print for the junior miss be sure that it be as practical as it is attractive. Meaning, one should choose from standpoint of wearability as well as intrigue of color and patterning. See to it that the silk you are buying is that sterling it will not pull at the seams or crumple because of artificial weighting. Only good silks can be depended upon to dry-clean like new, while many of them may be tubbed with perfect confidence in a happy outcome. Which accounts for an ever increasing demand for pure dye all-silk prints instead of shoddy weaves that make a grand "first appearance" and then begin to lose their glamor from the day they are worn. More and more women are coming to realize the economy of getting the best.

Printed silk crepe is a favorite for practical daytime wear. The key to silk prints for spring and summer is color in vivid, virile hues as inspired by Van Gogh, celebrated Spanish painter. Of course if pastels are your choice you will find them most delectable in the new showings, otherwise take a fling at high color this season and be smartly in fashion.

Silk crepe in red with white and black bubble print, as shown to the right in the illustration, lends itself admirably to the spring costuming of a young girl. The skirt of this chic outfit is pleated. Red buttons and a boutonniere animate the gray coat. The coat is extremely practical in that it can be worn as a separate wrap, and a high-style wrap it will be, for gray is a most talked of color. Gray shoes, gray hats, gray weaves, gray summer furs are made a feature in many fashion previews.

It is indeed a dainty silken frock which the smiling young miss to the left in the group is wearing. Tiny crossed golf clubs designfully pattern this simply tailored silk crepe frock. Novel patterning distinguishes the new silks. Most amusing and very smart are the silks with little animal figures, flying birds, music notes and the newest is vegetable prints with of course a comprehensive showing of florals. Tiny floweret print crepes are charming for little girls. White crochet buttons give an exclusive handmade touch to the cunning dress pictured.

Before the season is far spent every young girl will be coveting a bolero costume such as are outstandingly fashionable at present. So see to it that the young girl's wardrobe includes a bolero outfit to wear in the spring style parade. Prints made up in bolero fashion are a "last word" in swank. The model which the little lady seated in the foreground is wearing is made of printed taffeta. The blouse of French blue silk crepe is gathered to the skirt. The jacket is removable and the collar and cuffs of the blouse are worn outside. Notice the short puffed sleeves of the jacket. The jacket, either Eton, bolero or of basque with a peplum persuasion made of printed taffeta worn with a plain skirt is a high fashion for spring.

JACKET BLOUSE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The blouse that looks like a jacket, made of gay print and worn with a monotone skirt for striking contrast, is a foremost fashion this season. Tailored, yet withal delightfully feminine, is the model pictured. It is made of a Sumatra cotton print and its tropical coloring is fascinating. The band-collar ends in a little tab tie. Similar banding finishes the full short puff sleeves. Wear the blouse tucked inside or out over the skirt—the new bolero suits call for the former.

Concealed Buttons

The coat with fly-front (buttons concealed under a stitched panel of cloth) is a new idea for spring. One particularly good model of this type comes in soft navy blue woolen.

Hunting Cap Hats

Hunting caps have given the inspiration for new Paris hats. They come in flat fur or velvet.

THREE-PIECE SUIT HOLDS HIGH PLACE

Because it is smart and practical, the three-piece suit has always held a high place in the feminine wardrobes. Outstanding in this mode is an attractive ensemble of soft wool in small checks of biege and wine red. Four patch pockets, cut on the bias, trim the tailored jacket which is styled with erect revers and a belt of wine red leather.

The knee-length overcoat is cut on swagger lines with mannish revers. With the ensemble is worn a red velour hat, wine and beige silk scarf and other accessories of wine red.

New Petit Point Luggage Recalls Old Carpet Bags

Reminiscent of the carpet bag our forefathers carried are the modern pieces of petit point luggage.

These bags, fashioned from petit point and leather, are light enough to please the airplane traveler and handsome enough to delight the most fastidious. Incidentally, a petit point make-up and overnight case harmonizes nicely with any other type of luggage.

You might keep this in mind the next time you start out to buy gifts.

Newest Type Shirtwaist to Wear With Spring Suit

While it contrives to maintain a skirtwaist aspect, the newest type to wear with the spring tailored suit, takes on beguilingly feminine lace edging and frills. Those with bosom fronts formed row-and-row of tiny frills or lace edging are favorites. They have youthful turnover collars either pleated or with round corners and lace-edged. The very latest in sleeves is the short puff with bandings of lace or pleated sheer.

Angel Robes

Some of the novelties featured in the fall openings in Paris were long monk's capes, angel robe evening gowns and floating Grecian draperies.

FLOYD GIBBONS Adventurers' Club

Hello, Everybody!

"A Grave in Russia"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Famous Headline Hunter.

THIS is the story of why Donia Santanovsky of Bronx, N. Y., came to America. It is also the story of why Donia is afraid of snow. That's a funny sort of fear, especially as Donia came here from Russia where they have plenty of that cold, white stuff that powders the earth in winter.

But then, if you'd gone through what Donia did, over there in the little village of Shulac, near the city of Kiev—well—maybe you'd be afraid of snow, too. I know that if it had happened to me, I'd move down on the Equator where I'd never even have to think of the doggone stuff.

In the winter of 1919 Donia lived in that little village of Shulac that I just mentioned. She lived there alone with her mother, for her father had been killed in the World war.

The Times Were Hard, Even for Russia.

Those were bad times in Russia. The Czarist government had fallen, and there was little real law in the land. Not much order, either. Roving bands pillaged the country. Bandits were everywhere.

And worst of all were the Cossacks, those half savage soldiers of the former czar. Wherever they went they robbed and terrorized. Especially they terrorized the Jews wherever they found them.

That, of course, was nothing new. Even under the czars there had been anti-Jewish riots, most of them instigated and carried on by these same Cossacks. Now, though, they were even less restrained than they had been in the old days of the monarchy. Jews were robbed, beaten, tortured and killed. They have a name for those slaughters over there. They call them "pogroms."

"The Cossacks Are Coming" Was Bad News.

Donia and her mother lived in constant fear of these pogroms. They were the only Jewish family in the neighborhood—the only one within a radius of five miles about their little village. And one night, as Donia lay in bed with a high fever there came an ominous knocking at the door. When Donia's mother opened it she saw a peasant, shaking with fear, who cried out the dreaded warning, "The Cossacks are coming."

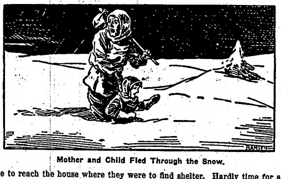
Donia's mother became pale with terror. Donia started to cry. She was only six years old then—not much more than a baby. But the Cossacks didn't spare even children when they were out on their savage forays.

Fever or no fever, Donia was taken out of bed. Her mother wrapped her in some blankets and, dragging her by the hand, started for the house of a Christian neighbor where they could hide until the Cossacks had gone.

It was a bitter cold night. It had been snowing steadily for days. It was hard going through the drifts, and the neighbor's house was a mile away. But Donia's mother hurried on, going as fast as the drifts would let her, and dragging little Donia along by the hand.

They Seek Refuge in the Frozen Tundras.

They had almost reached their destination when they heard the beat of horses' hoofs far up the road. The Cossacks were on them! There wasn't time to reach the house where they were to find shelter. Hardly time for anything at all. Donia's mother looked around for a place to hide. The bare, treeless landscape stretched away, bleak and shelterless. There was no place to hide but one—and that might mean death for little fever-stricken Donia.



Mother and Child Fled Through the Snow.

There wasn't any choice. Better an easy death than the tortures of the Cossacks. Better a death from pneumonia than the fiendish cruelty of the horsemen who were riding toward them. Donia's mother got down on her knees and began scooping a hole in the snowdrift at the side of the road. She tore cloth from her skirt and put it over their faces so they could breathe. Then she put Donia in the hole she had scooped out, lay down beside her and began covering them both with snow.

They Hide Under the Cossacks' Very Eyes.

They had no sooner finished than the Cossacks rode up. They came right up to the spot where Donia and her mother lay buried in the snow—and stopped! Mother and daughter held their breaths. Had they been discovered? Had the sharp eyes of the Cossacks read the marks and prints in the snow?

But no. The Cossacks, it seems, hadn't noticed their hiding place. They had just stopped to talk. For endless minutes they chattered while Donia and her mother wondered how long they'd have to lie there motionless under that cold blanket of snow.

Time dragged on. Donia's mother felt that she was freezing. Donia long since had stiffened and lost consciousness at her mother's side. Then, at last, the Cossacks climbed back on their horses. Hoofbeats rattled off down the road.

The Cossacks had gone—but it seemed to Donia's mother that they had gone too late. Her little girl, all stiff and blue, lay motionless in the snow bank. She picked her up and carried her to the neighbor's house, convinced that she was dead.

But Donia wasn't dead. She lived to tell us her story. And soon after that escape she and her mother came to America. They didn't want any more experiences like that—no more adventures with Cossacks, and with the cold snows of Russia.

Matthias Hohner, Maker of the First Harmonica

Matthias Hohner, the father of the harmonica, was born at Trossingen, in the province of Baden, in 1833. At the time, the few peasants who lived in the village went out daily to work in their fields and were just able to scrape together a meager existence from the already worn-out soil, and the village was just like many thousand other villages throughout Europe. The only handwork possible was clock-making, though the section renowned for its clock-making lies farther north, and the clock-makers of Trossingen had no better success than the farmers, because they had no market for their clocks.

Matthias Hohner was the son of a clock-maker and learned the trade from his father. For many years he was as poor as his neighbors. But he possessed several qualities rare among easy-going South Germans; a strong will, stubborn determination, unlimited vitality, the ability to think quickly and shrewdly; and, in addition to these, an able and helpful wife. In 1827 a Viennese clock-maker fastened some rough strips of metal to a wooden base so that when one blew on them they gave out tones. The instrument was primitive—no covering for the metal tongs, no clear and harmonious tones, and no possibilities of being used in any other way than as a sort of noisy whistle, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly.

Mathias Hohner heard of this insignificant invention. He set out to make a similar instrument for himself, having the idea that the metal strips might be filed to various thicknesses and lengths and thus make a chromatic scale possible.

While working on his instrument he discovered that constant blowing was not so practical, and he decided to fasten alternate strips at the top instead of at the bottom so that the player might inhale as well as blow, thus making the playing of the instrument merely a process of controlled breathing. Then he designed a protective covering for the fragile vibrating tongues of his invention, and the first harmonica was complete.

Mrs. Wakelin laughed. Then yawned—and for 90 days she continued yawning at intervals of four or five seconds. She is still yawning—but at longer intervals. Mrs. Wakelin has not lacked advice. She has received an enormous "yawn" mail and letters are still arriving at the rate of 40 a day.

TOMB OF SAINT IS RIFLED BY BANDITS

Vienna Church Is Invaded by Impious Robbers.

Vienna, Austria.—The tomb of St. Josaphat, a Roman Catholic saint, in Vienna's St. Barbara church, has been pillaged.

The glass shrine on the altar, containing the relics of the saint, was broken by burglars, and a heavy golden chain with a cross, the pious donation of Archduke William, was stolen.

Josaphat was a Catholic Basilian monk who became archbishop of Polock, eastern Poland, in the early Sixteenth century.

In 1623 he was killed by rival Russian Pravoslavian priests in a fight between Catholic Ukrainians and Pravoslav Russians.

The tomb of Josaphat, who was beatified 20 years after his death and subseqently canonized, soon became the center of pilgrimage for Roman Catholic Ukrainians.

During the war between Sweden and Russia in the late Seventeenth century, which largely was fought in that region, the bones of the saint had to be moved frequently to thwart thieves and desecrators.

After the war they were restored to their original shrine in Polock, but did not remain there long.

When Czar Peter the Great, in his efforts to suppress an uprising of the Ukrainians, threatened to burn the relics of their national saint, a Prince Radziwill secretly transfered them in 1705 to Biala, where he founded a Basilian monastery and a church in hoonr of the saint.

There they rested for more than a century and a half in a beautiful silver coffin under the main altar.

The coffin disappeared during the Polish uprising against the czars in the early 60s of the last century.

In 1917 when the district was occupied by Austrian troops an old peasant appeared before the Austrian commander and told him that the saint's bones had been immured under the Biala church.

There they were found, but without the silver casket, and Emperor Charles had them transferred to St. Barbara's church in Vienna.

A wealthy Canadian family of French extraction by which the saint was held in particular veneration provided the new silver and glass case, and Archduke William, who was a pretender to the throne of Ukrainia, gave the golden chain and cross which were stolen so recently.

Talking Kettle Mystery Solved by Repair Man

Portland, Ore.—The ghastliest crime thriller of them all couldn't hold a candle to Portland's "mystery of mysteries." For instance:

Suddenly, in the dead of night, the lights would flicker, glow brightly for a few minutes and then slowly fade out.

The teakettle talked.

And worst of all, the washbowl in the bathroom whispered!

It looked like another "haunted house" was about to join the list, when a "radio doctor" saved the day.

He noticed a similarity between the teakettle's voice and the voice of an amateur radio operator next door. A check of the teakettle's conversation and the operator's broadcast verified his suspicions. A further check revealed the queer goings-on occurred only when the operator was transmitting on 80 meters.

The radio doctor's explanation was a bit technical, but left no doubt as to the cause of the odd incidents.

Aqueduct 242 Miles Long Has 92 Miles of Tunnels

The entire Colorado river aqueduct is 242 miles long, but in the system there are, along the main route of the aqueduct, 29 tunnels with a total length of 92 miles. Nine additional tunnels, with a combined length of 15 miles, are planned for the distributing system. There will be 52 sections of concrete conduits, 98 sections of concrete-lined canal and 146 inverted syphons. By this aqueduct, which has been called the greatest domestic water supply system in the history of engineering, water will be carried from the Colorado river into southern California.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

For Example

The case before the court had been going on for many days, and concerned a claim that involved wearisome technicalities. Things were not improved when a counsel made a speech of unnecessary length. He said:

"Then, my lord, comes the question of bags; they might have been full bags or half-full bags; or, again, my lord, they might have been empty bags."

"Or," interrupted the sorely tried judge, "they might have been wind bags."

Easily Adjusted

Screeves had written a play, and it was his first. Incidentally at the same time it was the worst thing his friend the producer had read for some years.

"Sorry, my boy," remarked the producer, "but-er I couldn't do this—it's too long for the stage."

"But, I say," expostulated Screeves, "surely a little thing like that could be fixed up—couldn't you lengthen the stage a bit?"

No Moon or Music

By PHILIP L. KETCHUM

WNU Service.

HE WAS thirty-five and very successful. Women had not played any part in his life. He hadn't had the time.

She was thirty-one and not at all successful in terms of money. But she was rather well satisfied with the life that she was living. Her job paid her enough to take a trip each summer and she loved to travel. For ten years men had not played any part in her life. When she was twenty-one she had been madly in love with a man who had been killed and after she had recovered from the shock she discovered that men had become unnecessary to her happiness.

They met in the most casual manner at a mountain inn forty miles from Denver. When introduced, they laughed about their names, Tom Brown and Mary Smith. They decided that people with such common names could never become much of a problem.

The first day they went riding. That night they dined together and afterwards sat on the porch and talked. They discovered many things in common—books, plays, travel and music. They went to their rooms early, saying good-night very properly and planning to climb some mountain the next day.

They started but never reached the top. Each admitted that the horseback ride the day before had been too much and so they turned back and sought a shady, grassy spot. They found one on the bank of a rushing mountain stream and the woman lay down at the foot of a tree. The man sprawled out beside her. They didn't talk much.

The man thought: "I've never felt so absolutely at peace in my life. I've never before been so near to pure happiness. I don't think that I'm even interested in what's happening at the office. I just wish that I could feel like this forever. I wonder why it is?" And then he looked over at the woman and frowned.

The woman thought: "What has happened to me? I feel positively miserable. I didn't sleep well last night and I've lost all zest for the rest of my trip. I'm not interested in going on to Yellowstone, though I've thought about it for a year." She saw the man frowning at her and looked away.

They went back to the inn early and had rather an uncomfortable dinner together. They didn't sit out on the porch that night. The woman said that she had a headache and the man said that he had to write some letters. He went to his room and tried to write but after a while gave it up and went outside. He smoked his pipe and wondered what the woman was doing. He said to himself: "Tom Brown, you have no business going crazy about some woman. You have a lot of work ahead. Act your age." Then he spent an hour thinking of some of the things the woman had said, of the way she walked, of the way her hair was combed and of the way she twisted her lips when she was amused.

After breakfast the next morning he said to her: "Let's take a walk. I want to talk to you."

She looked a little startled and hesitated but he took her arm and led her to a little clearing among the pines.

Stopping there the man said rather gruffly: "Look here, Mary Smith. I'm a grain broker and it's a tough game but I'm getting ahead. I have no time for a woman."

Mary Smith nodded her head. She gripped her hands tight. "I understand," she said. "I feel the same way. I'm perfectly happy with my job. There isn't any place in my life for a man."

The man said: "We've got to be sensible about this. We're both old enough not to be swept away by any sentimental emotion. It's nine o'clock in the morning, a sensible hour. There isn't any moon or music."

"No, no moon or music," Mary Smith repeated.

For another moment they stood facing each other, then moved forward. The man's arms went around the woman, hungrily. He held her close to his breast and his lips found hers. But he was not holding her any tighter than she was holding him.

They spent two weeks together. They rode horseback, climbed mountains, danced, talked and sat silent for hours. They told each other foolish, ridiculous experiences from their past lives about which each was so jealous. They were frankly, openly, in love, but they didn't talk about when they would get married. They were determined to be sensible.

Suddenly, at the end of the two weeks, Mary Smith said that she must return to New York. She told the man only half an hour before making her train. He begged her to change her mind, to wait at least another day, but she said: "No, Tom. It's better this way. This has been a perfect experience. I'll never forget it."

White of lip, the man said: "I'll see you some day in New York."

She nodded. "Of course."

After she had gone the man sat on the porch for a long time, thinking. Then a sudden realization banished all doubts and fears. Half aloud, he said: "From the very beginning we talked of nothing but the past. We knew that we would have to face the future together. But like two fool kids we parted without even exchanging addresses.

He rushed inside to pack. If he took an airplane he could catch Mary at Omaha.

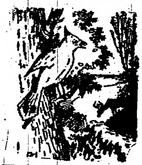
BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT IS RECKLESS

IN HIS search for the new stranger who had come to the Green Forest, Lightfoot the Deer was wholly reckless. He no longer stole like a gray shadow from thicket to thicket as he had done when searching for Miss Daintyfoot. He bounded along, careless of how much noise he made. From time to time he would stop to whistle a challenge and to clash his horns against the trees and stamp the ground with his feet.



"There Is Going to Be Some Great Excitement Here When Lightfoot Discovers This Fellow," Thought Sammy.

After such exhibitions of anger he would pause to listen, hoping to hear some sound which would tell him where the stranger was. Now and then he found the stranger's tracks, and from them he knew that this stranger was doing just what he had been doing, seeking to find the beautiful Miss Daintyfoot. Each time he found these signs, Lightfoot's rage increased.

Of course it didn't take Sammy Jay long to discover what was going on. There is little that escapes those sharp eyes of Sammy Jay. As you know, he had early discovered the game of hide and seek Lightfoot had been playing with the beautiful young visitor who had come down to the Green Forest from the Great Mountain. Then, by chance, Sammy had visited the Laughing Brook just as the big stranger had come down there to drink. For once, Sammy had kept his tongue still. "There is going to be excitement here when Lightfoot discovers this fellow," thought Sammy. "If they ever meet, and I have a feeling that they will, there is going to be a fight worth seeing. I must pass the word around."

So Sammy Jay hunted up his cousin, Blacky the Crow, and told him what he had discovered. Then he hunted up Bobby Coon and told him. He saw Unc' Billy Possum sitting in the doorway of his hollow tree and told him. He discovered Jumper the Hare sitting under a little hemlock tree and told him. Then he flew over to the dear old Brier Patch to tell Peter Rabbit. Of course he told Drummer the Woodpecker, Tommy Tit the Chickadee, and Yank Yank the Nuthatch, who were over in the Old Orchard, and they at once hurried to the Green Forest, for they couldn't think of missing anything so exciting as would be the meeting between Lightfoot and the big stranger from the Great Mountain.

Sammy didn't forget to tell Paddy the Beaver, but it was now news to Paddy. Paddy had seen the big stranger on the edge of his pond early the night before.

Of course Lightfoot knew nothing about all this. His one thought was to find the big stranger and drive him from the Green Forest, and so he continued his search tirelessly.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

DESSERTS NEW AND OLD

SUNDAY desserts are the kind that can be made the day before and give mother a real day of rest. The following are some which will be enjoyed by the whole family:

Peanut Brittle Parfait.

Take one-third of a cupful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and blend well in a saucepan. When smooth add one-fourth of a cupful of water and cook, stirring constantly. This makes a sirup. Beat the yolks of two eggs until light in the top of a double boiler, then add the sirup gradually and beat until light and fluffy. Set aside to cool. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff, add a pinch of salt and a scant cupful of ground peanut brittle. Mix well and pack in ice and salt or freeze in a mechanical refrigerator.

Chocolate Blanc Mange.

Soak three tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for ten minutes. Add one-half cupful of sugar to a melted chocolate candy bar; add one cupful of scalded milk. Cook until smooth, then add three more cupfuls of milk, the soaked gelatin and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Stir until well mixed, remove from the fire and pour into a mold to chill.

Porto Rican Baked Bananas.

Select underripe bananas; put them without removing the skins into a very hot oven to bake until the skins burst. Serve in a folded napkin—do not remove the skins until the moment of eating. Serve with plenty of butter.

Alabama French Dressing.

To the french dressing add two tablespoonfuls of ketchup, four drops of tabasco sauce, two tablespoonfuls of chopped olives and mix well. Serve on any green or vegetable salad.

Banana Ice Cream.

Scald one quart of thin cream, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. When cold add a pint of chilled cream and freeze. When the cream is partly frozen add one and one-half cupfuls of banana pulp put through a ricer with the juice of one and one-half lemons. Finish freezing and let stand well packed to ripen for several hours.

TRY THIS TRICK

COIN, HAT AND GLASS

A DERBY hat is resting upon a large glass. The presence of the hat makes it impossible for any object to enter the glass.

Taking several pennies, the magician shows them in his right hand, while he steadies the hat with his left. He flings the coins into the hat. One coin travels straight through the crown and arrives, with a clink, in the tumbler.

Hat, coins and glass may be examined. How, then, was the trick accomplished? Very simple—so simple, in fact, that you can learn it with but little practice.

Wedge a coin between the hat and the glass rim, where it stays hidden, before the trick. As your right hand flings the coin, your left—steadying the hat—raises just a trifle and the hidden coin clinks into the tumbler.

MORE TO DO

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SAY not tonight that you are through;
There will be something more to do
Tomorrow morning. Only they
Are ever through to whom the day
Suggests no deed that may be done
Tomorrow with the rising sun.

For those who do the things worth while
Are not the ones who end a mile
And see no new mile on ahead:
There is a valley yet to tread
Beyond the crest of ev'ry hill
To those who follow heaven's will.

We're never through while there's a thing
To do, while there's a song to sing,
A pray'r to utter, or a friend
To hearten even at the end,
Yes, even deeds God understands
The old can do with folded hands.

For, be they little, be they great,
Each morning our new tasks await,
A word to say, a smile to give
That makes life easier to live.
How young or old, or I or you,
There will be something more to do.

FAVOR LIP-READING OVER FINGER TALK

Hard of Hearing Find Method More Efficient.

Denver.—The sign language and symmetry of its movements when spoken by an expert, is rapidly giving way to the more efficient method of communication by lip reading.

Rev. Eugene J. Gehl of Kenosha, Wis., who speaks in both silent mediums as well as through the spoken word, explained the advantage of lip reading while in Denver recently conducting a mission.

Father Gehl is a missionary for St. John's Institute for the Deaf in St. Francis, Wis., who has become a master orator in sign language, voice and lips during 25 years of work among the deaf.

Beautiful Gestures.

"The sign language of deaf mutes is no longer so important as it once was," he said, "but it is beautiful. Those experienced with its symbolism and mechanics can produce every oratorical effect the voice can achieve.

"Deaf persons will not 'listen' to a speech by a man whose gestures are clumsy and jerky. Through many years the sign language has reached a high point of systematized development, although it is being replaced by the more scientific lip reading."

Words Seldom Spelled.

More than 1,400 accredited symbols for words and ideas, in addition to a complete alphabet, make up the sign language, he revealed.

"But the expert seldom has to spell out his words," he remarked.

"The test of eloquence in the sign language is the speaker's ability to make smooth transitions between his gestures and group symbols into the units required by the thought. A change of pace in the manipulation of the hands is every bit as effective as a change of pace in speaking.

"The space through which the gesture moves corresponds to voice volume. Where the ordinary speaker would shout, the sign orator moves his hands and arms in a wider sphere."

Climate Is Blamed for Peculiarities of Accent

Boston.—Another champion of the Yankee twang, the Southern accent and the Western drawl has launched a broadside against those who would standardize English enunciation.

Prof. William G. Hoffman of Boston university's college of business administration, declares that speech unification is a defi to the elements, for climate has much to do with controlling dialects.

The cold, raw climate of New England, said Professor Hoffman, is the basis of the twangy dialect of the rural sections. The warm, balmy South has given a characteristic warm fluency to the speech in that part of the country. And the dryness of the West plays its part in affecting the speech of the cow-puncher.

But the sparkle of the various intonations, although it still exists, is being slowly dulled, said Professor Hoffman.

He agreed with the findings of Dr. Hans Kurath, Brown university, whose extensive study revealed that formal education, newspaper, radio and the theater have brought about a progressive modification of American speech.

Figures on Fires Form Hobby of Antique Dealer

Des Moines, Iowa.—The clang of the fire bell means another entry in his notebook to Earle L. Robinson, fifty-four years old, an antique dealer, whose hobby is compiling and interpreting statistics of fire losses.

The diminutive storekeeper is so intensely interested in his long columns of figures that what to others may seem a dull job is to Robinson an exciting pastime.

His favorite company is Des Moines' No. 11, and he appears before the city council to urge new equipment, armed with tables and statistics. Besides his continual amassing of figures, his hobby has designated him as a sort of traffic policeman in his district when the fire alarm sounds.

Robinson binds his charts into book form. They include the number of alarms, where they are given, the size of water mains in the district, the fire hazards, and the number of hospitals and schools in the neighborhood.

He has never been a member of a fire department. "I've never had a fire and I've never been burnt," he says.

Student 'Grubstake' Doubles in 28 Years

Berkeley, Calif.—A "grubstake" loan fund of $349 donated to the University of California in 1908 has now grown to $612.91. The original loan was brought to President Benjamin Ide Wheeler in 1908 by a messenger from some unidentified person who wanted it to be used to "grubstake" some student through college.

The original amount was $350, but President Wheeler gave the messenger $1. The remaining $349 was kept invested when it wasn't "grubstaking" some student, until it has reached its present proportions.

Farmful of Snakes

Bennington, Mich.—St. Patrick would have found a much more fertile field here in pioneer days for his labors against snakes than in Ireland, according to a record left by S. B. Bugbee. He reported that upon purchase of his farm in 1837 he took a short stroll and killed 40 snakes, many of them rattlers.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Continually, the new New York swallows up the old. Now the Murray Hill hotel, just about the last inn that remains a link with the past, is to be modernized. For years, it has been a Park avenue fastness of old days and old traditions despite the ever-changing pattern of the city. With its ornamental furniture, mirrors, gilt, high-ceilinged rooms and red brick, towered exterior, it was once the wonder of the hotel world. Built in 1884, one year after the Metropolitan opera house, at a cost of $1,000,000, it was the gathering place of youth, beauty, fashion and distinction of the time. In the days of its glory, the hansom cab trade from its doors ran as high as $700 a week. Included among its residents were Mark Twain, J. P. Morgan, Sr., Richard Croker, the former Tammany leader, and P. T. Barnum. The late President William McKinley had a suite there, whenever he was in New York. The Philadelphia Biddles and Drexels made annual Christmas week reservations there.

• • •

In comparison with present day prices, despite its reputation, rates in the old days at the Murray Hill were modest. Four meals and a room cost $4. They were real meals, too. An old menu lists 73 dishes from which to choose. In season, American plan guests were served with shad roe for supper every night. The inaugural dinner of former President Grover Cleveland was cooked by the hotel's chef and sent to Washington by special train. Many of the prominent guests kept private stocks of wine there. The original bar, at which cocktails were sold at two for a quarter until the World war, is still in use.

• • •

The hotel was purchased by Benjamin L. M. Bates in 1910 and for years he ran it as a sentimental venture without regard to profits. The red brick exterior was cleaned entirely by hand in 1925 and a new kitchen installed at a cost of $175,000. Mr. Bates died in December and now with the settlement of his estate, the old hotel is to change from the days of leisure to those of hustle and bustle.

• • •

Seldom indeed does beauty thwart ambition, especially in the case of a young girl. Yet there is Miss Imogene Carpenter. Her great ambition was to become a concert pianist, so she perfected herself in the works of the masters and then tried for engagements. Agents merely laughed at her —she was too pretty for concert work. So she turned from Beethoven and Liszt to hot numbers and swing music and is now pianist in the Rainbow Grill. But she is longing to get back to Bach.

• • •

This and that department: Earl Thomas, a bit of a statistician, has figured it out that the average New Yorker is five feet, seven inches in height, wears a size eight and a half shoe, prefers roast beef and hashed brown potatoes and says "Yes, dear," to his wife six times a day. . . . Alderman Peter H. Ruvolo, of Brooklyn, is reported to want to change the names of certain streets to such glistening titles as Emerald, Amber, Sapphire and Ruby. . . . Ray Perkins reports that in an antique shop on Sixth avenue, a crystal radio set with earphones is offered for sale—an indication that radio has finally come of age.

• • •

Gilbert Miller has one of those memories that retain certain things indefinitely and allow others to leak out quickly. Names are his bane. So one time while he was in London and his wife in Paris, he called her by long distance phone to obtain the name of his secretary who was in New York and whom he desired to cable.

• • •

Subway eavesdropping: "He's a lucky stiff. His mother-in-law comes to visit; she hates the sight of him so, his wife don't want him hanging 'round the house. So he gets out every night now without having to invent no alibis."

Plays in Church Called "Better Than Sermons"

Melbourne, Australia.—A church in Melbourne is to be used as a regular "theater" for religious plays if plans made by its vicar succeed. He is Father F. E. Maynard, vicar of St. Peter's church.

"People may get a greater message from seeing an appropriate religious play than from hearing many sermons," he announced. "Drama," he added, "can be used for the teaching of the Christian message far more effectively than at present."

Seized with a coughing spell recently, he coughed out a splinter the size of a toothpick, which had been lodged in his throat and never removed.

Hitler Talks With His War Lords

Chancellor Adolf Hitler (right) snapped in informal conversation with the heads of the Reich army. At the left is Lieut. Gen. Werner Von Blomberg, the minister of war. Next to him is Gen. Frieher Von Fritsch, chief of staff. With his back to the camera is General Lietman. These men are believed the motivating forces behind Germany's occupation of the Rhine in violation of the Locarno treaty.

Some Places in World Where It's Really Cold

For Instance, Regard Northeastern Siberia.

Washington. — Many a shivering American, watching his thermometer hover far below normal this winter, has thought that his frosty bedroom must be about the coldest spot on earth, or has thanked his lucky stars that he wasn't in the Antarctic with Lincoln Ellsworth.

Actually, however, many Americans might have found it considerably warmer in the Antarctic (where it was summer) than at home this winter. Ellsworth reported a temperature of only five below zero Fahrenheit one day during his flight across the South Polar continent, while in the United States some places have had temperatures down to 50 below zero.

"Even 50 below, however, is warm compared to some cold weather that has been recorded in the really frigid parts of the earth," says the National Geographic society.

Only 90 Below Zero.

"Though the winter of 1935-36 will go down in history as one of America's coldest ones, it cannot compare with the winters that visit a region of northeastern Siberia, generally recognized as the 'cold pole' of the earth.

"There, at the town of Verkhoyansk, thermometers have dropped to 90 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Devils Lake, N. D., had an average temperature of 20 degrees below zero for five weeks this winter, but Verkhoyansk has averaged as much as 58 below for the month of January in past years.

"On really cold days in Verkhoyansk, the exhaled vapor of a man's breath crystallizes into cracking needles of ice, and breathing becomes painful. Ice forms in the nostrils of horses and threatens to suffocate them.

"But though Lincoln Ellsworth found it as warm as five below zero during the last Antarctic summer, the winter in the South Polar regions is a different story. Admiral Byrd, on his lone vigil at the advanced weather observation base, during the Antarctic winter, recorded a minimum temperature of 80 below.

North and South Poles.

"Summer temperatures both at the North and South poles are much warmer than the colder days experienced in some parts of the United States this winter. When Roald Amundsen discovered the South pole in December, 1911, he reported that it was only 22 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Peary at the North pole, in April, 1909, found the temperature ranging from 11 to 30 below. Doubtless both poles are far colder in winter, but no one has visited them at that time of year.

"Any polar explorer, however, would have found it cold enough to suit him at Riverside ranger station in Yellowstone park, on February 9, 1933. On that date the official thermometer there dropped to 66 below zero Fahrenheit, the record low temperature for the United States.

"When it comes to producing real cold, mother nature is a 'piker' when compared to modern scientists. Recently, at the University of Leyden, the Netherlands, experimenters have come within a fraction of a degree of attaining 'absolute zero,' the 'coldest cold' which is set theoretically at 459.6 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

"This extreme cold is achieved by cooling a substance with the aid of liquid air, liquid hydrogen and liquid helium. Then the substance is magnetized, which heats it, and liquid helium is used to remove this heat. The substance then is demagnetized, and as a result it becomes colder still. By subjecting substances to such great cold, scientists hope to learn more about the properties and structure of matter.

"But if all this talk of great cold chills you, end the story with a few thoughts about Death Valley, California, where at times it grows so hot that thermometers have registered over 134 degrees above zero!"

Tree Produces Fruit Blend of Orange-Lemon

San Diego, Calif.—Instead of mixing orange and lemon juice for drinks in the future, it may be possible to squeeze an orange-lemon blend out of a single fruit if trees perfected by a Chula Vista rancher are adopted commercially.

James M. Ater, nicknamed the "Chula Vista Burbank" for his numerous experiments in plant breeding, has perfected what he calls a "lemor," which he says combines the flavor of the orange and the lemon into a delicious blend.

Ater has gone to the unusual length of patenting his new fruit, and is now considering crossing it with the lime to produce a still more complex product.

Explaining his method, Ater said he obtained wild orange trees and budded them with lemons.

Taking a cue from certain industrial machinery manufacturers, Ater plans to lease his trees rather than sell them if they prove feasible commercially and collect a royalty as well.

The new fruit is superior to either the orange or the lemon in keeping properties, Ater said, and will remain in good condition 18 months after being picked.

Washington.—Persons who wanted to have an easy mind paid $5,885.69 to the United States treasury last year.

By so doing they took a load off their respective chests and raised the value of the national "conscience fund" to $621,867.65. These contributors never give their names.

The "conscience fund," more prosaically known as document 126,420, was started in 1811 when an unknown individual sent $5 to the treasury of President Madison because he felt he had "defrauded the government."

Before the year was over enough money had been contributed by guilty minded persons to bolster the fund to $250 and it was launched into perpetuity.

Although there were no more contributions until 1827, every year since then, with the single exception of 1848, bad consciences have increased treasury totals.

The money is set aside as "anonymous contributions" and included in the nation's general fund.

The worst conscience the nation ever had, judging by the year's total must have been 1916 when $54,923.15 was sent in.

Contributions usually are impelled by sudden pangs of conscience and are customarily sent by persons who have used postage stamps a second time, failed to pay duties on articles, evaded income taxes, or stolen government property.

Traffic Perils Grouped Under Three Age Periods

London.—There are three five-year periods in a person's life when the risk of death is greatest, according to a statistical review by the registrar general of the 40,350,000 people of England and Wales.

These "three ages of peril" as set forth in the survey are:

Between five and ten, when children become pedestrians, but have no experience as to safety.

Between twenty and twenty-five, when young people get behind the wheel of an automobile and drive at top speed "without being restrained by a sense of responsibility."

Between seventy and seventy-five, when old people are physically unable to escape traffic dangers.

Curiously, the risk of death for women from motor accidents remained unchanged over a three-year period despite a large increase in the number of woman motorists on the highways. At the same time the risk of death for boys between ten and fifteen fell from 132 to 106 per million of population. This was counterbalanced by the risk of young men between twenty and twenty-five increasing from 365 to 393 per million.

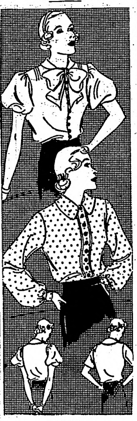
Two Lovely Blouses For Your New Suit



1850-B

Blouses have to go a long way toward giving the tailored and mannish suits a sweet and feminine appearance. The model at the top is a new lingerie blouse made of madonna blue crepe de chine and trimmed with tiny crystal buttons. Soft puff sleeves tightly banded and a fluffy bow at the throat contribute the feminine touches.

At the bottom is a most attractive shirt blouse—it has a charming Peter Pan collar and buttoned panel for the waist closing—the model is made of batiste with either short sports or long bishop sleeves.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1850-B—both blouses—is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. The top blouse requires 1⅞ yards of 35 or 39-inch material for size 16 (34), and blouse (B) requires 1¾ yards or 2½ yards with long sleeves, size 16 (34).

Half Million Farmers May Get Double Federal Benefits—New Processing Taxes Abandoned—Clements Quits as Townsend Plan Secretary.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, head of the rural resettlement administration, announced that a special committee is considering a plan under which more than half a million growers of farm products would receive double benefits from the federal government. It provides that the rural families now getting loans from Tugwell's administration to put them on their feet and keep them off the relief rolls may also receive full subsidy payments in connection with the soil conservation program now being put into operation. There are now 450,000 recipients of the Tugwell loans and the number is expected to increase to 525,000 by July 1.

R. G. Tugwell

The soil conservation subsidies are to be paid to farmers who transfer land from commercial crop production to soil conserving growths, or who resort to other "economic" farm practices. Officials said that the rehabilitation clients already are under obligation to treat their soil wisely. Before a family can obtain a rehabilitation loan it must agree to follow a farm management plan drafted by the government.

This plan stipulates that the borrower must conserve his land's fertility and grow food and feed crops for home consumption. It also includes a financial budget.

ONE of the major features of the new tax program suggested by President Roosevelt is omitted from the measure prepared by a house subcommittee and on which open hearings were begun by the ways and means committee. For political reasons it was decided that the plan for new processing taxes on farm and competing products should be abandoned. Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion for a "windfall" tax to recapture part of the refunded or unpaid AAA processing levies was accepted by the subcommittee.

A third suggestion of the President, for graduated taxes on the portions of incomes which corporations do not distribute in dividends to stockholders, was changed to provide levies on total income of corporations varied according to percentages of profits put into reserves.

The subcommittee agreed that the corporation tax rates should be so drafted as to permit corporations, particularly small ones, to build up reserves for lean years without being compelled to pay comparatively high taxes for the privilege of doing so.

The subcommittee figured on collecting some $25,000,000 from taxes on dividends going to foreigners who own stock in American corporations and $83,000,000 from temporary continuation of the capital stock and excess profits taxes.

JUST as Chairman C. Jasper Bell and his house committee were about to open their inquiry into the finances of the Townsend old age pension plan organization, Robert E. Clements, co-founder, secretary and director of the movement, resigned. He was summoned to be the first witness before the committee but said his resignation was not motivated by this, but was solely due to his opposition to political activities of other leaders of the organization. Dr. F. E. Townsend in Los Angeles expressed his "hearty approval" of Clements' action, and it was predicted other officials of the movement would follow the secretary's example.

R. E. Clements

Clements appeared before the committee with a great mass of records, ready to "account for every penny collected." Before testifying he said: "I have nothing to hide. I'm anxious to appear. I have been responsible for financing the Townsend plan. I have collected around $850,000 and the organizaton has spent about $750,000. There is still $100,000 on hand."

SEVERAL witnesses who appeared before a senate subcommittee declared that the Robinson-Patman anti-chain store bill, which has administration backing, would promote rather than curb monopolies, increase the cost and lower the standard of living, and decrease employment in whole industries.

The hearing was on the Borah-Van Nuys bill, a modification of the Robinson-Patman measure, but the witnesses particularly attacked the latter, which already has been reported favorably. The house judiciary committee reported the Utterback bill, still another modification of the Robinson-Patman measure, and a bitter fight over the proposed legislation is expected.

The Robinson-Patman bill would prohibit manufacturers from making price discriminations in favor of large quantity purchasers, through advertising allowances, service charges, brokerage fees, etc. The Borah-Nuys bill would prohibit such allowances only when they were refused to purchasers of goods of "like grade, quality, and quantity."

ONE of the big fights within the American Federation of Labor has been settled peacefully. It was for control of the building trades department. In the past, building projects have been held up by strikes growing out of arguments over which of two unions should do a certain piece of work. The peace pact provides for appointment of an impartial referee to settle such arguments.

The pact also called for J. W. Williams of the carpenters to head the reorganization department, with M. J. McDonough of the plasterers as secretary-treasurer. Each has been the leader of one of the warring factions and each has styled himself as the lawful department president.

BENITO MUSSOLINI evidently expects another European war, and in preparation for it he announced several drastic measures on the seventeenth anniversary of the founding of the Fascist party. He abolished the chamber of deputies, substituting for it a council of guilds; and he also eliminated the country's large industries, leaving the medium and small private industries in existence. This latter move, he told the council of the 22 guilds of the corporative state, was to increase the nation's economic self-sufficiency. "When and how war will come, one does not know," he said, "but the wheel of fate turns fast."

Benito Mussolini

Mussolini asserted the large industries, particularly those working for the defense of the nation, would be formed into organizations called "key industries." These, he said, "will be run directly or indirectly by the government. Some will have mixed organization."

HAVING sent Joachim von Ribbentrop back to London with a modified rejection of the four power plans for peace in western Europe, Hitler was preparing his counter proposals which British Foreign Minister Eden had requested. Meanwhile the reichsfuehrer continued his campaign tour, delivering rousing speeches in defense of his policies. Speaking in Ludwigshafen, in the heart of the remilitarized Rhineland, he said: "Those who want us to grovel on our knees before agreeing to talk with us forget we are not a tribe of savages, but a European nation looking back on thousands of years of culture.

"I stretch out my hand to France. We want peace for common sense reasons. Germany needs no more fame on the battlefield, but is now getting ready to seek laurels in the Olympic peace competition of nations. Men who relish the indecent thought of victor and vanquished are not statesmen. They must be silent when peace talks start."

Most of the continental statesmen who gathered in London to consider the Rhineland affair went home, some of them in very bad humor over the indecisive proceedings. The French, disinclined to consider any further proposals from Hitler, were urging that the French, British and Belgian general staffs get together on plans in accordance with the Locarno treaty.

IN CONNECTION with the signing of the new naval treaty by the United States, Great Britain and France, it was disclosed in London that the two first named powers have reaffirmed the 50-50 ratio for their fleets and again promised not to compete against each other in naval building. The new three power pact limits the size of battleships to 35,000 tons, retains 10,000 tons as the maximum for cruisers and provides no cruisers of that size shall be built for six years.

In the expiring Washington treaty there was an article regarding fortification of naval bases. This is not renewed in the new pact, and Japan requested information as to the future intentions of the powers. Consequently the United States, Great Britain and Japan were carrying on diplomatic conversations on that topic.

The new treaty gives the signatories certain liberty of action in the event of unforeseen naval activity by powers not signatory to the treaty. So far as America is concerned, this "escape clause" is taken to apply mainly to Japan.

FOURTEEN persons perished in Mexico's worst aviation disaster. A big trimotored plane carrying ten European tourists and four company employees crashed on the ridge between the volcanoes Popocatepetl and Ixtaccihuatl and there were no survivors to explain why it fell. Among the tourists were Prince Adolf of Schaumburg-Lippe and his wife, Princess Elisabeth.

KOKI HIROTA, the new liberal premier of Japan, declared in an interview: "While I am premier there will be no war"; and continued: "We intend to cultivate our traditional friendship with Great Britain, the United States, Russia, and other powers, thus fulfilling our great mission of stabilizing east Asia."

On the same day that Hirota made this pronouncement the soviet Russian government ordered its ambassador to Japan to lodge a strong protest following a new border engagement which Soviet advices said resulted from a Japanese attack on a Red frontier post. Fighting lasted for hours, entailing loss of life on both sides, said the reports.

FEDERAL reserve board has prescribed a 55 per cent minimum margin for purchases of stocks, the ruling becoming effective April 1 for stocks bought through brokers and May 1 for those bought through banks.

The margin regulations were made to apply only to listed securities on registered stock exchanges, thus having no effect upon the large over-the-counter market.

The maximum loan value applying to registered stocks has been fixed at 45 per cent of current market value.

WITH only one change, the house passed the senate bill to continue the Electric Home and Farm authority as a federal agency until February 1, 1937, or any earlier date decreed by the President. The authority was created to help finance sales of electrical appliances.

HENRY BOYLE SOMERVILLE, aged and retired vice admiral of the British navy, was murdered by gunmen at his residence at Castletownsend, County Cork, Irish Free State. Thrown through the door of the house was a card bearing these words:

"This British agent sent 52 Irish boys into the British army in the last few months. He will send no more."

The admiral had received previous threats because of his recruiting activities.

INTREPID citizens of scores of cities and towns in the eastern and New England states which were devastated by the unprecedented floods were digging out their homes and places of business from the mud and debris as the turbulent waters of many rivers subsided. Reconstruction and refitting began everywhere immediately, and this, as well as the relief of the suffering thousands, was aided by funds totaling more than $43,000,000 allocated by President Roosevelt before he left Washington for Florida.

Rough estimates were that the total dead in 13 states were 169; the homeless were 221,500, and the total property damage, $271,500,000. The last figure probably would be tripled if one took into account the losses from interruption to industry and trade and the stoppage of the wages of labor.

Cities along the lower Ohio were threatened as the flood waters raced down to the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico, but they had had plenty of warning and were in a measure prepared.

ISABELLA GREENWAY, the capable lady who has represented Arizona in congress since October, 1933, has announced in Tucson that she will retire from public life at the conclusion of her present term. She was first elected for the remainder of the term of Lewis Douglas, who resigned to become director of the budget, and was reelected in 1934.

Mrs. Greenway

Mrs. Greenway owns and operates several ranches in Arizona and New Mexico and a hotel in Tucson, and is also interested in some mining companies. Undoubtedly she could go back to congress without opposition, but she says she wants to devote more time to her private activities.

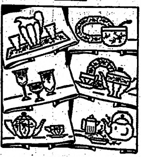
STILL refusing to appropriate $12,000,000 for the Florida ship canal, the senate passed the army bill carrying approximately $611,000,000. More than half the sum goes for the military activities of the War department.

There will be no reduction in the number of CCC camps during most of the coming fiscal year, and the enrollees will be kept up to about the 350,000 mark. This was the decision of President Roosevelt after a threatened revolt of Democratic representatives induced him to change his mind in the matter.

Senator Black, chairman of the senate lobbying committee, has added the Wichita Beacon to the papers whose telegrams he has seized or attempted to seize.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH is campaigning earnestly for the Republican Presidential nomination, and has just received a big boost for his cause in the announcement that Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the old age pension plan that bears his name, will give the Idahoan all his support. Repudiating President Roosevelt and changing his registration at Long Beach, Calif., from Democratic to Republican, Townsend said Borah was the only Republican candidate who "even approached" the standard of the Townsendites, although the senator has refused to indorse the Townsend pension plan as it stands. Hitherto the Townsend organization had favored circulation of third party petitions in every state to enlist millions of people as a "demonstration of strength." So the doctor's announcement is a reversal of policy

Cross Stitch Towels That Are Fun to Make



Pattern 787

Just a bit—but a telling bit—of decoration is all that's needed today to make our household linens smart. And so, simple cross stitch brings color and life to humble tea-towels which make dish doing a pleasure rather than a duty. These motifs of glassware and china—in cross stitch—are easy to embroider. This half dozen makes fine pick-up work, and also a grand prize for a bridge party—or most acceptable for a fair donation.

Pattern 787 comes to you with a transfer pattern of six motifs averaging 4½ by 9½ inches; details of all stitches used; and material requirements.

Only Malady Prevalent in Virgin Isles Is Indolence

Temperature in the Virgin Islands ranges in the winter from 70 to 80, and in the summer it jumps about five degrees. The islands are swept by trade winds that blow almost constantly.

Hardly anybody is sick in Saint Thomas. Nobody has colds or bronchitis or pneumonia. Tropical diseases are almost unknown. Yellow fever does not exist, and malaria doesn't count. The only malady contracted by visitors is indolence, and the sooner you get it the happier you will be, for it's lovely being lazy in the Virgins.—Eleanor Early in Cosmopolitan.

The Grandin farm near Fargo, one of North Dakota's best known "big farms" was sold that week to a party from Illinois.

FORMER COWPUNCHER LASSOES COWS IN LAKE

Mound—Ernie Johnson, former cowpuncher in the Montanas, lassoed three cows from the open lake at King's Point near Mound recently, and proved that he had lost none of the knack of roping. The cows, belonging to Mr. Logsden, a farmer, strolled across the ice and ventured too close to a spot where ice had been recently harvested, tumbling in. Attracted by the shouts of the farmer, L. Dorwillar, Fred King, and Johnson arrived at the scene. When they saw the cows swimming around in the water, Johnson asked the farmer for a rope, and when he got it he lassoed the cows one by one, pulling them out of the cold water with the help of the other men. The cows were so chilled by that time they could hardly walk, and had to be shoved up into the barn.

SNOWBANK GOOD STORAGE FOR MONEY; NO INTEREST

Mountain Lake—Stories are numerous about socks, teapots and even stoves being used as receptacles for money, but this spring brings the first one in which a snow drift was used as a safety-deposit vault. Last November 16, R. H. Junker sold a load of geese for $13. When he arrived home he found that his wallet containing the money from the transaction was missing. On Friday, March 20, C. B. Friesen, while driving on a road north of Mountain Lake, saw the wallet protruding from a melting snow bank, where it had been pushed by a passing snow plow. There is a moral to this story. Inside the wallet was only the original $13—no interest.

ITASCA STOCKED WITH RARE GROUSE SPECIES

A number of Canadian spruce grouse, an exceedingly rare species in Minnesota, have been transferred from the Winton and Ely area to Itasca State Park, according to Gustav Swanson, game and fish division biologist. The Canadian spruce grouse, known also as the "fool hen", is too tame to have much appeal for hunters but is much sought after because of its unusual beauty.

Yeomen of the Guard

Yeomen of the Guard consist of old soldiers employed on grand occasions in conjunction with the gentleman-at-arms as the bodyguard of the British sovereign. These yeomen were constituted a corps in 1485 by Henry VII, and they still wear the costume of that period.

Fergus Falls Citizens Get Month's Free 'Juice'

Instead of the usual monthly bills, electricity users of Fergus Falls last week received a statement from the water and light commission to the effect that each consumer had received a month's free use of electricity, the total saving aggregating approximately $9,000. The commission, in explaining the "dividend", said, "In view of the hard winter and heavy fuel bills that most people have recently faced, this has been considered an opportune time to make a cut." The distribution was made out of current earnings for the past fiscal year.

NEW FARM PLAN PAYMENTS FIXED FOR NORTH U. S.

Detailed regulations and rates of payment for specific soil building practices in the north central region, described as "an added inducement" to obtain farmer co-operation in the new conservation program, were announced Wednesday by the AAA in Washington.

The regulations provide that farmers in the north central area may receive as much as $5 an acre for soil building, in addition to the average payment of $10 an acre to be made for shifting land from soil depleting to soil conserving crops.

The north central region includes Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin. Regulations and rates of payments for other regions are under preparation.

"These regulations," said Acting Administrator Howard R. Tolley, "are an added inducement to get more land into soil conserving crops."

HAUPTMAN DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR SILENT TO THE END

Bruno Richard Hauptmann died in the New Jersey prison electric chair at Trenton at 8:47 Friday evening for the kidnap-slaying of the Lindbergh baby, silent, stoical to the end.

He prayed 10 minutes in his cell, then walked to the death chamber with his guards and two ministers.

C. Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann chief counsel, declaring he was not through with the case, said the execution "is a travesty on New Jersey justice, a blot that will never be wiped out."

Governor Harold G. Hoffman had prepared an order for a second reprieve of Hauptmann but never signed it. He decided against such action after conferring with Attorney General David Wilentz just before the execution.

The governor announced he would press for a legislative investigation of the handling of the case.

Paul H. Wendel, investigation of whose repudiated "confession" delayed Hauptmann's death 72 hours, was held, facing a murder warrant sworn out by Mrs. Hauptmann in a dramatic last minute attempt to save her condemned husband.

District Attorney William R. X Geoghan sought means today to question Wendel on his story that he was tortured in Brooklyn for a "confession" he killed the Lindbergh baby.

In Kamenz, Germany, Hauptmann's aged mother suffered a complete breakdown upon learning of her sons' death.

Friends said Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindberg would remain probably the rest of the year in England in their cottage home at Weald, Kent.

Mrs. Anna O. Determan Named by Governor on State Board of Control

Gov. Olson Monday appointed Mrs. Anna O. Determan, Litchfield school teacher and one-time member of the University of Minnesota board of regents, to succeed Mrs. Blanche La Due, Minneapolis, as a member of the state board of control. Her appointment, for a six-year term, is effective immediately. Mrs. La Du, a member of the board since her appointment in 1921, completed her last term April 1. Mrs. Determan, the wife of Dr. Bernard Determan, served on the board of regents from 1933 to 1935. She was the Farmer-Labor candidate for secretary of state in 1930.

ADOPTED PHEASANTS TRUST BENEFACTOR

Detroit Lakes—A farmer living north of Detroit Lakes has adopted a flock of 30 or 40 pheasants, the birds spending most of the day around the yard and receiving the best in food from their friends, who also proved their livesaver the other day when a hawk attacked them. The farmer, dashing from his house to fire at the invader, declares the pheasants came running toward him for protection, and that when he shot his gun not one of them flew into the air. Apparently the birds know a sportsmen when they see one.

RESULTS OF SEED TESTS ANNOUNCED BY N. W. SCHOOL

More than three hundred samples of wheat from farms in Northwestern Minnesota were tested this winter by the Northwest Experiment Station under the direction of R. S. Dunham, agronomist, and E. R. Clark, pure seed specialist. Both blotter and soil tests were made. Based upon the results of these tests, the following conclusions were reached:

The percentage of germination determined by keeping seed moist and warm on blotters was often much higher than the percentage of sprouts that emerged when seed was planted in soil.

In general, the durums germinated more poorly and had less vigor than the common wheats. The average percentage of emergence in a soil test was 69.3 per cent. for Thatcher, Marquillo and Hope (rust resistant varieties); 63.8 per cent for other varieties of common wheat; 53.5 per cent for durums; with an average of 63.5 per cent for all samples.

According to Professor Dunham the unusually low germination and lack of vigor this year are due to shrivelled seed, cracked seed and sprout damage and disease.

Timely suggestions for Northwestern Minnesota farmers include the following:

Grade all seed so that only the plumpest kernels remain.

Test this seed by planting 200 kernels 2½ inches deep in soil and keeping them warm and moist until the sprouts emerge. If the result is not satisfactory, purchase better seed.

Before sowing, treat with New Improved Ceresan at the rate of ½ oz. per bushel of seed. At present this treatment is recommended since it controls covered smut and other seed-borne diseases and may increase the emergence of seedlings considerably. Treating with formaldehyde may reduce the germination but it is an excellent disinfectant for covered smut.

Prepare the best seedbed possible. Attention to seedbed preparation will be more important than usual where light weight seed is used. For light weight seed sown in a good seed bed, the increased number of seeds in a bushel will tend to offset the reduced germination.

And finally, avoid sowing too deep.

Beard as Mark of Slavery

That Warsaw is the beardless city of Europe is the result of its defiant challenge of the past. Russian rulers tried to introduce the vogue of the beard and so make Warsaw appear authentically an appanage of Moscow. Hence shaven cheeks are regarded as the hallmark of patriotism and are commended in all walks of life.

TOTAL TAX LEVY IN STATE FIXED AT $115,900,000

Minnesota's 1935 state tax levy, collectible this year, totals $115,987,222.32 on real and personal property and $1,679,896.83 on moneys and credits, it was announced by Stafford King, state auditor, as distribution of the annual tax abstracts to governmental officials and tax payers' organizations throughout the state was begun Monday.

The average tax rate is 79.34 mills, compared with 78.27 mills for 1934, for which year the levy was $115,494,681.79 on real and personal property and $1,417,308.35 on moneys and credits. Delinquency last year was approximately 18 per cent, but judging from income tax returns and because of the new ten-year installment payment plan provided by the legislature at the January special session, delinquency on the 1935 levy, it is estimated, will be less than 10 per cent, said Matt Desmond, deputy state auditor.

The total tax levy shown by the abstract is $116,738,858.49, but this includes the grain tax of $43,586.84, electric light and power tax of $380,660.72 and special assessments totaling $377,388.61.

Governor Olson Returns to Clinic at Rochester

Following a brief session of the state executive council in his offices at the Capitol, Governor Floyd B. Olson Monday returned to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester for examination and resumption of treatment for his stomach ailment. He will return to the Twin Cities each week-end for the next three weeks to be with his family, he said, and at conclusion of a series of treatments, plans to spend most of the summer at his home at Gull lake.

WILD RICE RIVER OVER BANKS AT ADA

Several business buildings were flooded and many residences at Ada were surrounded by water when the Wild Rice river overflowed Monday at Ada. The situation was aggravated somewhat when ice sheared off the top part of the Heiberg dam east of Ada causing a large volume of water to rush down the river. The water receded some Tuesday as the river overflowed south of Ada into the Marsh river and low lands along that stream. Parts of Trunk Highway No. 82 and U. S. No. 75 were washed out, but it is not anticipated any serious damage will be done. Last report is that the Wild Rice is slowly receding at Ada, and that but little property damage was caused by the flood.

AWARD BRIDGE CONTRACT

Award of a contract for a 3-span, 126-foot bridge on Trunk Highway No. 32 over the Great Northern railroad tracks in Red Lake Falls has been announced by the Minnesota Highway Department. The successful bid of $32,990 was made by McCree & Co. of St. Paul and the Widell Company of Mankato, Minn. Work is to be started at an early date.

SELLS FARM NEAR HERE

In a deal made this week, Phil Anderson sold his farm adjoining the Pennington county line 3½ miles south of the village, to Joe Helm of Red Lake Falls who owns several tracts of land in that immediate vicinity. Mr. Anderson is to have an auction sale of his farming equipment, on April 22nd, and intends to return with his family to his former home at Joliet, Ill.

JENSEN'S FATHER DIES

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Jensen left Monday evening for Minneapolis after receiving a message stating Mr. Jensen's father had passed away in that city the previous day. Mr. Jensen, Sr., made his home here with his son at various times during later years and was well known to many people in this community. A pleasant, friendly old gentleman, Mr. Jensen made many friends in this locality who will be grieved to learn of his death.

Funeral services were held at Minneapolis this week.

WHIST GAME TONIGHT

The second meeting of the present whist tournament will be held tonight at the Bilden & Olsen hall. The Reds were victorious at last meeting, but their margin was so narrow that their opponents are looking for a reverse at this meeting. As road conditions have improved a lot during the past week, good attendance is expected tonight.

MISS JOHNSTONE TO TALK HERE FRIDAY

Miss M. Beatrice Johnstone, head of the extension division of the University of North Dakota, and nationally known as a public speaker, will speak at a meeting of the St. Hilaire Parent-Teachers Association to be held ot the school auditorium Friday evening this week.

Miss Johnstone is past president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the North Dakota Educational Association, and is rated as one of the ten leading women of North Dakota. She will have a message of especial importance to the people of St. Hilaire and vicinity, so everyone should make a special effort to hear her.

Musical numbers also are on the program for the evening, and lunch will be served as usual at conclusion of the program.

RETURNS FROM WISCONSIN

Peter Simonson, who had spent the winter months at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Aubol at Crandon, Wisc., returned home Friday to spend the summer months. He was accompanied here by his daughter, Pearl, who teaches at Crandon, and by his daughter and son-in-law, Laura Simonson and Oscar Stearns of Minneapolis who came to help him get settled, and stayed with him until Sunday.

RIVER CHANNEL OPENS

Following a brisk wind Monday, ice commenced breaking up in the river channel at this point and south of the village. While the ice is not entirely gone, the main channel is open and a good sized volume of water is moving down river.

WOMAN 94 YEARS OLD CUTS 3D SET TEETH

Park Rapids.—An epidemic of teeth extraction has swept Park Rapids recently, and a good many young people have said goodbye to all the attendant aches and pains they suffered with the original masticating tools—so they think. However, in this world of constant miracles, nothing is certain. As witness, Grandma Hodder, 94 year old resident of Ponsford, in Becker county, is undergoing the same pangs as she experienced approximately 93 years ago and again about 88 years ago. In other words, she is cutting her third set of teeth. It's unbelievable, but it's true. Two teeth have already made their appearance, and the third is already on its way.

CO. AUDITOR DIES AT RED LAKE FALLS

George Dupont, auditor of Red Lake county for 23 years, died Sunday morning at his home as a result of a paralytic stroke suffered the previous Thursday evening. Mr. Dupont who was 64 years of age, was born in Boston, March 13, 1872 and came to Red Lake county in 1882. He taught school at Terrebonne, and later operated a store in that village. In 1912 he was appointed auditor following the death of J. B. O'Brien. Since that time he was re-elected to that position every election, most of the time without opposition. A courteous and efficient public officer, Mr. Dupont was well known to many people in this vicinity who will be pained to learn of his sudden death.

He is survived by his widow, three sons, Harold, Kermit and Jude, and five daughters, Mrs. Estelle Ness, Madonna (Sister Dolorsa) Mae, Marie and Mrs. Mildred Holmes, who all reside at Red Lake Falls with exception of Mrs. Ness at Grand Forks, and Sister Dolorosa who is at St. Benedict at Crookston.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at St. Joseph's Catholic church at Red Lake Falls with the Rev. E. J. Lemire, the Rev. E. J. Paquin and the Rev. Francis Lemen in charge of the requiem mass.

Interment took place in the cemetery east of Red Lake Falls.

NOTICE—The Women's Club meeting has been postponed until next Thursday evening, April 23rd.

Babylonians First to Try "Inflation"

Ancient Tablets Give Line on Business Methods.

Chicago.—Texts from thousands of ancient Assyrian and Babylonian clay tablets, the longest series of business records available, are being pieced together into a remarkable picture of business and banking in the Tigris-Euphrates valley 2,500 years ago by Dr. Waldo H. Dubberstein of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

Forerunners of such modern practices as old-age annuities, long and short-term credit, price-fixing attempts, and government hoarding of precious metals, with resulting "inflation," are clearly evident from Doctor Dubberstein's work. He has compiled price-charts for standard commodities, in terms of shekels, for a period of more than 200 years, 625-425 B. C.

"Various kings from the great administrator Hammurabi, about 2000 B. C., to the scholarly Ashurbanipal, 668-626 B. C., attempted to fix prices at low levels," Doctor Dubberstein said. "Their decrees and their lists of prices show them attempting to create prosperity for the people and a feeling of good will by announcing low official prices for staple commodities and at times setting wages for skilled and unskilled labor. Hammurabi even decreed the fee for surgical operations on man or beast.

Fail to Fix Prices.

"But the truthful commercial documents of those remote centuries make it apparent that royal efforts in behalf of fixed prices were not successful. The economic life of the nation could not be bound by artificial price levels, and the period of the late Babylonian history which is most flourishing shows no record of royal interference in price setting.

"Copper, lead, silver and gold all served as money at various times during the long centuries of monetary development in the Tigris-Euprates valley.

"Wealth had become concentrated in the larger cities, where the banking business was chiefly in the hands of a few important families. These firms were not mere 'money lenders' but bankers in every sense of the word. They commonly lent money at 20 per cent per year.

Old Age Annuity.

"An interest-bearing note or a share in the income of a popular temple could be a valuable legacy left to a dutiful son or daughter. An annuity arrangement for old age comparable to those offered today was known. The recipient of the annuity turned over his properties or the income of specific properties, in return for which he was guaranteed a certain minimum income in food and clothing for the duration of his life.

"Centuries of experience in legal matters had developed a standard, incontestable form of document for every possible form of government.

"Land renting and leasing was a profitable and extensive business.

"The legal aptitude and general shrewdness of the Babylonian business man is attested to by thousands of carefully, often cleverly worded tablets.

"As the three thousand years of ancient Babylonian economic history are pierced together, there is discernible throughout the ages a gradual increase in prices of nearly all staple products as well as in real estate and rents. Fluctuations appear, yet the general trend is upward."

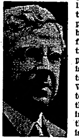
Choosing the Best

By

LEONARD A. BARRETT



Henry Churchill King, the late president of Oberlin college, wrote, "The great secret of all living is the persistent staying in the presence of the best — the great facts — the great truths — the great personalities." Life is a struggle to attain a certain ideal. We may be forced to fight our way through many trying situations, but the joy of victory is far greater and more permanent than that contentment which comes from being satisfied with anything less than the highest and the best. Contentment is thus frequently expressed—"To live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man." True, but abstract friendship is impossible. Unless some one frequently comes to that house by the side of the road and receives the best water from its cooling spring, or the best help the owner of the house can give, little contentment can abide within its walls. Only as we give to others the best that is in us do we attain the goal of high and joyous living.

In order to give the "best" we first must attain it for ourselves. Why discount our own efficiency and minimize the possibilities of our own happiness by being content with the "second best?" When we seek to satisfy our desire for music, let us endeavor to hear the best. It is far more profitable to hear one great symphony than a number of second rate concerts. It is far more profitable to read one good book, the very best that is possible, than a score of books that contain no great message or commanding purpose.

Environment is an important factor in developing character and determining life's compensations. Why not choose the best possible environment and refuse to sacrifice its value for the gaudy gewgaws of evanescent pleasure.

Living in the presence of the "best" is by no means as expensive as living on lower levels. Most of the money spent today is for worthless trivial things which contribute absolutely nothing to the art of plain living and high thinking. Environment depends not as much upon money as upon our choice of the way we spend our money.

"The great secret of all living is the persistent staying in the presence of the best." Read the best books, see the best pictures, hear the best music, choose the best friends. Staying in the presence of the best is the secret of all successful and joyous living.

THREE CENT MARRIER

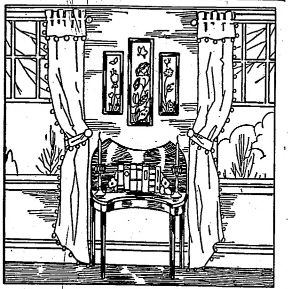
A. C. Hess, a justice of the peace in Reno, Kan., reports a tremendous increase in marriage ceremonies since he established a low rate for his services. For 18 years he had been justice and during that time had performed but four marriage ceremonies, which is not extraordinary when one considers that the village's population is less than 25. The idea occurred to him that if a low charge were made he would perform more ceremonies, so he announced that beginning January 1, 1936, couples would be married at his residence at the rate of only 3 cents per marriage. Since then he has done twice as much business as he did in the 18 years heretofore. His home has been dubbed "cupid's parlor" and Mr. Hess revels in the reputation of being "cupid's right hand man."

Jailed for Failure to Pay

A century ago Indianapolis citizens were put in jail for failure to pay their debts. For several years it was the law that debtors be placed in jail or be kept "within bounds."

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker



The sparkle of clear crystal rods and ball fringe, candlesticks and bookends is as decorative as gay color.

THE fad for a riot of color in decoration is waning fast. The absence of color is in high favor as noted in white decorative schemes. These, however, are so delicate that those only who can afford to keep the rooms immaculate should consider white as a main scheme. In a former vogue, cleansing of decorations was not the problem that it is now. Between that period and this coal and oil have become common heating fuels and the columns of black smoke that rise from chimneys to seep through windows, or pour through them when open, makes it a constant fight to keep rooms spotless. When they are, the radiations and glow of white are as impressive as brilliance of color.

Brilliance of Glass

The absence of color in decoration is found in glass fittings and furnishings, that either sparkle or shine according to their cutting or polishing. Curtain poles in clear glass with ball tips on each end are among the furnishings, as are also glass ball fringes for valances. These sometimes are used to edge draperies also. While style is served in such furnishings, there is an element of fragility and danger of finger and spot marks showing, that are quite balancing items. Color is frequently introduced in the glass to make it continue some special color scheme developed. The colored glass does not have the refractions that clear glass does and so loses that feature of beauty in glass accessories.

Speaking of accessories, clear glass is featured in book-ends of chiseled beauty, or with the softness of rounded designs, or the solidity of angular modern designs. Crystal candlesticks give elegance and grace to accessories in glass, while crystal ash trays of blocks of glass scooped out for ash containers, or in chaste beauty of pattern lend charm to arm tables or smokers' stands.

Blankets and Covers

The uppermost covering for a bed has not one but many names, the latest of which is blanket cover. Bedspreads are frequently diminished to spreads. Other names are coverlet, which is couvre-lit or couvre-pieds in French; and counterpane, also of French extraction, fathered by Latin. The word quilt, sometimes used, is correctly applicable only when the covering is of two thicknesses of material between which is a wadding of some sort. Today we associate the word with the stitchery known as quilting and the verb quilt, signifying the running stitches taken through the textiles and filling to secure them together, usually in decorative designs.

The nearest we come to a bed cover in quilted type is in the Marseilles spread which is seldom seen today. However, in the rotation of fashions the time is approaching when in all probability it will return. These spreads are machine-quilted, having patterns in relief which are developed by outlining designs through the surface and back textiles and the slight wadding between. These white coverlets, it would appear, came into style during the latter part of a past vogue of quilts, and continued on a crest of a wave of fashion for several years afterward. Marseilles counterpanes are handsome and heavy. It was largely due to their weight that their vogue passed. They are similar to ancient quilted materials but in modern disguise. They are made by machinery, and are modern-French in design.

Night Coverlets

The blanket covers of today would simplify the return of these Marseilles spreads, for the former are primarily used as night-time substitutes for elaborate daytime bed covers. It is when the bed is dressed for the night, and the heavy, elaborate, lacey or costly silken spread is removed, that the simple, yet dainty blanket cover is thrown over the bedding. Thus it protects the blankets and provides attractive dress for the bed, distinctly suited to real use.

So popular have blanket covers become that they are used not alone at night but during the day. They are easily home-laundered, and if made of crinkly crepe will need no ironing. For both day and night use silk blanket covers are attractive. They can be the choice of their kind. Center monograming or initialing in contrasting applique or embroidered letters supplies decorative distinction, especially for dainty cotton covers.

Japanese Girl Slays Giant "Snake"

Tourist visitors to Japan recently enjoyed witnessing the Tsuna-Hiki festival in Osaka, in the course of which a girl priest cut eight knots of a huge coil of straw in the re-enactment of the slaying of a great snake with eight heads. This ceremony took place at the shrine of Susanoono Mikoto, who is reputed to have killed the monster in the dawn of Japanese history.

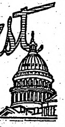
Washington Digest



National Topics Interpreted

by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Some years ago when Reed Smoot of Utah was a member of the senate where he enjoyed a long and meritorious service, he ventured a prophecy. It was this:

Smoot's Prophecy

"The cost of government has increased every year, and it will continue to increase. I care not what party is in power, that result will obtain."

As I recall, Senator Smoot's statement was made about eight years ago and it was made at a time when the Republicans, of whom the Utah senator was one, were in control in the senate. His statement came as a result of an immense amount of jibes that were being hurled at the Republican majority. The Democrats were having a grand time, kidding the Republicans who were then in complete control of the government.

Senator Smoot recognized that which few in responsible positions in the government recognized, or if they did recognize the fact, they chose not to admit it. Nevertheless, the senator's statement is true today as it was true when he made it and for many years before.

The Smoot prophecy comes to mind now because of the sudden acceleration of moves to curtail government expenses, to reorganize the scads of New Deal and emergency agencies, to eliminate overlapping functions among these agencies, and, in general, to put the house of government in order.

Two such efforts are underway. One of them was initiated by Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia Democrat, who succeeded in obtaining senate recognition of his charges that there was tremendous waste, that there were useless agencies and that, in addition, governmental functions were being generally messed up because none except the old-established units of government knew what they were doing. The Virginia senator obtained adoption of a resolution providing for a general survey and recommendations for the clean-up. It was a situation in which even the most ardent New Dealers could not find an excuse for objecting to it. So the senator took the lead.

Subsequently, President Roosevelt reached the conclusion that something ought to be done in the way of untangling the tangled skein of governmental functions so he proposed a survey under his direction. He appointed a committee of so-called experts to go over the problem.

Thus, at the start, at least, it appears that the taxpayers are going to be favored by a break. I think it ought to be added, however, that no one has had the temerity to suggest that either the Byrd survey or that engineered by Mr. Roosevelt will yield very much.

* * *

Dig Up Helpful Facts

The survey promoted by Senator Byrd will dig up a good many helpful facts but there is every reason to believe that the Virginia senator will find many obstacles placed in his way and that he and his committee will be unable to present any comprehensive statement on their findings to the country in advance of the November elections. The same is true concerning the survey directed by the President, only more so. The cold fact is that there is no chance at all for the President's committee to even approach the stage of making recommendations from their survey until long after the elections are held. Frankly, each of these surveys is permeated with politics, so much so that a straightforward accounting or general description of the affairs of government will not be allowed to become public property and thereby become a campaign issue. Of the two, Senator Byrd's proposal has the better chance, but that is rather small.

Adverting to the Smoot prophecy, it is therefore of no great importance whether a thoroughgoing examination of the governmental structure that has grown up in the last three years under President Roosevelt is made in advance of the elections. These New Deal agencies have been created and these New Deal agencies, like many of the "Old Deal" agencies, are with us to stay and suck up taxpayers' money for quite some time. I need only remind you that we still have in existence the War Finance corporation and the railroad administration that were created as war-time agencies, not to mention a dozen other similar units.

It is possible, indeed, I think it is probable, that there will be a trimming of pay rolls in many of the New Deal agencies immediately after election. There certainly ought to be important curtailment of expenses and of the list of employees, but accomplishing that is a matter much more easily described than done. So, I feel safe in saying that all of this ado about a reduction in governmental swelling amounts to nothing more than just ado.

* * *

New Deal Spirits Rise

In making the statement above that the outcry about reducing the government pay roll and untangling the functions is just so much ballyhoo, I think it ought to be said at the same time that New Deal spirits are rising. There was a time a few months ago when the national trend was decidedly against Mr. Roosevelt. It even went so far as to cause many individuals to say that Mr. Roosevelt would be defeated for re-election. The picture around the first of April was quite different. There is in Washington quite a general feeling that the Roosevelt re-election chances have improved and are continuing to improve. This condition is quite evident to observers continuously on the job here for even in the personal manner of the President himself there is an outward appearance that he believes the situation is well in hand.

As far as I can discover, one reason why the New Dealers feel so much better is that events leading up to the national Democratic convention seem to be cleared of any harassing possibilities.

I am sure that it will be recalled how something like the blues overcame many New Deal stalwarts after former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate, let loose a blast at the New Deal in his Liberty league dinner speech. I happened to be in a position to know that the Smith speech caused all kinds of commotion and fear among New Deal leaders. They know, as everyone else knows, that "Al" Smith has a big personal following. When he threatened "to take a walk," he let loose a declaration that was charged with dynamite and the New Dealers could not calculate how much dynamite.

Now, however, it appears quite certain that much of the danger inherent in the Smith declaration has been eliminated. Notwithstanding the Smith indictment of the President for repudiation of platform promises and his description of the Roosevelt policies as "a national menace," there is going to be a pitifully small number of anti-New Deal Democrats in the Philadelphia convention. The number will be so small, in fact, that however vociferous they become, their shouts will be heard no more than the wail of a child in a storm.

It was to be expected, as I have reported to you before, that the routine type of Democratic politician will forget any differences he has with the New Deal and be regular at convention time and during most of the campaign. That type of politician, be he Republican or Democratic, cannot afford to bolt. If he bolts, he cuts off his own nose and most politicians do not enjoy being de-nosed for that is tantamount to being politically dehorned. So, while the Philadelphia convention of the Democrats may have some seething underneath the surface, it is without the realm of possibility that there can be any important revolt against renomination of Mr. Roosevelt. Likewise, it is just as far-fetched to think that the platform which that convention will adopt for the campaign will not be exactly as Mr. Roosevelt dictates it. Actually, there is nothing on the horizon now to indicate any changes from the way I have just described it.

* * *

G. O. P. in a Hole

Inasmuch as the New Dealers can properly regard their situation pretty well in hand, they naturally can feel a bit cocky over the difficulties in the Republican ranks. First, the Republicans are at a disadvantage in that their convention in Cleveland is to be held at an earlier date than the Democrats meet. This, however, is more real than apparent. It is thus because of the intra-party battles that appear certain to come to the surface at Cleveland. The Republicans are not together, not unified, on anything. A half dozen candidates with appreciable followings are snapping at each other and two or three factions are announcing almost simultaneously what the platform is going to say. It just cannot help leading into a beautiful mess at Cleveland unless the Republican leaders show more intelligence than they have shown thus far.

In the meantime, the Democrats are making note of the various battle charges. You can be sure they will use them. Whoever the Republicans nominate at Cleveland necessarily faces a big fight but as the situation now stands, I think the Democrats will be able to make it an offensive campaign whereas ordinarily the party in power must give over much of its campaigning to a defense. This is true unless the Republicans can get together and take the offensive themselves by criticizing and attacking on a united front.

Of course, much water can run under the bridge before the November election. It is always possible that the party in power can make mistakes, can be led into a blind alley under the political guns of its opposition. The Democrats have made many mistakes already but the anti-New Deal opposition shows no indication of plans to take advantage of those mistakes. So the circumstances, as of this time, give every reason for the New Dealers to feel satisfied with the campaigning up to this time.

Two Use Cross as Emblem

Greece and Switzerland have a cross as the chief emblem in their arms, the former silver, the latter white.

Stuns Companion to Save His Life

Cairns, Queensland.—The life of a man saved in the interior of Queensland by a friend who had to stun him to attend to his injuries.

A South African engineer and scientist, Capt. A. J. Kenrick, and Leslie Shearsby, were traveling together in a motor lorry. Shearsby was struck by a low-hanging tree bough. The impact threw his head back, fracturing the spine near the base of the skull.

Captain Kenrick was forced to stun his companion before he could administer first aid. Shearsby was brought to a hospital here by wagon, lorry and airplane.

DEVICE THAT SLEW 54 NOW IS DOOMED

Contraption at Connecticut Prison to Be Replaced.

Wethersfield, Conn.—Fifty-four times in 40 years the simple but deadly hanging machine at Connecticut's state prison has snuffed out the life of a convicted murderer.

But when the man doomed as its fifty-fifth victim "swings" the only such machine of its kind in the country is doomed to extinction.

Operated by a system of weights and pulleys, the machine will be replaced by the electric chair as specified by the legislature.

But it remains in the death house, its temporary lease on life ending when John Siembroski, convicted of killing a New Haven policeman, pays the supreme penalty.

In 1894 the machine became the sole instrument for legal executions in Connecticut, replacing the gibbet.

Its most notorious victim was Gerald Chapman, public enemy No. 1 of the early twenties.

When a doomed man enters the high-walled death chamber from the little door leading to the death cell, all he sees is the rope with its hangman's knot suspended from the ceiling. The rope passes through a partition. Here a mechanism connects it with a 900-pound weight which is held in check by a ratchet whel. A small button on the floor controls the wheel.

But pressing the pedal gives no warning. The 300-pound weight falls to the floor with a hollow thud. The victim on the noose is jerked into the air and dropped with a jerk. The machine has never failed. It is calculated the machine breaks a man's neck twice, in contrast to usual hangings where a victim falls through a trap door.

Smart Dog Detective Solves 8 Murder Cases

Berlin.—What is said to be the best detective dog in the world belongs to the dog section of the Berlin police.

This smart four legged detective, named Schimmel, has solved eight murder cases as well as numerous robberies, holdups, and other crimes.

The so-called "wonder dog" is eight years old and has been a member of the Berlin police force since 1928.

In a recent case the dog gave another proof of his ability and smartness when eight other dogs from his section had failed. It found the body of a murdered boy, concealed about half a meter under ground in a thickly wooded forest. The child was a victim of the boy killer, Seefeld.

This "detective" proved his cleverness to 80 jurists, among whom were both foreign and German judges and attorneys. The jurists walked over a geld to destroy and stamp out all trace of scent on the dog's trail. But it took Schimmel less than three minutes to find the scent, take the lead again, and find the hidden object.

This dog receives the same food as all its fellows, except that after each gallant performance it receives a bag full of Pfefferkuchen, its favorite delicacy.

Schimmel's trainer is Paul Boettger, the chief of the dog detective section. Boettger is the oldest police dog trainer in the world.

The dog is entirely white, a rare color for German shepherds, which are usually brown, black, or spotted black and white.

Motor Kills "Dead" Woman Who Fled From Her Coffin

Monesti, Rumania.—Mourners who attended the burial of Anna Bochinsky were frightened out of their wits when the dead woman jumped out of her coffin while it was being carried with the lid open—as is the custom in Rumania—from the cemtery chapel to the grave.

Not only did Anna jump out of the coffin, but she made a desperate run toward the road, only to be run over and killed by a rushing automobile.

Anna suffered from a heart disease and her first death was only apparent. She came to life a few minutes before being interred and was so frightened by the preparations of her burial that she ran off—to her death.

Art Gallery Is Tomb

New Haven.—The bodies of Col. John Trumbull, famous Colonial painter, and his wife, are buried in a vault in the basement of the art gallery of the Yale Art school. When the new building was constructed a few years ago, the vault was undisturbed.

4,800 Shots a Minute

London.—Britain's newest fighting airplane is a single-seater capable of traveling at 260 miles an hour while the pilot fires a stream of 4,800 machine gun bullets a minute.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Racial Hatred.

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.—It may be old to you, but it's new out here:

Small Prussian town turns out for traveling circus. Ferocious lion escapes; villagers flee madly. Sinewy stranger grapples, single-handed, with raving brute; twists its jaws, hammers its nose, boots it back into cage.

Irvin S. Cobb

Entire community starts jubilation—flags flying, bands playing, burgomaster puts on his high hat, special train arranged for rushing the hero to Berlin to be decorated by Herr Hitler as reincarnation of ancient Nordic demigods, typifying spirit of old German stocks—all that sort of thing.

Suddenly hideous discovery is made that stranger's background is not Teutonic, the family name being Ginsberg. Celebration called off; flags furled, bands sneak home, special train canceled, burgomaster has apoplexy.

And next day the local paper comes out with scathing article under the headline, "Jew Attacks Defenseless Lion."

* * *

Criminal Lawyers.

WE'RE a funny people. Did we read where, in some far-off country, men who had access to zoos picked the locks on the cages and freed the man-eating tigers and the bloodthirstiest wolves and the deadliest poison snakes to go forth and kill again, we'd marvel at a land which endured such a thing.

But when in our own land criminal lawyers truthfully boast that, of all the individuals charged with deliberate murder whom they have defended, no single one ever went to noose or chair, and that ever so many more were, by their skill, saved from the prisons where we are supposed to pen our human tigers and wolves and snakes, we give these geniuses our admiration and much free advertising, and young lawyers crave to follow in their illustrious footprints.

We are indeed a funny people—so funny it's hard to decide whether we should laugh at ourselves—or weep.

* * *

Husbands and Wives.

LOTS of matrimony in the news, now that marriage, instead of being a contract, is a ninety-day option.

A Pittsburgh gentleman gets fined for dunking his lady's face in a simmering beef stew. That's no way to treat a lady. Or a beef stew. Take the average lady, and would you care for a beef stew flavored with lipstick, eyebrow pencil, mascara, cold cream, hair dye and three kinds of paint?

A gentleman who's president of the—take a deep breath—American Creative League of Harmony and Music Students, declares if ill-suited couples learn the guitar happiness would return, the guitar, he states, being the most romantic instrument there is. But once, in vaudeville, I saw a peevish helpmate crown friend husband with an inlaid guitar, and it didn't seem to do him any real good.

* * *

Slowing Up Youth.

OBVIOUSLY it's too late to save the confirmed speed-maniacs among the adult population. They won't be with us long, anyhow, and will be missed by but few, if any. Every time one of these madmen whizzes past, I find myself saying to the back of his neck, "Well, brother, glad to have this glimpse at you. Probably I'll not be seeing you again unless I should drop in at the morgue the day you arrive."

But maybe we might help to insure the oncoming generations by inaugurating a definite course of juvenile education. Let's start with the babies; let's make it a fixed and required ritual in every kindergarten, every public or private parochial school—yes, every Sunday school, every Boy Scout camp and at every girl's campfire; every place where youngsters are gathered. Over and over again, let's pound it into them that reckless driving is neither gallant nor smart nor sporting, but that it is stupid and criminal and vicious and murderous.

* * *

Desolation of Floods.

THE first time we went to Venice my wife looked across the Grand canal and said:

"Did you ever see anything like it?"

And, trying to be funny, I said: "Absolutely, looks just like South Third street did during the big rise of 1913. If right now a fellow in a skiff should come rowing up to this window to collect the water-rent, I'd swear I was back home."

That seemed a sorry joke as I read of a monstrous yellow torrent sweeping down on the beleaguered lowlands where my people have lived for nearly a century and a half, bringing ruin on its crest and desolation in its wake.

Surely nature has been pitiless this last year—drouths and duststorms; forest fires and smokepalls; blizzards and icepacks; and now these cruel floods. Still, amid the afflictions, one consoling thought gleams like a star: congress will adjourn pretty soon.

MIRIAM HOPKINS sailed for Europe the other day, planning to spend her six weeks vacation traveling in central Europe and Russia, mostly by air. She left her little boy, Michael, in school in New York, which was hard to do, for she adores that small, yellow haired chap, and is doing a beautiful job of bringing him up. But he's rather young to go traipsing about Europe. She stayed in New York long enough to hear her latest picture, "These Three," which she made with Merle Oberon and Joel McCrae, hailed as one of the best pictures made in a long, long time. She also stayed long enough to annoy the people who wanted to interview her by promising each day that she'd see the interviewers the next, and then avoiding practically all of them.

And that's bad business; Katherine Hepburn proved that.

Of course you know how she has been treating interviewers for these many moons; just snubbing them right and left. A while ago she decided to give in, and told the press agent for her company that she would see a representative from one paper. And, according to the story, he began with the New York paper with the biggest circulation and went right down the line, and met with nothing but refusals!

Some years ago Willie and Eugene Howard, who are doing that new radio feature, "Folles Bergere of the Air," were appearing in a musical comedy. They lent a helping hand to a young man who needed a start; being the show's feature stars, they could do it. And now the world knows his name—John Charles Thomas.

The news reels brought home to many of us the full tragedy of the recent floods, and it is a relief to know that some funny things happened in the midst of all that horror. The news reel companies usually have local people who, if anything interesting happens, photograph it on the chance the company will buy it. During the Pennsylvania floods, a free lance camera man phoned one of the news reel companies in New York, announcing that he had some good stuff. He was urged to send it right in by train. He said he couldn't, that no trains were running. The company checked up and found that one would leave that afternoon. Did he have a boat? Yes, he had his boat tied to the window sill. Well, then, he was to get into that boat and take his film to the railway station. "But I can't," he protested. "I fell out of the boat once and got wet, so I left my suit at the tailor's, and the water came in and washed away everything in his place—and I haven't any other clothes!"

They're still having a hard time at the Paramount studio with "I Loved a Soldier"; pretty soon people are going to think there's a jinx on it. Marlene Dietrich, you'll recall, walked out on it. Margaret Sullavan was then borrowed for it, and broke her arm. Nobody seems to care for the leading role—so some unknown girl may get it, and if she does, she'll be a sensational success, because that's the way things happen in Hollywood.

Bob Davis Reveals

A Saga of Pugilism; When John L. Sullivan Fought Paddy Ryan

DOWN in Louisiana state, where prize fighting saw some of the palmiest of the early day festivities in the squared circle, they are still talking of the old battlers. Start a conversation about fighters anywhere between Biloxi, former capital of Mississippi, and New Orleans, and you'll get an earful from historians who remember as far back as the seventy-five round fight, London rules, between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrane at Richbourg, Miss., July 8, 1889. That was a bare knuckle affair, last to take place in the United States. Sullivan, the winner. Some time later, September 16, 1930, that sanguinary mill was described by an eyewitness. As compared with the $2,650,000 gate affair September 22, 1927, Chicago, between Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey, the pickings were sad indeed, for the simple reason that John and Jake were chased out of New Orleans by the state constabulary and had to fight practically on the dead jump on an open lot in the next state.

Old Timer Tells the Story.

Skirting along the Gulf of Mexico, where all of the cottages enjoy a southern exposure, I stopped at Pass Christian, just out of Gulfport, and picked up an interview with Mr. E. J. Adams, Sr., president of the board of supervisors, who not only attended the Sullivan-Kilrane set-to at Richbourg, but was an eyewitness to the mill between John L. and Paddy Ryan at Mississippi City, 1882.

"Arrangements had been made to pull the fight off at New Orleans," he said "but the better element put up a protest and the principals agreed to fight wherever a vacant lot could be found and the police wouldn't butt in. At that time I was in the employ of the Coast Beacon Service at Pass Christian, still in my 'teens and hot to be at the ringside if possible. A rumor floated in that the train carrying John and Paddy would come through the Pass on the fly and stop at Mississippi City, where the bout would take place on the old Myer's hotel ground, 12 miles east on the gulf.

"A boy friend, Ferdinand Martin, and I dropped everything and arranged with Henry Brown, a blacksmith, to rent us a team of horses and a buggy to make the trip. A Dr. J. J. Thornton told Brown that we would drive his horses to death trying to follow the train. The blacksmith at once took the rig away from us. 'What about it, Fred?' I asked. 'Let's walk,' he said. 'Let's run,' I said, and run we did, over the only road, one of white sand stretches between the Pass and Mississippi City; hard driving for teams. Fact is, we passed most of the horse-drawn vehicles.

It Was Grudge Fight.

"There was no admission fee. It was a grudge fight in which only the backers were concerned. Somebody tried to collect a few dollars, but got the horse laugh. There was no time to argue, as the authorities were expected to turn up and arrest the principals. Martin and I shinned up a chinaberry tree near the roped square and had a wonderful view of the whole show. The actual fight lasted just eleven minutes, nine rounds, London rules. Sullivan knocked Ryan down or he fell down nine times. Altogether a bloody affair with the Boston boy having his own way from start to finish. Paddy's wife would not believe a telegram that her man had been defeated until she got a look at his face, which removed all doubt. This fight was about the last of Ryan's and the beginning of Sullivan's fame.

"There wasn't much of a crowd on hand, probably 700 all told. However, people who lived in Mississippi City, but didn't believe in prize ring events and decided to stay home with the blinds down, soon appeared, climbed into the trees and sat straddle on the limbs, cheering and making bets with those who were within reach. It was like a colony of monkeys watching a battle of gorillas from the surrounding forest. The tree next to mine was occupied by a young fellow who, in his anxiety to get closer slid so far out that the branch snapped and let him down. Crashing through the lower foliage, he hit the earth with the echo of a bass drum, breaking his leg. I was one, with Ferdinand Martin, who helped to carry him to a resting place awaiting a doctor.

Man With Broken Leg.

"Ten years later while sticking type in the composing room of the Times-Democrat, New Orleans, the Sullivan-Ryan fight became the subject of controversy. I chipped in with some observations and found myself supported by another printer who insisted that he also was an authority on the subject. 'I ought to know something about that fight,' he said, 'because I sat on the limb of a chinaberry tree watching round after round until I tumbled off and broke a leg, leaving me a cripple for life. What more evidence wo you want?' Leaving my typesetting case, I walker over to him and in the presence of the composing room stated that I was one of the boys who helped to carry him out of the grove. Believe it or not, his name was Edward Norman."

Made a Clean Job

Little Louise had been out in the yard investigating the wonders of nature and she came running in to her mother, all excitement. "I ate a worm," said she.

Her mother, thinking that it was probably a case of imagination, decided to appeal to the child's finer feelings and she said: "Oh, that wasn't kind, was it? Just think how sad the mamma worm felt to have her little baby swallowed up."

The little girl hastened to reply: "I ate she's mamma, too."—Pathfinder Magazine.

As Synonyms Go

MAX HORWINSKY was a race track tout. He worked with a partner whose name was Dorris. Dorris was just what the average sucker would fall for. She had big brown eyes and was a stunning blonde. Tall and well built, with all the curves necessary to her calling. She was the bait that attracted the big fish.

Max and Dorris had worked out a swell scheme. Dorris would mingle with the men and give one the glad eye. Then a drink at the bar and maybe a date later. Max would manage to barge into the restaurant and suddenly he'd spot Dorris. He'd come over to her table as if he hadn't seen her for weeks.

Dorris would introduce Max to her friend.

"Great girl—Dorris is," Max would say to his new acquaintance. Then, over Dorris's protests, he'd insist on telling how she had picked winners out of the paper. "Five straight she gave me," he'd vouchsafe.

Before the stranger could ask any questions Max would hurry away, saying that he'd like to see Dorris the next day before the race. The gentleman would want to know what it was all about, and Dorris would pretend it wasn't anything much. Just a little system—a sort of a synonym game she'd worked out for fun.

"Oh, I couldn't do that," she'd say when her latest pick-up would want an explanation. "I get it out of the papers—sort of a combination of letters. It never spells out the name of a horse, but there's always a synonym for the word that tells what horse is going to win. It really does. . . ."

Twice in a row on the day I'm telling you about, Max placed a five-pot on horses that the synonym picked, and they won. The fellow who put up the dough was named Ogelby. He was a school teacher from Iowa.

Mr. Ogelby was hot after that. He flashed a couple of century notes and said he'd like to bet it all on the next race, but he'd like to know the system.

"All right," Max says, "Dorris here says today's synonym is 'spice.' How she gets that is from the first letter of the names of the jockeys. Now there's Sam, Pete, Ike, Chet and Elmer. Look at the first letter of each name. What does it spell? S-p-i-c-e, eh?"

Mr. Ogelby looked puzzled. "But how do you arrive at anything from that?"

"Simply this. Here's the program. What horse is running in today's races whose name suggests a synonym for spice?"

Mr. Ogelby read off the names of the horses. When he came to Aromatic he suddenly paused.

"There's your answer," Max said. "Bet that two hundred on Aromatic today and see what happens."

But Mr. Ogelby was a little hesitant. He finally peeled off a sawbuck and gave it to Max. "I'll take a chance on this thing once," he said.

Aromatic limped in eighth.

Max disappeared for a few hours. Finally he phoned Dorris, but she had checked out of the hotel.

"You're not by any chance Mr. Horwinsky, are you?" the clerk inquired politely.

"Yeah, that's me."

"We have a message here for you, sir."

It proved to be a note from Dorris. It read:

"Dear Max. Mr. Ogelby and I are going to be married this afternoon. I wish you all the luck in the world, only that system you figured out for suckers is screwy. I even fell for it myself and bet the bank roll. Hope you make out some way. Dorris."

Three months went by. Max received a letter one day with a check in it for two hundred dollars. The letter read:

"Dear Mr. Horwinsky: I've always felt that I owed you an apology for taking Dorris, who is now Mrs. Ogelby. And I owe you something more. My check is enclosed to cover it.

"I was not satisfied the day you gave me the tip on Aromatic. Being a school teacher, I did not think the word quite suitable for a horse, so I looked around for a better one and found it. Perhaps it did not occur to you that Balmy Day was running in the next race. I put the two hundred on him and he paid twenty to one. What spice has to do with a balmy day, I haven't the least conception, except that at the time I remembered that the air on balmy days of early summer is often spice-like. Anyway, I figured one was as good as the other. Dorris sends her regards.

"Very sincerely yours,
"Horace Ogelby."

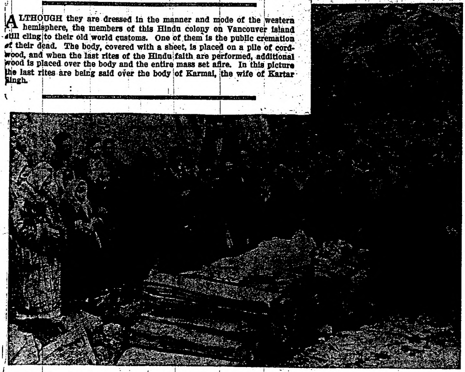
Old African Custom

African native customs die hard. The governor of Kenya (Sir Joseph Byrne), when taking an official tour in the gold area, was approached by a number of natives, who expressed consternation about the recent gold workings and feared that they would lose their land. Sir Joseph at once declared that there was no question of any native being deprived of any part of the reserve.

An aged chief stepped out of the crowd and asked the governor to supplement his assurance by swearing according to the custom of the Kakamega tribe. The chief held out a sword and a dog and asked the governor to cut the dog in half with the sword and to sprinkle the blood around. Sir Joseph Byrne tactfully declined the proffered dog and sword, emphasizing that the word of one of his majesty's governors should suffice.

Vancouver Hindus Cremate Their Dead Publicly

ALTHOUGH they are dressed in the manner and mode of the western hemisphere, the members of this Hindu colony on Vancouver island still cling to their old world customs. One of them is the public cremation of their dead. The body, covered with a sheet, is placed on a pile of cordwood, and when the last rites of the Hindu faith are performed, additional wood is placed over the body and the entire mass set afire. In this picture the last rites are being said over the body of Karmai, the wife of Kartar Singh.



BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

SAMMY JAY TAKES A HAND

SAMMY JAY was bubbling over with excitement as he flew through the Green Forest following Lightfoot the Deer. He was so excited he wanted to scream, but he didn't. He kept his tongue still. You see, he didn't want Lightfoot to know that he was being followed. Under that pointed cap of Sammy Jay's are quick wits. It didn't take him long to discover that the big stranger whom Lightfoot was seeking was doing his best to keep out of Lightfoot's way in which Lightfoot was searching for him. Lightfoot made so much noise that it was quite easy to know just where he was and so keep out of his way.

"I'll Have to Take a Hand in This Thing Myself," Muttered Sammy.

"That stranger is nearly as big as Lightfoot, but it is very plain that he doesn't want to fight," thought Sammy. "He must be a coward."

Now, the truth is, the stranger was not a coward. He was ready and willing to fight if he had to, but if he could avoid fighting he meant to. You see, big as he was, he wasn't quite as big as Lightfoot, and he knew it. He had seen Lightfoot's big footprints and from their size knew that Lightfoot must be bigger and heavier than he. Then, too, he knew that he really had no right to be there in the Green Forest. That was Lightfoot's home, and so he was an intruder. He knew that Lightfoot would feel this way about it and that this would make him fight all the harder.

So the big stranger wanted to avoid a fight if possible. But he wanted still more to find that beautiful young visitor with the dainty feet for whom Lightfoot had been looking. He wanted to find her, just as Lightfoot wanted to find her, and he hoped that if he should find her he could take her away with him back to the Great Mountain. If he had to he would fight for her, but until he had to he would keep out of the fight. So he dodged Lightfoot and at the same time looked for Miss Daintyfoot.

All this Sammy Jay guessed, and after a while he grew tired of following Lightfoot for nothing. "I'll have to take a hand in this thing myself," muttered Sammy. "At this rate Lightfoot never will find that big stranger!"

So Sammy stopped following Lightfoot and began to search through the Green Forest for the big stranger. It didn't take him very long to find him. He was over near the pond of Paddy the Beaver. As soon as he saw him Sammy began to scream at the top of his lungs. At once he heard the sound of snapping twigs at the top of the little ridge back of Paddy's pond, and knew that Lightfoot had heard and understood.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

TASTY GOOD THINGS

HERE is something which will be found new by most of us and is a most appetizing dish:

Egg Noodle Custard.

Take five ounces of egg noodles and cook until tender and well done, then drain. Add two cupfuls of milk and let them stand three-fourths of an hour. Add one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of lemon extract and the slightly beaten yolks of four eggs. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, add one-half cupful of sugar and fold into the above mixture. Pour into a buttered mold and bake one hour. Serve with:

Yankee Doodle Sauce.

Chop one-third of a cupful of candied ginger fine; add an equal quantity of ground orange rind, using only the yellow part. Add one-fourth of a cupful of pecan meats coarsely chopped, one-fourth teaspoonful of cinnamon if liked, and serve with thick cream to soften.

Spaghetti Caruso.

Take one-half pound each of spaghetti and fresh mushrooms, three-fourths of a cupful of butter or half cupful of olive oil, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of chicken stock, one-half cupful of cooked chopped chicken livers and parmesan cheese. Cook the spaghetti until tender, drain. Peel mushrooms and cut into small pieces, cook in the oil or butter about ten minutes, all the chicken stock, salt, and cook ten minutes more. Add the spaghetti and chicken liver and return to the heat just long enough to heat thoroughly. Serve with grated cheese.

Macaroni Alabam'.

Cook one-half pound of macaroni until tender, drain; add two cupfuls of milk very slowly to one-half cupful of peanut butter, making a creamy sauce, season with one teaspoonful of salt, add the macaroni and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs mixed with chopped peanuts and brown under the broiler.

CARD AND TUMBLER

TWO objects are required for this trick; namely, a playing card and a small drinking glass. Holding the card between the thumb and fingers of his right hand, the magician sets the tumbler on the card with his left hand.

Then he moves his left hand away. Amazingly, the tumbler balances upon the upper edge of the card and remains there until the performer removes it. The card and the glass may be examined afterward.

During this trick, the spectators see only the front of the card. A glance behind scenes would reveal the secret. The magician keeps only three fingers at the side of the card. His forefinger is back of the card.

Pointing upward, hidden by the card, the forefinger serves as an additional resting spot for the glass. The card and the finger are really the supports.

Let Not Affection Fade

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A SADDER sight the sad heart knows
Than petals falling from a rose,
Than dying grasses where a plain
No longer feels the kiss of rain,
Than shattered beauty when a tree
Lies postrate, never more to be:
Such things are even sadder when
They happen in the hearts of men.

For like a rose whose day is done,
Its petals falling one by one,
And like a plain whose withered grass
Shall never green again, alas,
And like a tree whose branches lie
Along the ground, to droop and die,
So is the careless fading of
That thing of beauty known as love.

Let not that sadness come to you
If there is anything to do:
A more forgiving tenderness
To make you love the more, not less,
Any eye for virtue, not for sin,
Since mortals all have both within—
Let every rose fall in the glade,
But not your own affection fade.

Magpies are easily tamed even when old, and soon become very amusing (and mischievous) like tamed crows. They are said to imitate the human voice and learn to say words.

Anyone Could Fly This Plane

THE airplane that is heralded as one that "even grandma can fly with ease and safety," is shown soaring through the sky at College Park airport, Washington, when it was put through tests for the benefit of the bureau of air commerce. The plane was designed and built by A. B. Green, and is a radical departure from usual airplane construction. It has a wing span of 36 feet, can fly 75 miles in an hour on 2½ gallons of gasoline, and weighs, empty, only 465 pounds. This ship will sell for about $700.

MINUTE GERMS SEEN BY TELEVISION AID

Tube Transmits Radio Pictures of Small Bodies.

Philadelphia.—Through a development, television may shortly assist medical science by making hitherto invisible germs visible, according to Philo T. Farnsworth, television pioneer.

By use of the special tube used in transmitting radio pictures, Farnsworth explained, infantile paralysis, cold and other germs can be subjected to ultra-violet light waves which are shorter and smaller than the rays of ordinary sunlight.

Pick Up Germ Images.

Because their size more nearly approaches the size of the mysterious bacteria, he said, the smaller rays can pick up images of the germs. The larger light rays are unable to pick up such images and convey them to the eye, even under the most powerful microscope.

But if this new method works out, Farnsworth predicted, pictures of many living disease-producing organisms will be seen for the first time and the work of fighting human ailments simplified.

Tube Picks Up Rays.

This will be possible, he continued, by placing known cultures of the bugs under a powerful microscope through which a stream of ultra-violet light is passed. The short wave rays then are picked up by the sensitive television tube, which acts much like a motion picture camera in photographing movement of the bacteria.

From the tube the ultra-violet light images are thrown onto a fluorescent screen and made visible.

Not only will medical men be able to see these tiny living things for the first time, Farnsworth went on, but—equally important—they will be able to see them alive.

King Edward VIII Likes Informality in Dress

London.—Just as he greatly influenced the trend of fashions as Prince of Wales, King Edward is already responsible for further changes since his accession to the throne of Great Britain.

The king dislikes unnecessary formality. No changes are likely in any of the great pageants like the trooping of the colors or the state opening of parliament, but on informal occasions it is the king's wish that minimum inconvenience should be caused to all concerned.

When he visited the British Industries fair as the first public engagement of his reign, the king let it be known that salesmen and officials who would be presented to him should wear derby hats instead of the traditional "topper" and cutaway. At the civil investiture at St. James palace members of the royal household were asked to wear morning instead of frock coats, hitherto customary. Except for members of the royal household and some elderly peers, the frock coat is little worn nowadays.

U. S. Ready to Purchase New Type Plane Engine

Washington.—The War department, it was learned, is preparing to place an order amounting to several millions of dollars for airplane engines of a new type which are described as "the most powerful in the world." The placing of the order, it is understood, awaits only the signature of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war.

Details of the engine development and the name of the manufacturers have not been disclosed, but it is known that tests have been made at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and that the officers assigned to conduct them have urged the acquisition of the engines, as part of the move to strengthen the G. H. Q. air force. Many of the new-type engines are expected to be installed in the aircraft ordered by the War department in December, when contracts were awarded for 115 new attack airplanes and 90 bombers. The 13 of the new bombers being built on the "flying fortress" design, it is understood, each will be powered with four of the new engines.

Whistler Makes Business of Her Trilling Powers

Seattle.—Nobody can tell Miss Lucia Carruthers, twenty-one years old, to go whistle for a living, for she already does. Whistling, says the pretty Seattle girl, is an art.

So she has opened a whistling studio and is building up groups of hobby and professional whistlers. She starts with the scale and breathing exercises, then progresses to bird calls and obligatos, with concert work the final step.

"Whistlers, like singers, must be born with a certain flexibility of the tongue," she said. "I've whistled all my life, but it's only in recent years that I've whistled seriously."

As a background for professional whistling, Miss Carruthers studied music at Washington State college and in Los Angeles.

Simplest Lie Detector Is "Few Good Drinks"

Hamilton, Ont.—One of the simplest and most effective "lie detectors" is liquor, in the opinion of Prof. Joslyn Rogers, Ontario analyst. Asked about lie detectors, Rogers said that he believed a few good drinks was as effective a way as any to get a man talking, and telling the truth.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Morning mists: Sometimes, there are compensations for getting up in what seems the middle of the night and going down the bay to meet an incoming liner. For instance, the other morning, just enough fog had descended over lower Manhattan to make over the famous sky-line into an entirely new picture. Great buildings seemed to be floating in mid-air while the towers of the Woolworth, Singer and other skyscrapers seemed isolated crags in a sea of vapor. Brooklyn bridge was bits of tracery and the Statue of Liberty a dim, hovering figure. Huge ferries seemed to come from nowhere and what looked like moving islands were merely barges pushed by tugs. The description sounds tame since, as a matter of fact, it was something to be seen rather than put into words.

* * *

For the working girl: The Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor has figured it out that a girl employed in an office must make an annual expenditure of at least $77.75. Some of the things on the list are four dresses at a total cost of $20; three hats, $6; four pairs of shoes, $12; a winter coat to last two years, at $6.25 a year, step-ins, $1.60; slips, $1.20, and vests, $1. The cost of a working man's clothing is estimated at $58.65 a year and that of a boy, $41 with an outlay of $34.50 for a young girl. A housewife need not spend more than $32.50 a year. But try to convince a lot of them!

* * *

Hat grabbing incident: The hat grabber is again becoming conspicuous. He or she is encountered just about everywhere. Many restaurants that in the lean days dispensed with hat grabbers, have again installed them—which is a sign possibly of returning prosperity, since hat checking concessions cost money. Well, the other night, a dapper young gentleman, after retrieving his hat, coat and stick, thrust something into an outstretched paw. The hat grabber promptly let out a yell. Instead of coin, he'd received a raw oyster. By the time he recovered enough to go into action, the dapper young man had vanished.

* * *

Modern miracles: A friend, who is desirous of remaining anonymous, discovered when he reached his home that he had either lost or had been robbed of his wallet. Having entered a taxi at Broadway and Forty-seventh street, he promptly returned. And lying on the sidewalk, scuffed by many feet, was the wallet which, in addition to valuable papers and identifications, contained $73.

* * *

An intoxicated young man fell down the concrete steps of the city subway station at Central Park West and One Hundred and Fourth street. Six men rushed to his rescue. He was badly hurt and the station agent telephoned for an ambulance. Just after he had done so, a well-dressed woman came on the scene. She immediately offered to return to her home and telephone. Assured that an ambulance had been called, she waited until it actually arrived and in the meanwhile made this young fellow as comfortable as possible. Hard-hearted New York!

* * *

Travel note: Tourists who return from Caribbean trips find their liquor purchases piled separately from their regular purchases. Presumably, that's for the convenience of the customs gentlemen who have to check to see if the $800 limit has been exceeded. But what I started out to say was that West Indies' tourists can be distinguished from the European kind by their baskets. Few visit the smiling isles without returning with many samples of native handicraft. Whether they learn to carry them on their heads or not is something that hasn't been ascertained.

Science Confirms Belief That Fish Is Brain Food

Chicago.—The tradition that fish food is a boon to mental faculties may not be so far from the truth, according to experiments conducted at Elgin Hospital for the Insane. Certain diets materially affect the mental balance of an individual, it was shown.

Intelligence tests at the end of 12 months showed that those on a diet, heavy in vitamin A, B-1, B-2 and D as well as iron, as found in liver extracts and cod liver oil, had gained the equivalent of 14.15 months of mental age, whereas non-dieters gained only 2.41 months of mental age.

MOST every summer I manage to spend a week or so with my good friend Ed Freeman of Green Valley, Maine, and during the course of my visit he invariably provides me with subject matter for at least one story. Last week he told me about Cedric Wigglesworth, the schoolmaster of Cherry Creek.

"He's an old man now, Cedric is. Must be near eighty." Ed stuffed tobacco into his pipe and went on: "Seems like yesterday. Yep, yesterday. In the fall it was, and beginning to get cold. Purty, too. Leaves all red and yellow and orange. Cider time. Yep, cider time.

"Me and Gracie Bartlette had hooked a ride into town with Gracie's paw, old Dan Bartlette. Dan was bringing apples to the mill, and after we left the load he drove down to the post office and to the store. Then's when I first seen Cedric. He came outter the hotel and stood fer a minute on the piazza, talking with Abe Fairbairn, and pretty soon Abe looked across at us an' pointed. Cedric nodded and smiled and came down the steps and headed for our wagon. Folks lounging around watched him and some of them snickered and made remarks about his clothes and his yellow shoes.

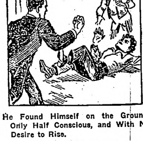
"Just as Cedric reached the wagon Gracie's paw came outter the store and Cedric looked at him and said: 'Good morning, sir. Are you Mr. Bartlette the school committee man?'

"Well, Gracie's paw, a stern old boy with a big paunch and a rumbling voice, allowed that he was, and waited.

"'In that case,' said Cedric, 'you're the man I want to see. My name's Cedric Wigglesworth and I understand you're looking for a schoolmaster. I'd like the job.'

"I remember thinking how that was the first time I'd ever seen Gracie's paw smile. And I remember what a howl of laughter went up from the loungers. Then Gracie's paw said: 'Well, yes, son, you heard right. But I don't think you'd qualify. In the fust place, your name's again yuh, and in the second—'

"But the other qualifications were drowned in a howl of amusement from the bystanders. Cedric flushed down to the roots of his hair, and Gracie's paw looked around at them and scowled. He was a fair man, and for all his bluffness he possessed an understanding of human nature. He turned back to Cedric, and he says: 'Son, I'm sorry I laughed that way. Now you climb up there in my wagon and drive along with me a bit an' we'll talk it over.'



He Found Himself on the Ground, Only Half Conscious, and With No Desire to Rise.

"Well, Cedric climbed up on to the seat of the wagon, looking strangely incongruous there, and we drove out of town. Me and Gracie could hear everything that was said. We could hear Mr. Bartlette in his slow, patient way explaining to Cedric that the schoolmaster of Cherry Creek had to have more than book learnin'. He had to have hard muscle and weight, and aptitude in handling his hands, and other things necessary to keep a bunch of wild, half-grown country boys under control. 'The last schoolmaster,' Gracie's paw finished, 'tried to lick Slim Thomas, an' got a broken jaw outter it. He quit.'

"You would have thought that Cedric would know better. But apparently he didn't, because he kept sayin' he'd like the job anyhow, and felt sure he could teach the kids something without having to beat it into 'em. After a while Gracie's paw looked down into his serious, rather effeminate face an' says: 'All right, son. Ef you feel that way about it the job's yourn. But don't say I didn't warn yuh.'

"And so the next day Cedric appeared at the Cherry Creek school. It was kinda laughable, because the kid wasn't more'n 5 feet 8 or 9 inches tall an' musta weighed under 140 pounds. An' them kids he was delegated to teach were six-footers. I mean, the boys. Slim Thomas was 6 foot 2 inches an' weighed around 200 pounds.

"But that wasn't anywheres near as funny as what followed. Cedric surprised everyone. Before a month had passed he had them six-footers eatin' out of his hand and doin' his biddin' like first-class butlers. An, the reason wasn't because he licked 'em, either. He didn't. No, sir, he didn't lay a hand on one of 'em. He simply made 'em like him. They played their jokes and tried to torment him, but he only smiled and took it all in good part, and pretty soon those youngsters began to realize that the new schoolmaster was their friend and wanted to help 'em.

"That is, all but Slim Thomas. Slim never got over the fact that when he put the skunk in Cedric's desk Cedric laughed louder than anyone else. And when he waylaid the schoolmaster the night before the barn dance and accidentally pushed him off Cherry Creek bridge into the water, Cedric thought it was a great joke, even though he was wearin' his Sunday clothes. No, Slim never let up with his plaguing and always hoped some day Cedric would get mad an' try an' lick him. But Cedric never did. Or not till a whole year had passed.

"Folks about the town liked Cedric, too, though they didn't understand him, and this annoyed them. There was a reticence about the lad that sometimes got under their skin. Country folks don't like to think there is anything about their neighbors they don't know about.

"No explanation was offered until after that first year. Then it all come in a bunch. It happened the day after school closed in June. Cedric had failed to pass Slim Thomas into a higher grade and Slim was mad and out for revenge. He was standing with a group of loungers in front of the hotel when Cedric rode into town with Mr. Bartlette. The schoolmaster had a suitcase with him and he was dressed for traveling. As he came toward the hotel Slim Thomas said sneeringly: 'Here comes the sissy. Ain't he the cute one though!'

"No one guessed even remotely at what was to happen. Cedric came on, but instead of continuing into the hotel he set down his suitcase and crossed over to Slim. 'Slim,' he said, 'school is not in session now and no one can hold me responsible for what I'm about to do. Get on your guard!"

"Slim was too overcome with astonishment to reply, and before he could collect his senses something smote him on the jaw with force enough to cause his teeth to chatter. He blinked, but didn't fall. Again something hit him on the jaw, and presently the same something connected with his nose and caused blood to appear. His left eye received the same treatment, and then his right. He choked and sputtered and swore and struck out wildly, but his ham-like fists flayed only the atmosphere. After a moment he felt something in his throat and knew it was a front tooth. Then he found himself on the ground, only half conscious, and with no desire to rise.

"Cedric turned around and stalked over to Gracie's paw. 'Well, Mr. Bartlette,' he says, 'I guess I prove you wrong on both counts. I taught your school without beating up the kids, and now I've licked your town bully.'

"Gracie's paw permitted himself one of his rare smiles. 'Son, I takes off my hat to you. The job's yours as long as you want it, and we're mighty proud to have you as the Cherry Creek schoolmaster. I reckon now us folks can understand what sort of a chap you are.'

"'Which is why,' said Cedric, 'you can all take your job and go to the devil with it. I despise this place and everyone in it, for reasons which you've just stated. I wouldn't stay on here for ten times the salary. Good day, Mr. Bartlette, and the rest of you thick-skulled yokels!'

"And that's the last we ever saw of Cedric Wigglesworth, and to this day none of the folks of Cherry Creek have ever been able to understand the little schoolmaster with the store clothes, which may or may not explain why the town is no bigger today than it was then."

Authenticity of Joan's Sword Causes Argument

The dispute in France concerning the authenticity of the sword of Joan of Arc, now held in the museum of Dijon, is of interest to many Americans who make a visit to this historic site a part of a trip to Europe. The sword is one of the prize attractions of the museum, and dates back to the Fifteenth century, writes a correspondent in the Detroit News.

For the present, the "No men" are capturing most of the publicity, and evidence is presented showing that the sword must have been manufactured after Joan's death. They point out that the decorations of the sword, particularly the costume of the kneeling figure which is engraved on the blade, belong to the 1575 period, while Joan went to her fate in Rouen market place in 1531. Hence this sword was never in her possession.

But the "Yes men" have a plausible explanation, and quote a hitherto unpublished letter, signed by Prosper Merimee, which recently came to light.

He suggests that the sword, engraved with the words "Vavcovlev" and "Charles Septieme," was really given to Joan by the Sire de Baudricourt when he lent her a few men-at-arms to escort her from Vaucouleurs to seek the king at Bourges. He declares that she wore the sword, but never used it in battle, and that the engravings which seem to point to a later date—were added after her death when the weapon had already become a relic.

Dade Memorial Park

Dade Memorial park, in Florida, is a memorial to Maj. Francis L. Dade and his company of 103 men who were killed in an Indian massacre. The 80-acre tract, near Bushnell, was purchased by act of the Florida legislature in 1921 and various appropriations were made to improve the site.

Fuel Required by Liner

The amount of fuel a liner requires depends on the size of the ship and on the speed maintained. The Leviathan burned about 900 tons of coal per day. A freight and passenger vessel of about 5,000 tons, in a trip across the Atlantic taking 12 or 13 days would burn about 30 tons a day.

Just a Little Smile

OLD WIVES' TALE

A backwoods mountaineer one day found a mirror which a tourist had lost.

"Well, if it ain't my old dad," he said, as he looked in the mirror. "I never knowed he had his pitcher took."

He took the mirror home and stole into the attic to hide it. But his actions didn't escape his suspicious wife. That night while he slept she slipped up to the attic and found the mirror.

"Hum-um," she said, looking into it, "so that's the old hag he's been chasin'."—Cherokee (Kan.) Sentinel.

But Love Conquers All

For a lad who had recently got himself engaged to a beautiful and attractive young woman, his face was radiating a surprisingly small amount of rapture.

"I've got a five-thousand-a-year girl," he confided gloomily.

"Well, then," said his friend, heartily, "you're fixed for life."

More Polite Politics

"How is politics in Crimson Gulch?"

"All right," said Bronco Bob. "We're getting rid of the idea that when a man runs for office the boys get out with so many six shooters that the only thing for him to do is to keep on running."

Epitaphorisms

"Do you think we should speak ill of those who have passed from this life?"

"No," said Miss Cayenne. "But I can't see the wisdom of trying to assert tombstone epitaphs as political doctrine."

Woman Patron Buying Ham Asks Butcher to "Burger" It

He was just a country butcher, but he deals with a lot of city slickers and he must be alert to see to it they put nothing over on him. He was discussing the suggestion that many of the customers who come to him are so dumb that he could sell them tripe for porterhouse steak. As an example he explained that a woman came into his shop and asked for a pound of ham. This he cut, and then to his surprise the customer said, "Now please burger it."

The butcher did not grasp the request immediately, and then it dawned upon him that the buyer wanted meat for a hamburger steak. Trying to explain the makings used for a hamburger, the woman became very indignant, saying she knew what she wanted.

Not willing to accept his explanation, he did the next best thing and ran the slice of ham through the chopper, wrapped it up, and the customer went away in contentment. Her subsequent visits to the store were friendly and the subject was never mentioned.—New York Sun.

CONSTIPATED 30 YEARS

"For thirty years I had chronic constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pain in the back. Adlerika helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and never felt better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life."—Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adlerika. Many report action in 30 minutes after taking just one dose. Adlerika gives complete action, cleaning your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a real cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

A GREAT CONTRIBUTION TO EASIER, FASTER MORE ECONOMICAL FARMING

Guarantee—This heavy, Super-Traction tread is guaranteed not to loosen from the tire body under any conditions, and all other parts of the tire are fully guaranteed to give satisfaction.

THREE years ago Harvey S. Firestone conceived the idea that farm work would be easier, faster, and more economical if it were done on rubber.

It was on the Old Homestead farm in Columbiana County, Ohio, which Mr. Firestone still operates, that he directed engineers and developed a practical pneumatic tire for tractors and every other wheeled implement on the farm. The result was a super-traction tire so unusual in design and so amazing in performance that a patent was issued on the tire by the United States Patent Office at Washington.

On tractors, Firestone Ground Grip Tires will do the work 25 per cent faster with a saving of 25 per cent in fuel cost. On sprayers, combines, binders and other farm implements they reduce draft 40 to 50 per cent; do not pack the soil, sink into soft ground or make ruts; protect equipment; do not damage crops and vines; speed up every farm operation.

One set of tires will fit several implements. Tires can be changed quickly from one implement to another. Two or three sets are all you need to take care of practically all your farm implements.

See the Firestone Tire Dealer, implement dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today—and in placing your order for new equipment, be sure to specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires on your new tractor or farm implement.

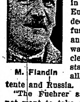
Flandin Calls on Germany for a Showdown



M. Flandin

PIERRE-ETIENNE FLANDIN, French foreign minister, speaking at Vezelay, demanded in the name of his government that Adolf Hitler lay his cards on the table, and intimated that unless Germany gives concrete proof of no aggressive intentions in central or western Europe, France will decline to negotiate further with the reich and will prepare for war. Flandin made it clear that France will stand firmly with her allies, the little entente and Russia. Said he:

"The Fuehrer says Germany does not want to take anything from anybody, but he already had said that after the Saar plebiscite. He then also reaffirmed the Locarno treaty, which since has been repudiated. In the name of the integral sovereignty of the German people, does the Fuehrer intend, when he thinks the moment favorable, to bring up the Danzig question?

"When he proposes a nonaggression pact with Lithuania does he accept definitely the status of Memel or is he just stalling for time to prepare new deeds of force in violation of treaties?

"If Germany intends to assert her right to possess and exploit colonies, what colonies is she going to claim?

"Is it not significant that at the moment Hitler launches his peace appeal, Nazi propaganda is redoubling in Austria, Danish Schleswig, Polish Silesia, among the German minority in Czechoslovakia, and even in German Switzerland?

"Yes or no, does Hitler renounce annexation and even full absorption of the populations of these territories into the reich, or does he proclaim that these are internal affairs of the German people in which he does not intend to let other nations meddle?

"If the latter case be the truth, then we understand why Germany is rearming at a record pace."

Germany Almost Solidly Supports Hitler

GERMANY'S men and women to the number of 44,389,140 declared by their votes in the reichstag elections that they supported the policies of Hitler. Only 542,898 had the nerve to vote against the reichsfuehrer, and a still smaller fraction refused to go to the polls. Among the latter were the former Crown Prince Ruprecht of Bavaria and his wife.

Hitler's victory was thus extraordinarily complete, and the Nazis celebrated it with wild rejoicings in Berlin and other cities. It was the culmination of a three years' campaign in which the leaders sought to persuade the population of the reich that only Hitler could save the country from great danger. According to Berlin correspondents, there was a difference of opinion there as to the influence the triumph would have on the fuehrer. Some said it would stiffen his back and induce him to ride roughshod over the powers which objected to his scrapping of the Locarno pact. Others said the election would make him feel so strong he would be willing to make a concession to his neighbors in an effort to help establish "the new order in Europe" to which he referred so frequently in his election speeches.

The new reichstag will be the largest in history, having about 740 members. Most of them will be officials of the Nazi party.

For the first time in the history of aviation a polling booth was established in the air. It was aboard the new dirigible Von Hindenburg, whose 104 passengers and crew voted solidly for Hitler. The Hindenburg and the Graf Zeppelin cruised over the Saar and the Rhineland all day long.

Japan Expects Trouble With Soviet Russia

Eiji Amau

THOUGH Koki Hirota, the new Japanese premier, said a few days ago that while he was in office there would be no war, it is evident his government really is looking for serious trouble with Russia. This feeling is expressed by Eiji Amau, spokesman for the Tokyo foreign office, who said: "Japan must prepare for Soviet aggression."

Recent activities indicate the Reds are availing themselves of the critical situation which developed after the recent military revolt in Tokyo and are increasing the strength of their troops along the Manchukuan border."

Amau said the "recent Soviet policy has been to fire on any persons near the border." He said he regards this as rather strange behavior on the part of a "friendly neighbor." He said Premier Hirota had protested the alleged action to K. K. Yurenev, Russian ambassador to Japan.

Almost every day there are reports of clashes on the Mongolian border, each side blaming the other as aggressors. The Outer Mongolian government, reinforced by conclusion of its mutual assistance pact with Soviet Russia, dispatched a note to the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchukuo, declaring its readiness to resist any invasion.

Italian Bombers Wreck Second Ethiopian City

MUSSOLINI'S air bombers were busy again in Ethiopia, virtually ruining Harar, second city of that country, with a downpour of explosives. Most of the populace had fled when scouting planes gave a warning of what was to come, so the casualties were few. An official telephone message from Harar to Addis Ababa said fifteen incendiary bombs struck the Egyptian Red Cross hospital and others hit the Ethiopian Red Cross hospital.

A French mission, the French consulate, the Ethiopian radio station and prison all were reported officially to have been ruined.

The attack on Harar, coupled with a heavy bombardment of Jijiga, fifty miles east of Harar and a center of Ethiopia's southern defenses, raised native fears in Addis Ababa that the capital itself might be the next target

Government in Business Decried by Committee

ACCORDING to the committee on government competition with private enterprise, whose report has been made to the President, that practice is wholly destructive except in situations where the public welfare can only thus be served. "The government's function," the report said, "is to protect economic activities of its citizens and not to supplant them."

The committee unanimously agreed that only under the following conditions is the government justified in entering into competition with private enterprise:

1. When required to assure adequate preparation for, and creation of, the facilities for national defense.
2. For the conservation of natural resources.
3. When private enterprise fails to conduct needed scientific research and exploratory activities to advance industrial development, or in the interest of public health and safety.
4. When private enterprise fails to render a service necessary for the general welfare.

Alien Deportation Bill Reported to Senate

Secretary Perkins

DESPITE vigorous opposition, which will reappear on the floor of the senate, the senate committee on immigration and naturalization reported favorably the Kerr-Coolidge alien deportation bill, which Secretary Perkins has been trying to get through congress for three years. It will give her and two other members of an interdepartmental board discretionary power to harbor radical and even criminal aliens, otherwise deportable, in this country. The same bill recently was reported favorably by the house committee.

Pending action by congress on the measure, Secretary Perkins has been holding up the deportation of some 2,800 aliens mandatorily deportable under existing law, contending that they are "hardship cases." Some are radicals, some have criminal records, and others entered the country illegally. By "hardship cases" Secretary Perkins means that they would be separated from family ties or put to some other inconvenience.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina, Democrat, not long ago attacked the action of Secretary Perkins in holding up the deportations and denounced the pending bill as a "sham and a mockery" and a subterfuge to shield all kinds of radicals, criminals, and dependents unlawfully in this country.

Secretary Perkins refused to produce information respecting the 2,800 "hardship" cases until Reynolds introduced a senate resolution, whereupon she permitted him to examine the records.

Third Party Is Favored by Farmer-Laborites

FORMATION of a third national party was suggested in a resolution adopted by the Farmer-Labor party convention at St. Paul, Minn., and the delegates noisily welcomed the hint that Gov. Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota might be its Presidential candidate in 1940. Just now Mr. Olson is after a seat in the senate. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 368½ to 250½ although several leaders pleaded that the move be put off for four years.

Governor Olson said privately that in his opinion the resolution could do no harm since it does not commit the liberals to putting a national ticket in the field this year. Neither does it authorize formation of such a ticket unless a second convention convenes and ratifies any action a proposed "exploratory conference" may take.

Emperor of Iran Permits Women to Doff Their Veils

Reza Shah Pahlevi, emperor of Iran, finally has assented to the proposal that women be allowed to unveil. They are not required to do so, but no hindrance may be placed in the way of those who wish to discard the age-old custom of their land. This innovation marks the end of the seclusion of Iran women, and undoubtedly will be hailed as the beginning of a new era in the lives of these women.

LONG SENTENCE

"Ulysses," by James Joyce, is believed to contain the longest sentence ever written in any novel since the introduction of punctuation. It is composed of more than 12,000 words, says Collier's.

MELVIN PURVIS, formerly America's ace G-Man, who directed the capture of Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, "Baby Face" Nelson, and others. Mr. Purvis reveals here the methods used in capturing criminals. Names and places have been changed. In today's story Mr. Purvis tells of the hunt for the "McManus Train Robbers." The G-Men received a "tip-off" that the gang had headquarters near a small Wisconsin town. Purvis had just located the gang's hide-out, and had sent wires calling the G-Men, when...

WHY THE GANGSTERS WERE BAFFLED BY MELVIN PURVIS' WIRE: Melvin Purvis had sent two wires, by different telegraph companies—and had sent alternate letters from his message in each wire. The two telegrams looked like this:

HVLCTDCAUHNOTE
TEIHMNTETNGTUVS

AEOAEMMNSAGUME
MWT3EATNOIHPRI

Which, when decoded by the "alternate letter" method, read:

HAVELOCATEDMCMANUS

"HERE'S the swellest breakfast treat you ever tasted," says Melvin Purvis—"a big bowlful of Post Toasties!"

And you'll agree with him! For Post Toasties are made from the tender, sweet little hearts of the corn, where most of the flavor is. And each golden flake is toasted double crisp so it will keep its crunchy goodness longer in milk or cream. Get Post Toasties now—the Better Corn Flakes! And join the Junior G-Man Corps—Melvin Purvis wants you as a member!

25 Years Ago

H. O. Jackson left for Fort Francis to be employed at the new sawmill being completed there.

Mrs. Hans Wilson purchased the Chas. Fellman residence property on Third Street.

Mike Anderson bought a half interest in a saloon business at Baudette and was to move there with his family that spring.

The lumber company decided on a location on Railroad avenue and was to start erection of sheds for its retail yard.

Hazel, fifteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Showalter, formerly of St. Hilaire, died at her home at Coleraine after a long illness.

N. N. Larson, formerly buttermaker for the local creamery, accepted a similar position with Bridgeman-Russel at Crookston, and moved with his family to that city last week.

Red Lake Falls announced it was to have a new 75 barrel flour mill that year. A sawmill also was contemplated in that city.

HOME MANAGEMENT LEADERS WILL MEET

With 284 members signed up for the home management project, Pennington County's four-months' campaign for better kitchens and management will spring into action next week, when the leader training sessions on the first meeting will be conducted by R. M. Douglass, county agent, assisted by Miss Charlotte Kirchner of University Farm, St. Paul.

On Monday, April 20th, the first of these meetings will be held at the Civic and Commerce rooms at Thief River Falls for leaders from the following groups: Sanders, Thief River Falls, North, Steiner, Silverton, Rocksbury, Smiley, Norden and Numedal. The second meeting will be at the Bilden and Olson Hall at St. Hilaire Tuesday, for leaders of groups from River Falls, St. Hilaire, Wyandotte and Bray. The third meeting for leaders of Cloverleaf, Goodridge, Highlanding and Star groups will be conducted at the church basement in Goodridge, Wednesday, April 22. The meetings will start promptly at ten o'clock and hold until four p. m.

The leaders from each local group will attend these meetings and take back the information given by Miss Kirchner to the respective groups. Mr. Douglass states that there are 21 groups with a total enrollment of 284 homemakers. The registration is one of the heaviest ever made in the county for a similar project and a great deal of interest is being shown.

Immediately following the leader training meetings, the leaders will call their groups together and present the subject, "The Home Work Shop", which deals principally with the arrangement of kitchen equipment and grouping and storage of supplies for the convenience of the workers. A potato trial will be featured at the meeting.

GROUPS FORMED IN SOIL PROJECT

The series of educational meetings to explain the new soil conservation program have now been completed in Pennington County. Attendance has been good, considering the weather and the condition of the roads, County Agent Douglass said. The county is divided into thirteen communities in each of which a committee of three has been elected by the members to carry out the program.

The chairman of each community committee is a member of the county board, which meets at 10 o'clock Saturday morning in the Civic and Commerce rooms in the Auditorium at Thief River Falls for the purpose of electing the county committee and other county officers as well as to take care of the other necessary requirements for the organization.

All of the committeemen will attend a county school of instruction Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock to get the information necessary to execute the work sheets. Some day next week the community committees will meet at some central location in their respective communities and every farmer is urged to go to that place to make out the work sheet. Dates and location of these meeting places will be announced later. Every farmer will be required to execute the work sheet before the soil depleting base can be established on any farm. It will speed up progress of the work if every farmer will cooperate with his committee in making out the work sheet, Mr. Douglass said.

Largest Rattles on Snakes

The largest rattle on any rattlesnake found had 84 segments. The segments do not indicate the age of the snake because a new rattle is added each time the skin is shed, which may occur three or four times a year. The older and larger snakes frequently lose terminal rattles which are broken off.

WHIST SESSIONS END WEDNESDAY

Third and final meeting of the whist tournament for this season was held last night at the Bilden & Olsen hall. In the session held Thursday night of last week, the Orange side repeated their performance of first game of the series by administering a drubbing to the Golds. Cheered by their previous success, they started last night's session by taking the first game, but were halted when the Golds staged a rally and forged ahead in the second round. At the end of five rounds, the Gold side had piled up a larger margin than the combined lead of the Orange side in two previous sessions. Winners enjoyed a sumptuous lunch—paid for by the losers—at Walt's Lunch, while the losers gathered at Johnson's Cafe to figure out the cause of their sudden reverse of fortune. Because spring work will be under way next week which will prevent attendance of people from the country, it is likely no other meetings will be held until next fall.

MANY UNEMPLOYED REFUSE FARM JOBS

Due to the fact that a large number of persons are declining to accept farm jobs and are expecting to be placed as common laborers on road construction projects, officials of the district office of the National Reemployment service in this city stated today that all persons who are to be employed as common laborers will be those from the relief rolls and those considered borderline cases on the relief rolls. Only those non-relief persons skilled in the operation of road building equipment and who have had experience in some particular phase of road construction will be placed.

Farm hands are greatly in demand and persons desiring this type of employment are requested to contact the nearest NRS office at once. With the approach of the sugar beet season the beet workers are in demand and the office now has lists furnished by the American Crystal Sugar Company of farmers desiring beet workers.

All persons having trucks in good condition and well equipped for gravel hauling are asked to contact the local office as soon as possible as considerable graveling will be done this season.

The M. E. Community Ladies Aid will be entertained by Mesdames Freeman Allen, C. R. Huff, H. R. Allen and W. Corbet at the church Friday afternoon this week. All are welcome.

PARENT-TEACHERS MEET HELD FRIDAY

Miss M. Beatrice Johnstone, past president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and now head of the Extension division of the University of North Dakota, gave a most interesting and instructive talk here at monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association held last Friday night at the school building.

Miss Johnstone stressed the importance of Parent-Teachers associations and community clubs as means of promoting harmony and neighborly spirit in any community. Especially fitted because of long experience in teaching and executive work, Miss Johnstone's present work is largely with community organizations of different kinds, and she is able to put across in plain, but effective language, just the message she intends to convey. The school assembly was filled to overflowing for this meeting and all present were more than pleased with Miss Johnstone's talk. She will be welcome here at any time it may be convenient for her to come.

Musical selections by a reed quartet, and vocal selections by a male trio were other numbers on the program. At conclusion of the program lunch was served, and later a social hour enjoyed.

BORGENS TO PRESENT PLAY WEDNESDAY

The Popular Borgen players next Wednesday evening, April 29, will present the laughable comedy "Ole in the South Seas" at the Bilden and Olson hall. A free dance for patrons will follow the show.

Ludvig Larson and family of Holt, have leased the Avelson farm west of the village and moved onto it this week.

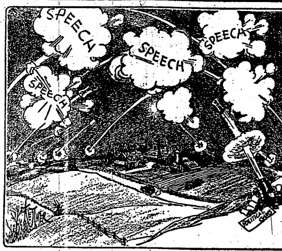
Miss Huldah Gigstad left Friday to resume her teaching work at Moorhead after having spent Easter vacation at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Phillips and daughter motored here Sunday from Bemidji and visited until Monday at the Norman Bergh and Otto Johnson homes.

Regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the creamery was held Monday at the creamery office. Anton Johnson was present for the first time following his recent illness.

Sound, healthy teeth in a clean mouth are like a well-guarded gate which keeps many enemies out of the body.

The Battle Is On



Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Larson Bros. have put in a big line of James Way poultry equipment of all kinds.

Regular monthly meeting of the school board was held at the school office Tuesday night.

Mrs. O. Gunstad returned Friday after spending a week with her mother and sisters at Minneapolis.

A young son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hauge of Bagley, is reported to be quite ill with an attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. F. Boltman and daughter of Grand Forks, are guests this week at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lester Olson.

Emil Ensrud left this morning over the wheat line of the Soo for St. Thomas, N. D., where he will be employed on a farm the coming season.

At meeting of the creamery board last Monday, decision was made to establish a cream route in the vicinity of Wylie. Other routes may be added later.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sande and daughter have moved from the Bilden residence, where they resided during the winter, to the H. L. Hanson house on Water street.

After having spent the winter months at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Glenn Martz at Minneapolis, Mrs. B. E. Burkee is expected to return here last of this week or first of next to occupy her residence for the summer months.

A very successful auction sale of farm equipment was held yesterday at the Phil Anderson farm south of town. Everything offered brought a fair price. Mr. Anderson and family will move to Joliet, Ill., latter part of June.

P. A. Hallstrom was in the village Wednesday for a short visit with friends and former neighbors. Mr. Hallstrom has made his home with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. O. Mosbeck in Polk Center since he left the village last year.

Some seeding was done as early as last week on the ridges west of here. This week many farmers have been out dragging and getting their fields ready for seeding. On the heavy land, field work may not be started until next week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord and son, Tommy, of Fosston, and Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Skatrud of Argyle motored here Thursday evening for a short visit with friends and former neighbors. Messrs. Reiersgord and Skatrud took part in the whist tournament held that evening while the others visited at the Jackson home.

Harwood Olsen motored over to Oklee last Saturday and returned the same day.

Final date for payment of electric light and power bills with discount, is next Tuesday, April 28th.

Postponed meeting of the Woman's Club will be held at the B. M. Club rooms this evening.

Vern Lindquist has traded his 1929 Ford coach to Henry Sande and is now driving a Ford sedan.

Rev. M. L. Dahle motored Monday to Grand Forks to attend to business matters. He returned that evening.

M. H. Jackson is offering some extra good grocery specials for the next few days. See his adv elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Jensen returned Sunday after being called last week to Minneapolis by the death of Mr. Jensen's father.

Just as a reminder that April is not much of a spring month, the mercury dropped to 18 above zero here Monday night this week.

Ed. Christensen is busy this week inclosing his new touring trailer car. He expects to have it ready for service in about two weeks.

Backing up of water because of snow filled drainage ditches, was the cause of several farms being flooded this week in vicinity of Alvarado.

Another light snow fell over this section early this morning. As the mercury was above freezing, the snow disappeared during the afternoon.

M. H. Jackson carries a full line of Peterson-Biddick chick starter and feeds at the same price at which it is sold at home station of the Peterson-Biddick Company.

The Borgen Players returned here fore part of the week after filling engagements in towns along the Duluth line west of Bemidji. They have a schedule that will keep them busy all season.

Following opening of drainage ditches in eastern part of this county and near the Red Lakes, water stage in the river here was at highest point this week that it has been this spring.

Cliff Schantzen's brother and his family came up recently from Ada to stay here until a prospective position materializes. In the meantime both men are busy at turning out rush work at the Service Motor Garage.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy has been at Thief River Falls every day this week to preside at meetings of the county board which had been in continuous session to consider old-age pension applications.

4-H CLUB PLAY TO BE GIVEN FRIDAY

The local 4-H Club will present a rollicking play entitled "What Love Can Do" at the school auditorium Friday evening this week. In addition to the play, there will be several musical selections during the evening. Admission has been set at 20 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. As the name suggests, most anything might be expected by those who attend the play, but let it suffice to say that there will be plenty of situations calling for good, hearty laughs. If you like good, wholesome entertainment, do not miss seeing this play.

HOME MANAGEMENT UNIT LEADERS MEET

Ten women, representing units from St. Hilaire, Bray, River Falls and Wyandotte met at a Leaders Meeting Tuesday, April 21st, at the club rooms in the Bilden & Olsen building.

Miss Charlotte Kirshmer of the Agricultural Extension Division of the University of Minnesota was in charge of the meeting. A most interesting and instructive lesson on arrangement of kitchen furniture and utensils was presented to the class.

The St. Hilaire Leaders group was organized with Mrs. J. A. Hansen as chairman and Mrs. Herman Jepson as secretary. The next leaders meeting will be held in St. Hilaire on May 19th.

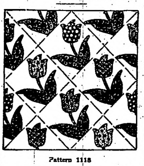
"Pride of the Garden," Lovely Applique Quilt, Easy and Inexpensive to Make



Pattern 1118

'Twill be the "Pride of the Garden," and also the pride of whatever bedroom it adorns—this lovely applique quilt. Quilt-makers, young and old, will find it fun to do, making the tulip flowers as varied as the scraps on hand, but keeping leaves and stems uniform. A very inexpensive quilt to make, it's one you can afford to give a bride-to-be. The tulips can also be used on scarfs and pillows to make your bedroom linens match.

Pattern 1118 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Ave., New York, N. Y.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Faribault—A talk by Mrs. John J. Louis of Minneapolis featured the annual meeting of the Third District Federation of Women's Clubs here. Mrs. Louis compared the problems of modern life to those besetting the nation during Abraham Lincoln's administration.

Gaylord—Political leaders and friends from all parts of the state attended the funeral of Senator Claude H. MacKenzie, Republican national committeeman, here. Business houses were closed for an hour and a half during the services at the home and at the church.

Slayton—With Amy Wessel and A. J. Kittelson, state club agents, in charge, leaders of the 4-H club conference of seven counties met in the Methodist Episcopal church here. Counties included in the conference were Pipestone, Lyon, Rock, Nobles, Jackson, Lincoln, and Murray.

Minneapolis—All Minnesota has its faith placed in Patty Berg as she sailed last week to participate in the Curtis Cup matches at Gleneagles, Scotland, on May 6. Miss Berg, darling of the Florida tournaments this past winter, will team with a host of famous feminine golfers in an effort to down the British aggregation.

St. Paul—Brainerd, Austin, Owatonna, Fergus Falls, Duluth, and St. Paul were the safest towns in Minnesota during the past year. These municipalities received plaques for outstanding work in the war against traffic fatalities. Rice, Big Stone, and Cottonwood counties were awarded first places in their respective divisions.

St. Paul—Arthur E. Nelson, twice mayor of St. Paul, has filed as a candidate for the lieutenant-governor nomination on the Republican ticket. Twenty-nine years old when elected to the mayoralty post, Nelson served two terms, retiring in 1926 to enter private law practice. In 1928 he was the Republican candidate for United States senator from Minnesota.

Minneapolis—George Roscoe, Central high school's greatest athlete in recent years, was honored at a dinner by fellow members of the Central "C" club. Modest Roscoe could hardly speak when asked to tell about his past accomplishments. He was a star halfback on the University of Minnesota national championship football team last fall, and for three years, has been the school's outstanding basketball player.

Rochester—Among famous physicians who will speak at the eighty-third annual meeting of the Minnesota Medical Association May 4, 5, 6, will be Dr. Ferdinand Sauerbruch, Berlin and Dr. Leon Asher, Berne, Switzerland. Dr. Sauerbruch is Geheimrat Professor and internationally know lung surgeon. Dr. Asher, noted physiologist, is professor of physiology at Berne University. Other speakers include: Dr. Donald Guthrie, Sayre, Pa.; Dr. Frederick A. Coller, Ann Arbor; Dr. Elliott P. Joslin, Boston; Dr. Willis Manges, Philadelphia, and Dr. Fred M. Smith, Iowa City.

Mound—A. B. Gilbert of Mound became the first aspirant for the republican nomination for governor to declare himself by filing for the office on April 17. In his statement at the time he urged the convention to use the slogan "to clear away the fog around tax matters including the retail sales tax," to work for non-political police and to fight for the full home market for farmers. Gilbert ran second for the same office two years ago, was an official of the Nonpartisan league until 1924 when he joined the Republican party over the issue of admitting communists to the League and trade unions.

Robbinsdale—Two men were arrested and a huge supply of bootleg liquor was seized as federal authorities raided a large rectifying plant near Robbinsdale. Evidence seems to link the plant with a ring of alcohol law violators who have been using diverted alcohol in the manufacture of gin and other liquors. Bottles of coloring and flavoring were found on the shelves of the plant, while cartons of empty containers and jugs of distilled water were scattered about the floor. The G-men claimed that hundreds of gallons of the bad liquor have been sold to customers through Twin City liquor stores.

Little Falls—A robber who hid in the automobile of a farmer while his car was parked during a shopping expedition escaped the arm of the law, but only after slugging and seriously injuring William Pedley and Leo Deering. Pedley and Deering were on their way home from Little Falls when the robber arose from the back seat, slugged Pedley, and pushed him into a ditch. The attacker forced Deering to drive the machine to a lonely spot where he sought to rob him. Though he had $50 hidden under the rear seat of the car, Deering said he had nothing. The assailant struck him on the head four times and fled.

Brainerd—Striped and pocket gophers and wood-chucks will lead precarious lives this spring and summer. The county board of Crow Wing county has decided to pay bounties again this year on the animals. This means pocket money for rural boys and girls who last year earned $1,564.78 in their hunt for the animals. The county board will pay the same bounties as of last year, 3 cents for ordinary striped gophers, 5 cents for pocket gophers and 10 cents for wood-chucks, the bounty being paid during the months of April, May and June.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

EVERYONE who sees Harriet Hilliard in "Follow the Fleet" or hears her sing on the radio with Ozzie Nelson's band ought to meet her as well; she's decidedly worth meeting. To begin with, she is much prettier in real life than in pictures. And to see her as the demure music teacher who, as Ginger Rogers' sister, falls in love with Randolph Scott, gives you no idea whatever of what sort of girl she is. She is magnetic, delightful, charming. And she is one of the few girls who have had a career thrust upon them.

She never did want to go on the stage, but she had to earn her living. And when she was very young her mother pointed out to her the fact that it's better to train for a profession that pays well than for one that never will bring in much money. "Better a dancer at one hundred a week than a stenographer at fifteen," said Mama, or words to that effect. So Harriet became a dancer. She appeared at one of Broadway's big movie houses, and on the road in musical shows. And she worked so hard that, at nineteen, she had to stop.

Katherine Hepburn

"If you want to get ahead in Hollywood nowadays, it's better not to be too good looking," remarked a fan magazine editor the other day. She has been meeting movie stars for some fifteen years now, and knows what she is talking about. "Hepburn isn't beautiful," said she. "Neither is Doris Dudley, RKO'S newest discovery. But they both have talent. Hollywood is too full of beauties who've been signed up for a few months, and more beauties who came out here hoping for the best, and finished as waitresses."

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America (what a title!) has decided that one week in May will be Memorial week for Will Rogers; during that week the Will Rogers Memorial at Saranac Lake will be dedicated. But Will Rogers did so many things that will make people remember him that he needs no other memorial. For example, he put his old friend, Fred Stone, into pictures; Fred is now established as a screen star, thanks to his work in "Alice Adams" almost a year ago. He also put another old friend, Irvin Cobb, on the screen. You've known of Cobb as a humorous writer, of course. For years he has been one of our most successful authors.

For a long time it has been Ruby Keeler's ambition to be a great woman golfer; being a good actress and a marvelous dancer meant little.

She's been playing golf for some time, and recently she went into the Southern California women's tournament, won three matches, and was put out in the last round. Looks as if she might achieve that ambition after all.

Bing Crosby

Did you hear the recent broadcast of Paul Whiteman's birthday celebration? Of course, it came at a bad hour—one-thirty in the morning, Eastern Standard time; NBC kept its line open after midnight for it. The Paul Whiteman alumni staged it—and what a list of well-known people once worked for Paul! Morton Downey, Bing Crosby, Jane Froman, Ferde Grofe and George Gershwin, the composers, and Mary Margaret McBride, whom you may have heard on the air as Martha Dean.

And, speaking of Morton Downey, he's sailing in May to keep concert engagements in England and Ireland—and how he loves to go to Ireland!

Here's a funny check-up on the popularity of radio programs. In London they've found that during a really big broadcast the consumption of water drops 85 per cent.

Justice Has to Fine Wife $10 for Speeding in Car

Earl A. Freeman, justice of the peace of Yuma, Ariz., fined his wife $10 for speeding. "I've known your husband for a long time and he sought to teach members of his family to drive carefully and observe all traffic laws," Judge Freeman said. "Your fine will be ten dollars." "Is this mine or your ten dollars?" he asked when she paid. "Yours," she replied, "I'll get another one tonight."

Is Bible Reading Champ; Holds Record of 125 Times

The story of the Bible is one that never grows old to Mrs. Kibbie Comer, eighty-nine, of Sherman, Texas. In 78 years of steady reading she has read the New Testament 125 times, the Old Testament, 63. She started her Bible reading at the age of twelve, when illness kept her from attending a church rally, but illness since then has seldom interrupted her favorite pastime. "We had no Sunday school literature when I was a girl," she said. "We just memorized five or six chapters of the Bible each week." At fifteen she had memorized half the New Testament. She believes the present generation is not as faithful to Bible teachings as hers.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building   Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It has been several months since the administration farm relief program, the agricultural adjustment act, was declared dead, but like the words of the song, "the memory lingers on." And it is quite apparent that mistakes as well as memories of the AAA will continue through the heat of the coming Presidential campaign and probably considerably longer for it is only necessary to recall that the stepbrother of the AAA, the federal farm board of the Hoover administration, still is the butt of much criticism and many pointed paragraphs.

Memory Lingers On

One of the main reasons why the memories linger on, where those memories involve AAA, is Michigan's Republican Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg. Senator Vandenberg never did get enthusiastic about the merits of AAA as they were expounded by Secretary Wallace, Administrator Chester Davis and other New Deal spokesmen and when the Supreme court of the United States threw out the processing taxes upon which the law was predicated, Senator Vandenberg was in a delightful spot from a political standpoint. He has not found it necessary to say "I told you so" and has had, I imagine, a great deal of personal fun in simply hinting to or reminding others of his previous stand.

But it was not until the Michigan senator began pulling figures out of his senatorial hat, showing how benefit payments from the AAA had gone to great and wealthy corporations in sums as high as a million dollars or more, that he held a key to the New Deal skeleton closet. They know now, however, exactly what he meant when he announced in the senate several weeks ago that no such plan as the AAA could be administered without vast sums being distributed in what he termed unwarranted payments—unwarranted from the standpoint of help for the smaller farmers.

Secretary Wallace stalled off Senator Vandenberg's demand in the senate for a complete list of beneficiaries who received checks from AAA in excess of one thousand dollars for quite a while but there were too many senators who believed as Senator Vandenberg did, that the truth ought to be known. Of course, as the procedure usually goes in Washington, many things are done without actual force being used. It was thus in the case of the AAA payments. Democratic senators who foresaw their inability to prevent a senate vote demanding a list of AAA payments persuaded Mr. Wallace to make public the list voluntarily and it was done just in advance of senate action. So, we now have for the first time, at least, an indication of the grotesque results of the agricultural adjustment administration program that was hailed from the Atlantic to the Pacific as an ideal plan.

* * *

The dynamite in the situation lies in the fact that there were dozens, even hundreds, of corporations which received AAA checks among the big bounties paid to induce curtailment of basic foreign crops. This would not be so bad except for the fact that the brilliant planners of the AAA continuously stressed its value to the small, debt ridden farmers. Throughout the time the law was under consideration and, through the two years of its operation, never did Mr. Wallace or Mr. Davis fail to point out in their numerous speeches how great sums of money, collected in processing taxes, were being distributed to thousands of farmers and that these payments were in time going to put agriculture on its collective feet.

Dynamite in It

Now, however, the truth of their statements has been proved but when the whole truth had been exposed on the floor of the senate, it was found to go far beyond the small, debt ridden farmers.

The whole truth disclosed, in fact, that several million dollars had been paid even to corporations chartered by the British government and with home offices in England. Wall Street, that home of "entrenched greed," received its share and its share was substantial. On top of all of this there lately has come a disclosure that a great wheat farmer in Montana received something like $50,000 for agreeing not to plant wheat on land which he had rented from the Indians through the Federal Department of the Interior for the specific purpose of raising wheat.

The list of huge benefit payments is much too large to include in this letter but the fact remains that it showed how even the best laid plans of mice and men oft go astray, even when those men are brilliant brain trusters who themselves claim to know all there is available for human understanding. Beyond that, the Vandenberg disclosures have set in motion discussion that will come pretty close to continuing into every farmhouse in the land. Unless I miss my guess, and I am no Doctor Tugwell, thousands of farmers are going to bitterly resent the fact that their payments were small, whereas gigantic corporations received sums ranging from ten to a thousand times as large.

* * *

In behalf of the AAA officials, it must be said that there will be as, indeed, there has been already, considerable unfair criticism. The criticism to which I refer is of this type: that they should have discovered in advance of the payments that funds were going to these corporations. Assuming that they could have discovered that fact in advance, there was no alternative for them except to pay the checks authorized by law. Congress made the law, or rather congress passed it under the lash of the administration, but it was on the statute books and administrative officials are not supposed to disregard such provisions.

Unfair Criticism

If there is to be criticism it should be directed at the initial framing of the statute that brought about the condition. The results that have attracted so much attention since Senator Vandenberg's exposure constitute one of the curious coincidences and queer quirks of planned economy.

And a further word about the criticism. A great many people are likely to forget that while their check was in three figures and some corporation received one in six figures, the condition results wholly from the fact that one owned more land than the other. You may properly say this should have been foreseen and I believe you will be making a correct statement. But surely this is a fact: the AAA officials cannot be blamed for sending out the checks when the law said they should do it regardless of the name or nature of the beneficiary. The fault lies solely and completely with those who, from their professional desks, conceived the whole scheme and gained President Roosevelt's approval for it.

* * *

Development of the vulnerable spots in the AAA crop curtailment program probably will prove beneficial to the country as a whole eventually. For one thing, these disclosures have forever choked off proposals of that kind. They may result as well in strengthening the new proposition for crop control through the medium of soil conservation. In other words, since the bulk of the congress thinks through legislation only in the terms of administration arguments, they will likely be less prone to enact legislation without knowing what results will be obtained.

Vulnerable Spots

It seems to me that the new farm-aid plan likely will be stronger and probably more workable and certainly less extravagant than was the AAA because the AAA weaknesses have been exposed. These exposures ought to have an effect also among thinking farmers who hereafter are unlikely to accept dogmatic statements and rainbow pictures painted for them by political demagogues and professional farm leaders without examining the practicability of the scheme. Personally, I am convinced that a great many farmers were led to believe that AAA was their only salvation and they gained this conviction solely because the other side never was told to them.

* * *

While we are talking about mistakes and about the results obtained by brilliant theorists, I hear more and more discussion of the latest move by Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and his Republican national committee. Mr. Fletcher has hired ten university professors to head up what he calls the committee's research staff and in announcing their appointment he stressed a declaration that "the division is not a brain trust." But "brain trust" it is going to be called notwithstanding Mr. Fletcher's assertion that they were practical men and women of experience. They are going to be a brain trust in exactly the same sense that Mr. Roosevelt's "brain trust" has been denominated. And how else could it be? There actually seems to be little choice between the type of men Mr. Fletcher has chosen and the Tugwells, Hopkinses and other doctors and professors who have constantly had the ear of the President. These men will have Mr. Fletcher's ear and undoubtedly will pour into it their own theories of government and their own ideas of approach to the problem that confronts the Republican national committee, namely, the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt.

Fletcher's Brain Trust

I have observed political battles for a good many years and I have observed the management of governmental responsibilities through a parallel period. The conclusion is inescapable, as far as I am concerned, that practical men always have done a better job, always have been better administrators and better planners, than the men and women who have spent their lives lecturing from a university classroom rostrum. I once criticized Professor Tugwell by saying that his qualification for the post of under-secretary of agriculture consisted of tending flowers in a window box and I am wondering now whether Mr. Fletcher's new brain trust is any better equipped for its job. However, we must not forget, the country now has one brain trust trying to find out what is wrong with another brain trust.

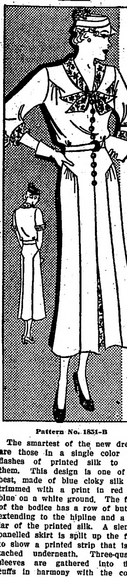
Printed Trimmings of Silk Used on Elegant Daytime Frocks of One Color



Pattern No. 1851-B

The smartest of the new dresses are those in a single color with flashes of printed silk to trim them. This design is one of the best, made of blue cloky silk and trimmed with a print in red and blue on a white ground. The front of the bodice has a row of buttons extending to the hipline and a collar of the printed silk. A slender, panelled skirt is split up the front to show a printed strip that is attached underneath. Three-quarter sleeves are gathered into fitted cuffs in harmony with the collar. And by all means don't overlook the novelty shoulder and hip yoke.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1851-B is available for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 4½ yards of 39-inch fabric with ¾ length sleeve. Enclose fifteen cents for pattern.

ASKOV—Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Scovill, living near Cloverton in the eastern part of Pine county, are the proud parents of a newborn son. The new arrival was brought into the world by Dr. A. L. Arends of Askov, who traveled 221 miles to reach Scovill farm house, which was only a few miles away as the crow flies. Due to road conditions east of Askov, it was necessary for Dr. Arends to drive by the way of Duluth and Superior, to come into the Cloverton community from across the Wisconsin line, making in all a total of 221 miles. He passed through five counties and two states to reach a place within the county from which he started.

SAVE UP PENNIES FOR WEDDING PERMIT

Detroit Lakes.—Herman C. Walde of Becker county, and Henrietta Johanna Abel of Edna township, Ottertail county applied for a marriage license in Fergus Falls. The groom-to-be produced a small paper box and emptied the contents on the counter. The box contained exactly 225 pennies, enough to pay for the license. Walde remarked that he has been saving the cent pieces for two years, but did not disclose whether or not he had matrimony in wind when he threw the first penny into the box!

"MY WIFE IS THE BEST COOK IN TOWN"
"That's because I have an Electric Range"

Something has happened in home cooking! Husbands everywhere are boasting of their wives' cooking! And their wives are frank to say, "My Electric Range gives me better cooking results."

Guesswork is gone when you cook electrically. You'll have perfect control over oven temperatures and humidity. You'll cook roasts exactly to rare, medium, or well done, just as the great chefs do. Natural juices will stay in the meat. You'll have less shrinkage. Basting will be unnecessary. Vegetables cooked electrically are more healthful because they retain their natural salts and minerals . . . important for children. Imagine your breads and cakes baked right through to a rich golden color all over. They'll look better, taste better, and you'll get the same beautiful results every time.

Most wonderful of all, an Electric range is easier to use. It starts and stops automatically, giving you many free hours for other occupations and pleasures.

Change to an Electric Range this spring. You'll enjoy better cooking . . . a cleaner kitchen . . . and more leisure time for yourself. It's the modern, economical way to cook.

MIKE FORD PIONEER RESIDENT IS DEAD

Mike Ford, pioneer resident in the community southwest of the village, died Wednesday noon at a Thief River Falls hospital where he was taken Sunday after suffering a stroke. Mr. Ford had returned only a few days before after attending the funeral of a brother in the central part of the state. It is believed the exertion of travelling, and grief over death of his brother, brought on the attack which resulted in death of Mr. Ford. He had not been in the best of health for over two years. He is survived by his widow, two sons and one daughter who have the sympathy of many friends in this community.

Funeral services are to be held at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at St. Mary's Catholic church at Red Lake Falls.

GIRLS 4-H LEADER OUTLINES WORK

"To be thrifty is the aim of every 4-H boy and girl". The girls have an opportunity to exercise their thriftiness at home by enrolling in the thrift project, says Miss Thelma Solie, girls 4-H club leader.

The minimum requirements are: First Year—Laundry bag, gift article, butcher's style apron, pair of kitchen curtains and Luncheon cloth.

Second Year—Childs bloomers, childs rompers or dress, slip, tailored wash dress (white or dyed, towel with french heming and luncheon set.

Third year: May make any 5 articles.

All garments must be made of flour sacks, feed sacks, or gunny sacks, or some waste material.

The thrift, as in clothing projects, the whole exhibit must harmonize; carry out one theme or idea through the whole group of garments. One of the most striking thrift exhibit seen by Miss Solie was a swagger suit of gunny sacking with a purse and hat to match.

A new idea in thrift is to use any old waste materials old stockings made into pillow tops or rugs; a table covering of burlap with drawn, dyed strings of wool from an old sweater, and mittens sewed from old sweaters; patch jackets, blouses or bathrobes made from scrap pieces of cotton, wool or silk sewed onto flour sacks and feather-stitched make good exhibits.

Very attractive articles can be made from flour sacks which have been bleached and dyed. To wash flour sacks: (1) They must be soaked thoroughly in cold water. (2). Loosen all ink by rubbing well with laundry soap. It is important that all ink has been loosened. This will save work and insure a perfectly clean sack. (3) Let the wet, soapy sack stand for two hours or longer. (4) Rinse in warm water. (5). Boil until white.

If the ink is not removed by this method, soak the sacks in kerosene over night. Then wash in lukewarm soapsuds.

More members are invited to participate in the Thrift work. Those interested in making articles which cost little or no money should get in touch with Miss Thelma Solie, County 4-H Club Leader, at the county agent's office.

LIBRARY NOTES

The librarian at our branch library reports this week that 533 books have been circulated here since the branch opened in middle part of March.

In addition to books we have several magazines, a weekly paper, Current Events, and filings for reference, etc.

The public may avail themselves of this material. If books which you may want, are not here, the librarian will do her best to get them from Thief River Falls.

WILL IMPROVE LOCAL CEMETERY

A crew of from fifteen to twenty men are expected to begin work next Monday morning on the different improvements contemplated at the cemetery east of the village. The new addition is to be grubbed, broken and disced, a new ditch is to be made along the north line, the front boulevard shaped and plowed, the circle drive re-edged, and some necessary filling made in low spots. If services of the crew can be had for a week or ten days, a complete transformation will be made at the plot. If individual lot owners will co-operate to the extent of cleaning their lots, the cemetery should be in fine condition for Memorial Day.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Regular meeting of the village council of the Village of St. Hilaire held at Corbet's shop at 8:00 P. M., April 6, 1936. Meeting called to order by the president. All members were present. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. On motion the following bills were allowed as read:

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Good attendance marked the meeting of the B. M. Club held Monday night at the club rooms.

Regular monthly meeting of the village council will be held at the council rooms next Monday night.

For Sale: Five room house in good condition. To be moved from its present location. If interested, call at this office.

The operating force at the creamery have "dolled" up the plant lately by painting and varnishing the interior wherever it was needed.

The B. M. Club has ordered a hundred Chinese elm trees for planting in the park this spring. Other plantings of trees, shrubs and flowers is to be undertaken later.

Attorney Chas. Boughton, Sr. of Red Lake Falls, attended a special meeting of the local school board which was held Tuesday night at the school house.

Many of the fellows about town are wondering what they will do for new and interesting stories after Phil Anderson leaves this community, as he intends to, first part of July.

Ladies Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran church will be entertained by Mesdames Carl Surmo, K. Dalager and W. Yonke at the church parlors at usual hour Friday, May 8th. Please bring thanks offering boxes.

A good sized crowd witnessed the 4-H Club play "What Love Can Do" which was given last Friday evening at the school assembly. The play was well staged, and made a decided hit with all who saw it. A neat sum was realized by the club for its efforts.

A huge flock of geese, numbering fully a hundred birds, hovered over the river bend east of the "island" Tuesday afternoon. They probably hesitated about heading into the snow storm sweeping in from the northwest at that time, before continuing their flight to northern nesting grounds.

F. C. Boltman motored over Sunday from Grand Forks and spent the day at the Lester Olson home and with other relatives. Upon returning home, he was accompanied by Mrs. Boltman and daughter who had spent a week here.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Burkee motored here Sunday from Moorhead and spent the day with relatives and friends. They were accompanied here by Mr. Burkee's mother, Mrs. E. B. Burkee, who had spent the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Martz at Minneapolis. Mrs. Burkee will spend the summer months at her home here.

Red Cross: Next meeting of the local Red Cross will be held at the home of Mrs. V. G. Brink on Tuesday, May 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Graham, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Beebe, motored to Grand Forks and returned last Sunday.

One person was instantly killed and another died later of injuries received in an auto accident near East Grand Forks the first of this week.

The annual business meeting of the Luther League of the Norwegian Lutheran church will be held at 8 o'clock on May 13th. A social hour and lunch will follow the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Giese and family were over last Sunday from East Grand Forks and spent the day at the home of Mrs. Giese's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord and son, Tommy, visited here briefly last Sunday evening while enroute to their home at Fosston after having spent the day with T. M. Skatrud and family of Argyle.

Someone with a thirst that needed quenching, forced the rear door of Fred Biskey's place last Sunday and carried away a half gallon picnic bottle of beer. That ought to hold 'em for a little while anyway.

Rufus Olson, brother of Lester Olson, manager of the creamery, recently took examination at Grand Forks for enlistment in the U. S. Navy. He is to take another examination at Minneapolis, and if accepted there, will be assigned to training for service with the fleet.

Ed. Christensen is busy putting the finishing touches on his touring auto trailer. He has a customer for this one, and has had many inquiries from others. Should building of camp trailers prove profitable, Ed. plans to spend most of the summer building them.

A car driven by Thief River parties, crashed through the guard fence of the county ditch bridge south of town Sunday night and landed in the ditch which is about twenty feet at that point. None of the occupants received any serious injury, nor did the car seem to be much damaged when it was pulled out the following day.

NEW HIGHWAY MAP

The Minnesota Highway Department announces plates for the new 1936 highway map are to be supplied to newspapers in a short time. The new map will show all changes of routes, all new markings, and all new construction since the 1935 map was issued. Publication of the new map will be made in May.

PRESENT THREE ACT PLAY

A crowd that filled the Bilden & Olson hall to overflowing, greeted the Borgen Players when they presented a three act play entitled "Ole in South Seas" Wednesday night. The play was replete with mirth provoking incidents, and all who saw it were well pleased. A free dance was given for patrons after the play.

COUNTY FARMERS JOIN SOIL PROJECT

Active work on the new Soil Conservation Program has been in progress somewhat over a week, and there are approximately 800 work sheets completed at this time, according to County Agent R. M. Douglass. The remaining ones, about 300 in number, will have been executed by the end of this week. It will take the county allotment committee some time to check all recommendation for soil depleting base to the state committee.

Mr. Douglass said, "Most farmers are anxious to know what their soil depleting bases are so that they can make plans and seed accordingly. Perhaps the best that can be done at this time is for a farmer to total his acreage of soil depleting crops from harvested 1935 acres and if that acreage is normal for a period of years, then reduce that acreage by at least 15%. To be sure of the 15% reduction perhaps a farmer should shift more than what he thinks is the required amount. It must be remembered that neither a crop of grain or hay can be harvested from the shifted acres.

"A good plan to follow if a farmer did not know exactly how much to shift would be to seed sweet clover with some of his oats or barley. If he finds later that he has not shifted enough acres to qualify him for his maximum payment, then he could clip the oats or barley before heading on acreage sufficient to make up the balance of his required 15% shift.

"There seems to be quite a little confusion about the flax payment. Some regulations have been changed since the first educational meetings were held. Perhaps a brief statement will clear up some of the haze about the flax base. The payment will be 20c per bu. on the appraised yield for the number of acres seeded in 1936. It is possible to get a flax payment for all acreage grown on the farm this year regardless of whether any flax was produced on the farm last year.

"In order to get the flax payment there must be 20% of the flax acreage in soil conserving crops on the farm next fall. If there is sufficient acreage already in sweet clover or alfalfa, to be harvested for seed or hay, to equal 20% of the flax acreage then it will not be necessary to seed the required acreage to grass without a nurse crop. On the other hand if there are no soil conserving crops on the farm it will be necessary to shift the 20% of the flax acreage in addition to the 15% shifted on the other soil depleting crops."

Mr. Douglass announced that further informational meetings will be held at various points in the county in the near future. In the meantime, he said, committee members are prepared to supply further details to farmers in their respective communities.

SEEDING NOW WELL UNDER WAY HERE

Altho hampered somewhat by continued cold, snow and rain, and soft ground, seeding is well under way in this locality. Much grain, rye especially, was seeded on the ridge farms as early as two weeks ago, and a great deal has been done on the lighter soil farms the past week. On the heavy lands close to the river, it is not expected seeding will become general for a few days yet.

In comparison with the spring of 1935, just about the same amount of field work has been done now as was the case that year. Despite rather backward spring in 1935, crop outlook was never better until hot winds and rains ruined the crop in July. Since there is but a small acreage of wheat seeded in Pennington county each year, there will be plenty of time to get in barley, oats and flax even if the season is a bit late.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS AT N. W. SCHOOL

Arrangements are being made for a number of special short course and meetings to be held on the Northwest School campus during the early summer months. Activities will open with the 4-H club week which is scheduled for June 1 to 6. According to District Club Leader H. A. Pflughoeft, about one thousand 4-H club members, together with their leaders, from thirteen northwestern Minnesota counties will be in attendance.

To insure adequate dormitory, dining hall, and class room facilities the short course will be divided into two sections; one group meeting the first three days of the week, followed by the second group the last three days of the week. Instruction will be presented by members of the Northwest School and Station staff, assisted by state Club leaders and county agents. Other meetings include the Women's Camp, June 8-11; the Alumni Summer Reunion, June 27; and crops and Soils Day, July 13.

Registrar J. W. Milnar and Miss Retta Bede will supervise the Women's Camp program, while R. S. McCall, horticulturist, and E. R. Clark, pure seed specialist, will have charge of the Crops and Soils Day meeting. Community clubs and other groups are being invited to visit the station during the summer months.

PROJECT GROUP MEETS

Group No. 1 of the Home Management Project, with Mrs. E. Jensen and Mrs. L. E. Beebe as leaders, met last Saturday, and the second group with Mrs. J. A. Hansen and Mrs. Lester Olson as leaders, met Wednesday for the first lesson of the series.

P. T. A. FRIDAY NIGHT

Final meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association for the present school term will be held Friday night of this week. A good program has been arranged, and lunch will be served. Officers for the coming year will be elected at this meeting.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Italy Is Ruthless and the League Helpless

OCCUPATION of Addis Ababa and all of Ethiopia was the price demanded by Italy for an armistice in East Africa when the council of the League of Nations met again in Geneva. Baron Pompeo Aloisi presented the ultimatum on behalf of Dictator Mussolini. Wolde Mariam, representing Ethiopia, countered with a request that the league invoke all penalties against Italy under article 16 of the covenant, these including military sanctions as well as the economic penalties which the league has been trying to enforce. The British and French delegates explained the stand of their respective governments in the embroglio.

Baron Aloisi

The league was helpless, and having received the discouraging report of the conciliation committee, was compelled to confess it could not find means of attaining peace. France will not consent to the imposition of military sanctions, and Great Britain naturally will not undertake to enforce them by herself. It appeared the poor Ethiopians were to be abandoned to their fate, meaning the extinction of their empire and their exploitation by Italy.

The council adopted a resolution regretting its inability to end the war, reminding league members that they should continue the sanctions and asking Italy to be generous in bringing the conflict to a close.

Anthony Eden in his address to the council warned France that she might expect from Great Britain no further support against aggression by Germany than France had given against Italy.

From the north, south and west the Italian armies were advancing on Addis Ababa, and the panic stricken civilian inhabitants of the capital were fleeing from the city. Foreigners sought shelter in the bomb-proofed British legation. The mayor issued all the arms available and the government called on all able men to make a last stand for liberty, saying "it is better to die than to be enslaved."

Terrible Famine in Once Fertile China Province

DISPATCHES from Chengtu, China, tell a terrible story of the famine and drouth in Szechuen province, once one of the most fertile regions in the country. It is said to be the worst famine in the history of China, the deaths numbering many thousands and fully 30,000,000 persons being in distress. Suicides and "mercy slayings" are everyday incidents. The peasants are reduced to eating dogs, cats, rats and clay.

Officials said the situation primarily was a result of Communist incursions during the last two years in which the reds overran and pillaged the land.

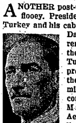
British Budget Highest Since That of 1931

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, chancellor of the exchequer, submitted to the British cabinet and later to parliament the annual budget, which is for almost four billion dollars, the highest since 1931. The huge rearmament program and other unusual expenses made it certain there will be no relief from present taxation burdens.

No estimate has yet been presented to parliament of the amount to be spent in 1936 on strengthening the fighting forces. All that is known is that the air force's part of the program will cost about $50,000,000 this year. Requirements of the army and navy may bring the aggregate for 1936 up to $110,000,000.

Turkey Remilitarizes Dardanelles Zone

ANOTHER post-war treaty has gone flooey. President Kemal Ataturk of Turkey and his cabinet decided that the Dardanelles must be remilitarized, despite the Lusanne pact, and Turkish troops were promptly moved into the zone along the 75-mile long strait that connects the Sea of Marmora and the Aegean sea. It is believed Kemal will soon rebuild the fortifications in the zone which the allies failed to capture during the World war.



President Kemal

The Turkish dictator didn't surprise anyone by his action, for he asked permission of the League of Nations some time ago to rearm the Dardanelles. No formal reply had been made, but the British government rather favored giving consent, and the Soviet union openly approves Turkey's move. Italy was displeased, and there was considerable excitement in the Balkan states, especially Bulgaria which borders on European Turkey. The Bulgarians renewed their demand for a corridor giving them a direct route to the Aegean sea.

Probably Kemal's action will not be severely condemned by anyone, for most of the European nations are preparing for war with feverish haste. Austria's army, small but well equipped, held a spring parade in Vienna, and immediately the nations of the little entente displayed their anger at this show of military force and their military attaches in the Austrian capital were ordered not to occupy the places reserved for them among the reviewing officials. Rumania has increased its military budget to $38,000,000 and created a special fund of $20,000,000 for the development of aviation. Hungary is clamoring for revision of the Trianon treaty and recovery of the territory it lost to the little entente.

President's Secretary and Adviser Taken by Death

LOUIS McHENRY HOWE, secretary to President Roosevelt and for many years his close friend and adviser, died in the Naval hospital at Washington after an illness of more than a year. Mr. Howe was known in the capital as "the President maker," for it was largely due to his efforts that Mr. Roosevelt reached the White House. For twenty-five years, from the day when Mr. Roosevelt and he first met in Albany, he had devoted himself to forwarding his friend's political fortunes. During the Chicago convention and the ensuing campaign his planning and his advice were credited largely with the results attained.

Judge Ritter Is Found Guilty by Senate

FEDERAL JUDGE HALSTED L. RITTER of Florida was found guilty on impeachment charges by the senate and removed from office, being the fourth federal jurist to be ousted in this manner. On each of the first six articles of impeachment a majority of senators voted for his acquittal; but on the seventh article, which was a generalized summary of the charges against him, he was convicted by a vote of 56 to 28.

H. L. Ritter

An order declaring Ritter should be "forever disqualified from holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States" was defeated, 76 to 0.

The senate's verdict in the twelfth impeachment case brought before it as a high court of impeachment since foundation of the American republic amounted to a decision that Judge Ritter had violated the Constitutional requirements of good behavior in office.

Editors Condemn Seizure of Private Telegrams

RESOLUTIONS condemning the blanket seizure of private communications were adopted by the American Society of Newspaper Editors in convention at Washington.

"We are of the conviction," said the resolution, "that if such practice is not checked the threat to liberty of individual action and particularly to the freedom of the press is immediate and menacing."

The society urged its members to cooperate with all law enforcement agencies by guarding against the premature publication of information harmful to the successful completion of criminal investigations. The editors also inaugurated a formal study to determine if it is possible for the press and bar jointly to reach some working formula to prevent sensational murder cases from becoming public scandals.

PWA Power Loan Suit Goes to the Supreme Court

ASKING that the Supreme court review the lower court decision in the celebrated Buzzard Roost case, the Duke Power company and the Southern Public Utilities company carried up to the highest tribunal the question of whether the Public Works administration may finance publicly owned and operated hydro-electric plants to compete with private enterprise. Unless extraordinary measures are taken to speed the case, arguments cannot be heard until the term beginning next October. The government has 30 days in which to reply to the petition for review.

This case, which deeply concerns the New Deal program, arose when the PWA allocated $2,852,000 for construction by Greenwood county, South Carolina, of the Buzzard Roost plant on the Saluda river.

Respighi, Noted Italian Composer, Is Dead

OTTORINO RESPIGHI, one of the most famous of modern Italian composers, died in Rome at the age of fifty-six of heart disease following blood poisoning. His passing is cause for deep mourning among music lovers everywhere. Several of his operas were presented in New York and Chicago, and he was guest conductor of the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra of New York in 1932.

Results of the Illinois Primary Election

ILLINOIS' primary held the center of political interest for it not only provided lively state battles but also was of considerable moment nationally. Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Senator Borah of Idaho, who was born in Illinois, were the contestants for the Republican Presidential preferential vote, and the former came out with 31 delegates against 26 for Borah. The senator's friends were elated because, without organization, he carried a large part of the state outside of Chicago. This preferential vote is purely advisory and neither man has a slate of delegates to the national convention. The result makes it certain that Knox will make a respectable showing on the first roll call. It also adds to Borah's prestige and aids him in the coming Ohio primary.

Frank Knox

Gov. Henry Horner, seeking renomination, was victorious in the bitter fight with the regular Democratic organization and the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago, which had thrown him overboard and supported Bundesen for governor. The Democrats almost unanimously voted for the renomination of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, and the Republicans named Former Senator Otis Glenn to oppose him in November.

Republican leaders in Washington were encouraged to believe the internecine warfare in the Democratic ranks would help the Republicans to carry the state. The Democratic sages, on the other hand, liked the showing of strength made by Borah, feeling his liberal following might switch to Roosevelt in November.

In Nebraska's primary only Borah's name was printed on the Republican preferential ballot but almost one-sixth of the voters wrote in the name of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas.

For the Democratic preference President Roosevelt was unopposed in both Illinois and Nebraska.

Flood Control Approved by the President

IN HIS press conference President Roosevelt said government departments are concentrating on flood control problems and that if congress would pass a bill appropriating a billion dollars for that purpose he would sign it, provided the measure put men to work immediately.

Mr. Roosevelt said the Passamaquoddy project in Maine and Florida ship canal were eliminated because of the recent refusal of congress to make appropriations for continuance of the work. He said he did not contemplate doling out relief funds for the projects and that there would be no funds for the projects unless congress reversed its refusal.

On the same day the United States Chamber of Commerce issued a warning against encroachment of the federal government on flood control projects which are the primary responsibility of the states.

President Lays Cornerstone for a Big Building

WITH appropriate ceremony the cornerstone of the new Interior department building in Washington was laid, the President handling the trowel. The structure, the second largest government office building there, is to be completed in December. It covers five and one-half acres and will provide 700,000 square feet of usable floor space. It will cost $12,000,000, about $5,000,000 less than the capital's largest, the Commerce department building.

The trowel used by Mr. Roosevelt was the one employed by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol in 1793.

Draft of New Tax Bill Ready for Consideration

HAVING discarded the President's suggestion of temporary processing taxes, Chairman Sam B. Hill's house subcommittee completed its draft of the new tax bill. It calls for a new type of corporation levy, ranging from 1 per cent to 29.7 per cent for corporations with net income up to $10,000, and from 4 to 42½ per cent for corporations with net income over $10,000, depending on the amount of earnings that are not distributed. Preferential tax treatment is given to banks and insurance companies, to debt-ridden companies, to companies in receivership, and a new system of taxing non-resident aliens is created.

Big Pay for Lobby Committee Lawyer Is Refused

BY A vote of 153 to 137 the house rejected a resolution to permit Senator Black's lobby committee to pay $10,000 to special counsel in injunction litigation started by William Randolph Hearst to protect his telegrams from the probers. This action, which followed a bitter debate, doesn't halt the work of the committee, which has its own funds, but it prevents the payment of more than $3,600 a year, in accordance with general law, to Crampton Harris of Birmingham, Ala

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Break in Party Lines

Washington.—I suggested in these columns a year or more ago that the campaign of 1936 would bring forth some of the most amazing oddities in political alignments that this country had ever known. It was apparent, even during the battle for ballots in 1932, that a gigantic shake-up in the voting alignment of citizens was in the making. These things are now being demonstrated and more proof of the changing times seems just around the corner.

We all have seen how such outstanding figures as former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928, have boldly flouted President Roosevelt and his New Deal theories and we have witnessed such vitriolic outbursts as those by former Senator James A. Reed, that old-line Missouri Democrat, and we have watched with interest the hauling and filling by Jeffersonian Democrats who find New Deal fantasies to be a bitter pill to swallow. Lately, there has come another most interesting situation respecting partisan alignment.

Although the action received much less attention than I believe it deserves, the determination of the Virginia Republicans in their recent convention at Roanoke to refrain from placing a Republican candidate in the field against Senator Carter Glass constitutes, to my mind, one of the most extraordinary twists ever to take place under our two party system. That convention acting utterly without precedent, took the position that it was better to leave the field clear for the election of the veteran senator than to precipitate a political battle by naming a Republican candidate.

The reason for the action of the Virginia Republicans is quite clear in one way. They felt that Carter Glass, although a life-long Democrat who has carried on his share of bombardment of Republican principles and policies, could do the country more good from their standpoint than could be attained by placing a Republican condidate against him without chance of success. To state this premise in another way: Carter Glass does not swallow the New Deal as a whole and when he finds objectionable features in the Roosevelt program, he is independent enough and has the strength of character to voice his feelings. Doing this as a member of the majority party in the senate necessarily has more weight than all of the criticism of the New Deal that could be voiced by a Republican—if one could be elected in Virginia—and the Virginia convention chose a course which it believed would best serve the nation as a whole.

But it is the circumstance of a party convention refusing to engage in battle that interests me most. Under such circumstances, the old idea of party loyalty becomes not only illogical but ridiculous. Instead of a call to battle, we see what amounts to a call for support of a theoretical opponent. Of course, in the opinion of many, Carter Glass is the outstanding exponent of conservative thought in the Democratic party and if he speaks for conservative thought in the Democratic party he is almost speaking for conservative thought in the Republican party. It is easy to see, therefore, why the Virginia Republicans adopted the course they did but where does that leave party loyalty? What does it mean as to the future alignment of political thought?

* * *

On the Other Hand

The course followed by the Virginia Republicans is not more strange than the action of President Roosevelt himself who has indorsed Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator George Norris of Nebraska, with almost boyish enthusiasm. Senator Johnson and Senator Norris have not been regarded as regular Republicans but they have been flying the Republican banner for a good many years. Yet, the President verbally pats them on the back and offers his blessing.

During the same period, we have watched Mr. Roosevelt playing touch-and-go with the La Follettes in Wisconsin. Of course, the La Follettes catalogue themselves as Progressives but they never have had a great deal in common with old-line Democrats.

Likewise, in the senate if one is to believe gossip frequently bandied about, Senator McNary of Oregon, the titular Republican leader, has been only half-heartedly fighting the New Deal. In fact, some of Senator McNary's own colleagues claim that he has really given aid and comfort to their political enemies.

In the meantime, one can wander around the halls of congress and hear private observations from men who were supposed to be stalwart partisans that they have been unable to determine yet what their course ought to be. One of them remarked confidentially to me that he believed he would have to consult a clairvoyant before he could say whether he was going to support the New Deal or oppose it or try to straddle the fence. Of course, his remark was in a humorous vein but it epitomized the thought and, I may say, the worry of a very great many partisans at this time.

So, we have a picture six months ahead of the actual casting of the ballots in which party lines are torn asunder for countless hundreds of more or less important party figures. I think everyone agrees that the condition comes from the development of New Deal principles and policies under the leadership of President Roosevelt. There will be many who are now doubtful as to their course who will realign themselves with the New Deal because they were originally Democrats and there will be many who will again follow the Republican banner down the stretch. But it seems to me that three years of Roosevelt probably have established a greater segment of independent voting strength in this country than had resulted from a quarter of a century of partisan politics before. The situation must be construed then as indicating that hereafter those who stick definitely in party harness will continue to stand hitched because they have political aspirations and ambitions or because economic conditions in their communities are better fostered by the party with which they have aligned themselves. Beyond that, it seems to me, citizens, in most cases, will vote in increasing numbers for the man instead of the party.

'Quoddy Dream Dropped

At last, after almost two years of promotion work, President Roosevelt has abandoned two of his cherished dreams: harnessing the tides of Passamaquoddy bay in Maine and construction of a gigantic canal across Florida. The 'Quoddy project designed to produce electric power in quantities never before turned out, was to cost $40,000,000. The great job of excavating a slit across the face of the state of Florida to let ships go direct from the Atlantic to the Gulf without going around the toe of the state was to cost $150,000,000.

Only a small amount, that is, a small sum compared to other New Deal expenditures, had been wasted on the ship canal plans before it was tossed into the limbo of forgotten things, but something like $10,000,000 already has been used in the attempt to make the moon work through the medium of the tides of 'Quoddy bay. Both projects can be charged up to politics and experiments and probably the country will be better off to take the loss and avoid the use of further money.

The President fully intended to go through with his plans respecting these two projects until he ran into vicious opposition in congress. Too many representatives and senators realized that they were going to have the names 'Quoddy bay and Florida canal hurled at them through the coming campaign if they voted their approval by including additional funds for these projects in the relief appropriations. I don't know what is going to become of the homes, the model city, erected for workers near the 'Quoddy bay project. Photographs of this village indicate it to be a community of which any resident might be proud. It was constructed to assure the workers on the 'Quoddy project a comfortable place in which to live. They still have the comfortable place in which to live because the government still owns the homes but what is to become of those people and what disposition is to be made of the property is something else again. Thus, development of electric power from the tides of 'Quoddy bay has been an engineering question that has raged for years as a controversy. It has recurred frequently as a political matter but never until the New Deal came in were any tangible steps taken to install electrical equipment in that bay where the tides run higher than anywhere else in the world.

* * *

Faced Difficulties

Most engineers have contended that it was impossible to place in the bay equipment that could function satisfactorily while at the same time producing electric current at a rate that would bring a return on the tremendous investment necessary. Further than that, no one yet has been able to show where so much electric energy could be marketed. The territory is sparsely settled and the industrial production is small. While it was contended that limitless power would bring industries into that section, the indications were, even after actual work started, for only a small increment in the number of factories and other users of energy.

The 'Quoddy power idea probably was the most fascinating and most romantic of anything proposed by the New Deal for the purpose of creating jobs. Like the proposed Florida ship canal, it held potentialities but those whose opinions heretofore have been sound remain unconvinced that either the power plan or the canal for a short cut across Florida ever could repay the government for money spent there.

NOWADAYS there is one sure way for an executive of a motion picture company to find out whether his company considers him really important or not. If he's a big shot, he's not allowed to fly. That's a hardship when a man is commuting from Hollywood to New York and back again, of course—but hardship or not, they take trains.

Only last week three of Metro's big men wanted to get from New York to Hollywood in a hurry, and planned to fly; they had done it so often that it meant no more to them than walking down the street; they knew all too well that flying was no more dangerous than any other means of transportation. But at the last minute somebody got wind of their plans. The resulting argument was hot and heavy—but in the end they went by train.

One of them didn't really object, however. He was Howard Dietz, chief of publicity and advertising.

"That's all right with me," he remarked. "I'll win a thousand dollars at bridge on the way out."

Joan Bennett

There's just no stopping them—I mean these girls who are as determined now not to be blonde as they once were to be as blonde as possible. Jean Harlow started it, of course, by turning "brownette," and now we have Carole Lombard, Alice Faye and Joan Bennett following her example. They seem to feel that it will help them to get more serious roles—quite forgetting that Ann Harding, who is naturally so blonde, has been doing pretty well with serious roles for a long, long time.

On the other hand, Marion Talley (ex opera star and farmer, now working hard in pictures) has turned blonde for her first screen appearance. If you have seen her, or seen photographs of her in the old days, you're going to be surprised at her appearance; she has lost a lot of weight, and it is a big improvement.

Those Major Bowes amateur stage units have been so successful that Bob ("Believe It Or Not") Ripley is going to have some of his own; the first will begin its tour somewhere in New England the last of April. It will probably include these acts: Little Jeanie, a thirty-pound midget; Grace Murphy's quintuplets, five ballet dances averaging three hundred pounds each; a concert pianist who plays—and well—with his elbows; John Tio and his talking bird; and a man who makes music with leaves. Bob himself, encountered at a party after the opening of Ringling's circus, was trying to curb a strong desire to go out with them himself.

Frank Parker, who bobs up on so many radio programs, is going to make another picture; his first, you'll recall, was "Sweet Surrender." He's been on the stage, so he's prepared for a movie career.

Speaking of his stage career, the other day Fifi D'Orsay came to a rehearsal of her radio show with a picture of the cast of "Greenwich Village Follies of 1925." Willie Howard glanced at it, then at Parker, and said, "Frank, there's a fellow in this picture who looks exactly like you."

"Looks like me?" retorted Frank. "It is me. I was a chorus boy."

I wish you could meet Bette Davis. She's an overwhelming young person, because she's so devastatingly frank. No matter what you ask her she'll answer it, and intelligently too—with no regard for whether the movie moguls will like what she says or not. Now some interviewers use rather brutal tactics.

That doesn't work with Bette Davis; she doesn't get angry, she just tells the truth, with a pleasant smile.

"How do you get along with your husband?" someone asked her recently. "There are reports that you've separated."

"Oh, we fight," she replied. "It's my fault; sometimes I simply have to fight, and then nothing will stop me."

ODDS AND ENDS . . . John Boles doesn't want to be tied down to one company any longer; he's going to free lance . . . Fredric March felt the same way; thought he was making too many costume pictures . . . So the first one he signed up for as a free lance was "Mary of Scotland" with Katherine Hepburn . . . Paramount is going to give us "Beau Geste" again, in color this time, with Gary Cooper in the leading role . . . "A Message to Garcia" is a fine picture . . . Jane Withers does fine work in "Gentle Julia" . . . Shirley Temple got another raise the other day . . . Practically all the movie companies are trying to sign up Charles Boyer, who's already under contract . . . You'll see him before long in "The Garden of Allah" . . . And in color . . . Margaret Sullavan's broken arm is holding up two pictures . . . Myrna Loy will be teamed with Warner Baxter in "To Mary, With Love"; remember them in "Broadway Bill"?

Dour "Scottie" Wins Right to Bark in Own Back Yard

Megs, pudgy and be-whiskered Scottish terrier, "conducted herself as a perfect lady" in the eyes of Common Pleas Judge Samuel Silbert of Cleveland, and escaped an injunction against a few "yips" in her own back yard. A neighbor in the fashionable Edgewater drive neighborhood, Mrs. Florence Abel, asked an injunction against the dog's "disturbing the peace in the night," pleading aggravation of a serious nervous heart ailment.

The Scottie came into court on a leash. She sat quietly in the lap of her mistress, Miss Betty Stinchcomb, eighteen, during the hearing. Judge Silbert, in denying the injunction, said "the dog conducted herself as a perfect lady in court. She seems inclined to be dull. She is inoffensive and quiet. In fact, she doesn't amount to much."

"ANNE—You're a WONDERFUL cook"

"It's easy with an ELECTRIC Range"

IT IS easy to be a good cook with an Electric Range. Guesswork is eliminated. You know just what heat you will get . . . and you know just what your cooking results will be.

This simplicity saves you time and work. But more important, it gives you better cooked foods.

Your roasts, for instance, will turn out beautifully browned, but with the juices kept in the meat. That's because the electric oven seals in the humidity. There is no blast of air going through the oven to dry out foods. This feature alone can save you up to one-fifth of your meat bill by preventing costly shrinkage of meats.

Your breads, cakes, and biscuits will bake an even golden brown—uniform throughout because in the electric oven is nothing but clean, still HEAT—clean as sunshine!

Change to electric cooking! It's easier—it's cleaner—more healthful—and with the new electric rate steps it costs no more. The new 1936 models now being shown at your dealer and our showroom may be purchased on convenient terms.

MRS. MARY AUBOL DIED TUESDAY NOON

Mrs. Mary Aubol, resident of this community for over 55 years, died at 1:15 Tuesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Effie Rolland. She had not been in best of health for past three years, and recently suffered a stroke which was a contributary cause of her death.

Mrs. Aubol, nee Larson, was born in Norway, Sept. 2, 1860, and was 75 years and eight months of age. After coming to this country, her early days were spent at Manitowoc, Wis., at which place she was united in marriage to Anton Aubol in the spring of 1881. Shortly thereafter they came to this community and have resided here since. Mr. Aubol preceded his wife in death about 18 years ago. Surviving are five sons and two daughters, Fred, Cornel and Walter of this community, Clarence at Saco, Mont. and Harvey of Crandon, Wisc. The daughters are Mrs. Ole Hagglund and Mrs. Effie Rolland both of whom reside here. Mrs. Aubol is survived by three brothers, Christ, Martin and Oscar Larson at Manitowoc, and by three sisters, Mrs. Wm. Eickhoff of Wittenberg, and Mrs. E. Vetting of Manitowoc, Wisc., and Mrs. B. E. Burkee of this village. She is also survived by a large number of grandchildren.

Mrs. Aubol was a kindly woman, highly esteemed by all who knew her, and many friends thruout the community will miss her in the community where she resided so long.

Following a brief service at the funeral chapel at Thief River Falls funeral services will be conducted at about 1:30 P. M. Friday at the local Norwegian Lutheran church of which the deceased had been a lifelong member. Interment will be in the family plot at the Lutheran cemetery north of the village.

Sympathy of many friends in the village and surrounding community is extended to the bereaved family.

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Friends of Rev. A. O. Bloom of Grand Forks will be delighted to hear he has accepted the invitation to speak at the St. Hilaire high school Commencement, May 28th.

EXHIBIT AT P. T. A.

At time of the P. T. A. Friday evening, the class rooms were decorated and in them were displayed works of Art and Composition. Parents received much pleasure, as did the pupils whose work was worthy of display. This gives added incentive to do better school work, and places before patrons of the school the sort of work being done besides the three "R's". The teachers are to be complimented on this exhibit, and we shall look forward to a bigger and better one for next year.

FARM PROGRAM MEETINGS LISTED

Progress in the new Soil Conservation program is being made as rapidly as can be expected and work sheets on practically all farms in the county have been submitted, County Agent R. M. Douglass said today

There seems to be a number of erroneous ideas about the program, he added, no doubt due to the fact that bad roads and weather prevented many farmers from attending any of the educational meetings.

Another set of educational meetings has been scheduled to start on Friday of this week. Mr. Douglass believes that attendance will be much greater now that roads and weather are more favorable. These meetings will give everyone an opportunity to hear the program explained correctly.

It will be to every farmer's advantage to attend one of these meetings and clear up any questions that may be bothering him at this time.

Following is a schedule of meetings, all of which will start promptly at 8 o'clock:

A good sized group attended the meeting of the local Red Cross which was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Victor Brink.

Harold Holmes had a nice electric refrigerator installed at his home last week. Installation was made by the Red River Power Company.

L. F. Olson, A. Bilden and O. Gunstad attended funeral services held Saturday morning at St. Joseph's church at Red Lake Falls, for the late Mike Ford.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy was at Thief River Falls both Tuesday and Wednesday to preside at regular session of the board of county commissioners.

Wednesday was the first real summer-like day for this season. The mercury showed well over seventy degrees in the shade, and over ninety in the sun.

While butterfat prices have slumped some lately, the price of eggs has advanced. Eggs that were quoted at 12 and 15 a couple weeks ago, now bring 15 and 18 cents per dozen.

Viola Pearson, local librarian, returned Wednesday morning after attending a district Recreational meeting, and convention of librarians held in connection with it, at Detroit Lakes.

A tornado which ripped thru southern Minnesota and parts of Iowa first of the week, took a toll of four lives besides causing property damage that will run to nearly a million dollars.

Mrs. T. K. Olson and members of her family were down Sunday from their farm east of Thief River Falls for a visit at the home of their son and brother, Lester Olson. Rufus Olson left the following day to take his final examination for enlistment in the U. S. Navy.

A crew of twelve men started work Monday morning at improving the cemetery. A caterpiller tractor and large brush breaker was put to work yesterday breaking sod on the new addition. It is expected the crew will be kept busy another ten days or two weeks.

The large number of pupils transported from the east and west routes has made the use of school busses seem desirable. A bus that would be available for basketball and band trips will be welcomed by those who participate. Students on the routes can look forward to a nice bus driving out in the morning. School regulations require buses to have seats running lengthwise for comfort and safety.

Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Dahle motored Tuesday to Grand Forks to visit briefly with their son, Manford, who is a student at the state university.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ness have made arrangements to occupy the buildings on the Bothman farm southeast of the village, for the coming summer.

After being called here a month ago by the illness of her father, Wm. Novak, Mrs. Hazel Swadberg plans to leave this week for her home at Portland, Ore.

The Borgen Players are billed to present their comedy-drama "Ole in the South Seas" at the community hall in Smiley township next Saturday evening at 8:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Aubol motored here Sunday from Crandon, Wis., being called by the critical illness of his mother, Mrs. Mary Aubol, who died Tuesday afternoon.

The village council met in regular session Monday night. Among other matters taken up was that of grading and gravelling of the road known as Wall street across the river.

Ole Loberg came up this week from Willmar to look after matters at his farm northwest of the village, and also to visit briefly with friends and relatives in the community.

Those who were granted pensions under the state wide old-age pension act in this community, received their first checks this week. Needless to say, all the amounts will be put to good use.

Mrs. O. W. Brink came Tuesday evening from Eight Point, Montana to spend the summer here at the homes of her sons, Albert and Victor Brink. Since leaving here, Mrs. Brink has spent most of her time at the home of her daughter in California because the Montana climate did not agree with her. Since last year she has been with her husband on their ranch near Eight Point. It is very probable Mrs. Brink may decide to re-establish permanently again in St. Hilaire.

RE-CLASSIFY POSTOFFICE

WALDAL AND JONES FILE THIS WEEK

George P. Jones of Bagley, Minnesota, filed Monday for Representative in the 65th District. He stated that, as the law requires that all candidates for the State Legislature must file without party designation, that he intended to run as an independent and would not align himself with any political party or faction during the campaign.

Hon. Marius Waldal of Plummer, who represented the 65th legislative district in last regular and special sessions of the Minnesota legislature, filed Tuesday for re-election. Mr. Waldal will be one of probably seven or eight candidates to seek the nomination for Representative at the primary election next month. He states he will stand squarely on his record in the legislature during past sessions, in seeking re-election.

LENORE ENGH DIED SUNDAY

Relatives here received the distressing news Sunday that Lenore, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sigurd Engh of Minneapolis, had died at noon that day at a Minneapolis hospital after being ill since late Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Satterberg, uncle and aunt of Mrs. Engh, left here early Monday morning and were present at private funeral services which were held at 4:00 that afternoon at Hillside cemetery.

A memorial service for Lenore will be held at the Wesley Methodist at Minneapolis on Children's Day, May 24th.

Lenore Engh was born March 19, 1929, and she was seven years of age this spring. A favorite with her relatives, teachers and little friends, and a very lovable child, Lenore will be sadly missed. Sympathy of all friends here is extended to the bereaved family in their time of sorrow.

The River Falls group of the Home Management Project met Tuesday at the Wm. Yonke home. Mrs. Herman Jepson was elected chairman, and Mrs. Otto Johnson was named secretary and reporter.

PROJECT GROUP MET WEDNESDAY

Project Group No. 2 met last Wednesday afternoon at the Community M. E. Church under the leadership of Mrs. J. Hansen and L. F. Olson. Twelve members were present. A very instructive and interesting lesson was given through the use of charts and diagrams. Many steps can be saved by the homemaker if the instructions on the lesson "Convenient Kitchens" are followed. Mrs. Arvid Dahlstrom was elected chairman, and Mrs. H. Winter secretary-treasurer. At the close of the meeting lunch was served by Mesdames Elmer Johnson, Arvid Dahlstrom and A. W. Brink.

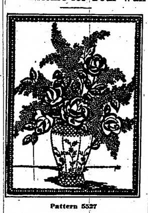
Colorful Embroidery Picture for Your Wall



Pattern 5527

In honor of spring your house deserves a colorful new wall-hanging such as this, which depicts roses and lilacs in their natural splendor. You'll enjoy embroidering it—it's so easy even a beginner will be won over to this delightful occupation. The lilacs are in lazy daisy—the roses in satin and outline stitch; and you needn't frame it—just line it and hang it up.

In pattern 5527 you will find a transfer pattern of a hanging 15 by 20 inches; a color chart; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; directions for making the hanging.

FERRY'S SEEDS are at home in ANY climate

Claims that special seeds are necessary for certain climates are misleading. The successful cultivation of gorgeous flowers and tender vegetables depends primarily on the quality of the seeds, and the care you give them.

Ferry-Morse Seed Co. has devoted 80 years to developing and improving the quality of vegetable and flower seeds. At The Ferry-Morse Seed Breeding Institute Stations in Rochester, Mich., and Salinas, Cal., over 52,000 germination tests are conducted annually to assure you that Ferry seeds will grow . . . over 9000 purity trials are conducted to insure uniformly superb quality.

That's why you can plant Ferry's seeds in any part of the country—any climate—and reap the rewards of the quality bred into them.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—One swallow does not make a summer nor does one statement, even though from a high official, make a condition absolute. But one statement from a high official under the present New Deal relief setup comes rather close to disclosing the transcendent importance of the nation's relief problem in American economy at this time.

Relief Problem

I refer to the recent testimony by Harry A. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator and professional reliever, before the house committee on appropriations. He told that group a few days ago that 3,853,000 heads of families or unattached persons were receiving a livelihood for themselves and their families from the federal government on March first of this year. If this be true, and it can hardly be disproved, there are nearly fifteen million persons dependent directly upon federal assistance. And the condition appears even worse when it is shown that about ten million others are receiving assistance from state, county and city relief or charitable organizations. In short, the Hopkins testimony reveals that about twenty per cent of all of our people are living on relief money.

These figures are astounding. They are made the more amazing when one considers that the condition exists even after the New Deal has expended approximately twenty-one billions in its three years of government management, the bulk of the outgo being directly chargeable to what Mr. Roosevelt has consistently maintained was an emergency.

I have reported to you intermittently heretofore the various stages through which Reliever Hopkins has gone in his search for means to solve the relief problem. I have been among those observers here who have felt that even though Mr. Hopkins lacks practical experience in commercial life and even though he casts aside every consideration except those inherent in the minds of a man who has devoted his life professionally to relief work, that he should be given time to solve the problem. It seems to me, however, that he has had ample time to find the answer if he is ever going to provide a solution. Neither he nor President Roosevelt has given any indication yet that they know the answer or even have a clew to it. The net result of their efforts to date has been the expenditure of money in unprecedented amounts and the piling up of a debt, the like of which this country never has known.

Mr. Hopkins has gone about his job smugly and with that apparent complacency that characterizes the official who is convinced that he alone is equipped to do a particular job. By his attitude, he has created in congress a feeling that he thinks he is a superior being and if anything makes a congressman hot under the collar, it is to see a member of the executive branch exhibit a pose that the congressmen are dumbbells. Some of them are, of course, but that is not true of all and it is fast doing Mr. Hopkins no good at all to show arrogance towards the men who go out and campaign directly for the votes of the people.

* * *

I said that the relief problem was of transcendent importance in governmental affairs at this time. That is true because I believe the conviction is growing that the whole New Deal policy on relief is impractical and visionary; that it is founded upon a wrong psychology; that it is creating in this nation the greatest mass of panhandlers and "the world owes me a living" type or class of individuals that has ever existed anywhere and that, in addition the men who are doing the job for the federal government lack the ability to understand its whole significance.

Visionary Policy

As proof of the observations I have just stated, let me point out how the demands for vast expenditures of money and wholesale methods of relief for the destitute have subsided in congress. Time was when a half dozen so-called welfare workers, college professors or organization leaders could get a hearing by the simple crook of a finger before a congressional committee. Such men as Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, and Senator Costigan of Colorado, and the late Senator Cutting of New Mexico, to mention only a few, would weep salty tears in senate speeches; they would call for ten billions for this and five billions for that and other billions for other things and shout that people were starving in the midst of plenty. And they were starving in the midst of plenty, but the shouting and the tumult raised by these political saviors did not provide a solution for the problem. I have a hunch that the silence of such men as these through the last year can mean only that they now see they were off on the wrong foot. They cannot help but realize that their theories were all wet, because Mr. Hopkins certainly has disproved the value of their plans.

Another indication of how congress feels is the movement to divide the billion and a half relief fund, which President Roosevelt asked, between Mr. Hopkins and Public Works Administrator Ickes. The President demanded that congress give the whole fund to Mr. Hopkins. It probably will work out that way eventually but the feeling against Mr. Hopkins cannot be denied. It is violent and only a small part of it has come to the surface.

The congressmen could not afford to see the flow of money cut off in an election year so they maneuvered to spank Mr. Hopkins by seeking to give a portion of the money to Mr. Ickes.

Now, it is currently rumored that Mr. Ickes, who never has liked Mr. Hopkins, has done some lobbying in the fine underground manner of which he is capable. He sincerely believes that the use of funds in the construction of permanent things like buildings, roads and bridges gives the government and taxpayers at least something for their money. But, be that as it may, the ground swell against Mr. Hopkins is very powerful and if Mr. Hopkins possessed any understanding of the science of the times he would see it. Thus far he has given no indication that he understands what it means.

* * *

Where will it all end?

The answer to this relief problem is not now near enough to hazard a guess.

What's the Answer?

Let us go back for a brief review. When President Roosevelt took hold of the relief problem early in his administration, he advanced two theories. They were to solve our problems and solve them quickly. He urged the NRA and the PWA, which with the AAA, formed the first battalion of the alphabetical army. The NRA was designed to regiment business and indirectly force reemployment by the shortening of hours and the spread of work. The PWA was to provide a lot of construction jobs immediately, giving work to those not absorbed in private commerce and industry and thus take up the slack until buying power of individuals had been restored.

By November, 1933, it became quite evident to unbiased observers that NRA and PWA were falling short of the mark. So, out of the Presidential hat came the CWA. Congress promptly provided funds so the Civil Works administration—and here is where professional reliever, Mr. Hopkins, came on the scene—could hire unemployed who had not been absorbed by PWA or had not been restored to jobs in commerce and industry by NRA.

It was not long until CWA was as much in disrepute as the original schemes for providing employment. I believe it was in even greater disrepute because ordinary citizens could see the utter waste and the reckless expenditures of money occurring under CWA for its relief raking and stone gathering and other nonsensical job-creating results. CWA went the way of any unsound proposition.

Forward then came FERA. It was a proposition of emergency relief. Washington writers were deluged with speeches and statements that none should be allowed to starve. The spigots of the treasury were opened wide and $4,880,000,000 gushed forth. In every section of the country, federal money was distributed and distributors in Washington were none too careful of how they passed it out. In parallel lines with FERA, the politicians formed to the right. They saw the money and from precinct to pinnacle of politics, they were on the job and they have been on the job ever since.

* * *

Last year, the President became convinced that there was too much waste; that FERA was building up a clientele of millions who were saying, both publicly and privately, that it was no use to work when the government would feed them and he ordered a quick change in course.

Too Much Waste

With this change in course came a locking of horns between Messrs. Hopkins and Ickes. Mr. Ickes was licked by the simple expedient of a new federal agency. Bounding forth came Mr. Hopkins' own brain child, WPA. While it stands for Works Progress administration, a different name, the initials, to those who have studied the situation, spell FERA and CWA combined.

The President announced to the country that "this business of relief must end." Those who could not be employed must be taken care of by the states and local governments and those who were employable would be taken off relief but they must do work for the funds which the federal government passed out to them. The result has been a considerable mess and there is not a day goes by that congressional mail does not reveal cruel results, absolute destitution and hardship and privation unparalleled in the United States.

Where will it all end?

"This business of relief" is still relief by whatever name the alphabetical agency in Washington may be known. It can be only relief and there can be no doubt that it must be continued.

Although President Roosevelt had demonstrated his willingness to make shifts in his program, it is becoming more and more evident that a fundamental alteration of his whole scheme must be undertaken.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today

MINNESOTA NEWS

St. Paul—Mayor Mark H. Gehan was re-elected for another term by city voters.

Minneapolis—L. A. Door of this city has had his car stolen four times since January 1.

Duluth—The first shipment by boat to leave this part were two freighters loaded with merchandise.

St. Paul—A compilation of figures by Boyd's City Dispatch shows there are 288 Millionaires in the state at the present time.

Camp Ripley—Nearly 8,000 National Guard and regular army soldiers will take the field here this summer for annual field maneuvers.

Minneapolis—An underground market where relief orders were bartered on a wholesale scale, was disclosed in an investigaton of relief conditions here.

Minneapolis—Minnesota has the finest national guard air squadron in the entire seventh corps area, according to Colonel Y. A. Pitts, U. S. Army Air official.

Two Harbors—Emil Westholm, representing the Waldo and Stuart communities, was elected president of the Lake county soil conservation committee here.

Minneapolis — Minnesota women, members of the American War Mothers, will again band together for sale of carnations on the two days preceding Mother's Day, May 10.

Albert Lea—Albert K. Groten, 55-year-old farmer near here was burned to death and two other members of his family of eight were severely injured when fire destroyed their home.

Minneapolis—Sixty business and professional men and women, representatives of various civic, social and religious organizations, voted unanimously to found a community theater here.

Minneapolis—According to the Cagill crop bulletin, plowing and seeding conditions in Minnesota and the northwest are about the best they have ever been, giving crops an exceptionally favorable start.

Minneapolis—Minnesota's vacation tourist business will be the best in a number of years with an increase of 100 to 200 per cent over last year, according to reports reaching the Minneapolis Civic & Commerce association.

Duluth—Two convicts who allegedly held up Alec Abernathy, Duluth engraver, and forced him to make plates for counterfeit $10 bills will be brought from prisons in Washington and Wisconsin to face trial at the Duluth term of court.

Minneapolis—Unanimous in their conviction that the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad must not be scrapped, business men and officials of the state, and Iowa, are redoubling their efforts to save the line from dismemberment.

Duluth—Plans of the Minnesota Conservation commission to charge a 25 cent parking fee per automobile for picnickers in each of the 28 state parks has aroused opposition from resort owners in the northern part of the state.

Minneapolis — Minnesota's liquor control act is entirely inadequate to cope with conditions that have arisen in the liquor industry, the retiring Hennepin county grand jury declared in a formal report calling upon the legislature to establish a more rigid regulation.

Northfield—The first junior traffic court in Minnesota has been established here. Sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the court is supervised by city officials. Judges and jurors are high school students. Nine bicyclists were the first offenders hailed into this court.

Brainerd—Mr. and Mrs. Benny Beaver of Jay Cooke state park will leave soon to make their new home in Chicago—at least for the week of the national motorboat and sports show. The beavers, together with a beaver dam, a section of Minnesota forest, two fawn and several ducks and pheasants will comprise the Minnesota recreational display there.

Minneapolis—With sales of farm machinery in the northwest shooting far ahead of advances recorded last year, some of the large distributing companies have recorded gains of more than 100 per cent in the first four months of 1936 over a similar period last year. Trainloads have been arriving in Minneapolis all spring. The shipments include new type harvesters which cut and thresh grain in one operation, tractors, cultivators, plows and all types of farm implements. Many of the sales being made are for cash—proof, dealers said, that country bankers again are lending money for purchases of farm equipment.

St. Cloud—The city's trolley cars have made their last run over the rails, after 44 years of service. Twenty-one passenger buses replaced the trolleys and will provide service between St. Cloud, Sauk Rapids and Waite Park. Fare is five cents.

St. Paul—Minnesotans have bought $16,167,000 worth of Baby Bonds from the government during the year the treasury department has been selling them. This is maturity value, it was explained, actual cash paid for them being considereably less, but not detailed.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

★★★By VIRGINIA VALE★★★

JAMES MELTON, one of radio's sweetest singers, has finished his latest radio assignment and arrived in Hollywood to work in "Cain and Mabel." Before leaving New York he made inquiries as to his own importance in the picture—wanted to know what sort of breaks he'd get on publicity, etc.

He knew that Marion Davies, being the star, would come first in the hearts of the publicity men for the company. A casual inquiry revealed the fact that he'd come second, which was all right with him. But for the moment neither he nor his informant recalled that Mary Boland was also cast for that picture—and Miss Boland is pretty important, being an excellent actress and a favorite of movie fans as well.

Also—Mr. Melton is, first of all, a singer. The script calls for a prize-fighter as a hero. The question at the moment is—if you take his singing away from Mr. Melton, will you have a prize-fighter?

Harold Lloyd

Now it's Harold Lloyd who wants to make pictures in color. He has been making experiments on his own hook for the last two years, but is not yet quite sure whether or not color would add to the type of comedies that he makes.

Furthermore, he's through with making just one picture a year; from now on he'll make two a year, he thinks, or at least, two every three years. And with his latest one, "The Milky Way," as an example, that comes under the heading of good news.

Those radio programs of Bing Crosby's are rapidly becoming one of the best of the broadcasts; he is getting really big names, (or rather, his sponsor is getting them for him), and he makes a delightful master of ceremonies. Better add this program to the list of those you tune in on Thursday evenings.

When you see "The Great Ziegfeld" (and of course you'll see it!) you'll hear "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" beautifully sung. Allan Jones sang it, while Stanley Morner was photographed as if he were singing it. Jones did not get screen credit, and Morner, who has a good singing voice, got credit but didn't sing.

The youngsters in Hal Roach's "Our Gang" started on a personal appearance tour a while ago, which has proved so successful that they will go on and on right through the summer. Not only children, but grown people as well, arrive for the first show and then right on till closing time.

As if there hadn't been enough trouble over Mae West's latest, "Klondike Annie," the Chinese government is objecting to it now, so Mae won't be a welcome visitor in the Orient.

Pat O'Brien

Another picture that you'll want to see is "I Married a Doctor"—which you'll recognize as Sinclair Lewis' great book, "Main Street." Josephine Hutchinson and Pat O'Brien have the leads, and do exceedingly well by them. However, here's a word of warning to young, unmarried doctors; don't take the girl you hope to marry to see this one, for it may make them feel that doctors don't make very good husbands.

Staging a come-back in pictures was rather a hard thing for Dolores Costello Barrymore to do; she was a victim of the early days of talkies, when she was given such insane speeches that audiences laughed at her, which cost her an opportunity she really deserved.

But she took voice lessons, and diction lessons, and did so well in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" that Paramount has signed her up. Now it looks as if a real career is opening for her.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . When people in New York asked Bette Davis if she was going to fly back to Hollywood she said, "No; I'm a sissy, I'll take the train" . . . Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler did the same . . . But a few accidents have not frightened the general public; plane reservations still have to be made way ahead . . . Eddie Robinson refused to be frightened; his mother was ill in New York, so he flew to see her, and flew back . . . Anita Louise is the latest star to embark for picture-making in England . . . Eddie Cantor's new radio contract calls for something like $15,000 a week, but he'll have to pay his company himself . . . Ed Wynn will return to NBC soon, and have Graham McNamee with him again.

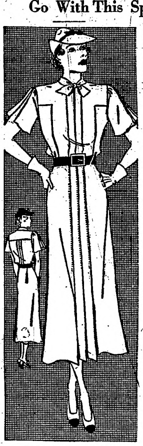
New Slit Sleeves and Youthful Bodice Go With This Spectator Sports Frock



Pattern No. 1868-B

Some are chosen and some are not, as you remember. And this is one of the "summer" chosen! A pretty bad pun, but this perfectly stunning spectator sports frock makes up for it. And you can wear it yourself when summer sets in if you'll send for the pattern now.

It is surprisingly easy to make, and with the aid of the step-by-step chart, illustrating the cut and fit of the new slit sleeves and the way to pleat and stitch-up the youthful bodice, you will immediately realize how automatically it goes together. The bodice has a lot of blouse to it, even makes you suspect that it's held underneath by an elastic band, and the side pleats of the skirt harmonize beautifully with the action pleats in the back blouse.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1868-B is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 4⅛ yards of 39 inch material. Send fifteen cents for the pattern.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

"Baking is easy with an Electric Range"

EVERYTHING you NOW cook will taste better when cooked electrically.

Roasts, for instance, are done in an open pan, without basting, without the slighest attention . . . yet they retain their NATURAL juices and flavors . . . reducing costly shrinkage.

Vegetables cook safely with little water, without special utensils, keeping their valuable minerals and salts so essential to proper nutrition.

And for baking, the still, penetrating heat of the electric oven bakes cakes, breads and biscuits more beautifully browned than you've ever known before, because electric heat is as clean as sunshine!

Best of all, this better cooking is actually easier and simpler than any other method. The Electric Range cooks without attention . . . producing perfect results . . . giving you many free hours for other occupations and pleasures.

Change to electric cooking. Beautiful new electric ranges are now on display at your dealer and our showroom. Most models may be purchased for as little as $5 down with the balance payable in 24 small monthly payments with your electric bill.

The St. Hilaire Hatchery is operating to capacity at the present time. Several hatches will be turned out this week, however, so the hatchery will be able to handle all local demands.

This country is going into the summer season short on pork and lard, and with no indication of material increased supplies from hog marketings, says the market bulletin issued by the Central Cooperative Association of South St. Paul. Reports from the various storage centers of the United States are decidedly bullish as far as hog prices are concerned, and under ordinary conditions the price effect would be much greater than it is. But with uncertain industrial conditions and purchasing power on the part of the consuming public, the market on hogs is doing well to hold its present levels.

BIDS WANTED

Board of Education of St. Hilaire district No. 102, will receive bids for transportation of students on two routes; namely, the west-south route, approximately 14 miles for the round trip, and east route, approximately 18 miles for the round trip.

VILLAGE PARK IS BEING IMPROVED

The village park on the old mill office site received its first real improvement this week when a group of members of the B. M. Club planted one hundred Chinese elm trees in places previously staked out for them. In addition to the elms, various kinds of native trees and shrubs will be planted later on. Flower beds, rustic seats, a rock garden, etc., are some of the more ornamental things contemplated for the future. As the park is intended for use of the public, it has been suggested that other organizations but the one mentioned above, should join in making improvements. If the Boy Scouts, the 4-H Club and others who will likely want use of the grounds in the future, would volunteer suggestions and services, it would greatly advance the time at which the village would have a park that would be a source of pride to all citizens.

BANQUET SATURDAY

The annual Junior-Senior banquet at the local school will take place next Saturday, May 16, at the school assembly. The Ladies Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran church will serve the banquet.

MRS. AUBOL RITES FRIDAY

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Mary Aubol were conducted by Rev. M. L. Dahle at the local Norwegian Lutheran church at 1:30 Friday afternoon. Erickson and Lund of Thief River Falls were in charge of arrangements. A large number of friends from the surrounding territory were present at the service to pay their last respects to Mrs. Aubol, who had resided here for well over fifty years. Interment was made in the family plot in the Lutheran cemetery north of the village.

O. A. ANDERSON SON DROWNS IN MONTANA

Ole A. Anderson received the sad tidings Friday that his eldest son, Arthur, had met accidental death by drowning in the Missoula river at Missoula, Mont., on May 5th. Up to the time notice was received here, the body had not been recovered. As that turbulent mountain stream is swollen by melting snows at this time of the year, making search and dragging of the river very difficult, it is possible the body may not be found for some time. For several years past, Arthur has been engaged in timber work and timber contracting in and around Missoula. His brother, Alexander Anderson, came up last week from New London, Minn., and proceeded to Missoula to look after his brother's real estate and other interests.

The 1936 program includes work on both state aid and county aid roads located in all sections of the county, each commissioner district being represented in the road program.

NEW 4-H PROJECT GETS UNDER WAY

Who doesn't like to engender satisfaction in men, day in and day out? A new project "Meal Planning and Preparation" helps 4-H girls carry out this aim. It also helps the girls—

1. To plan meals for the family with mother. 2. To learn to select foods for the family meals that will promote normal growth and maintain good health. 3. To learn to prepare foods so the food value will be conserved and the flavor improved. 4. To learn to prepare a variety of foods. 5. To encourage use of home-produced foods.

Any 4-H member who is 15 years or over and has taken three years of 4-H baking or canning, or has done the equivalent amount of work in school or at home is eligible to enter.

The requirements for meal planning and food preparation are:

1. Plan and prepare 7 family breakfasts. 2. Plan and prepare 7 family suppers. 3. Plan and prepare 7 box lunches or picnics. 4. Plan and be responsible for preparing 9 consecutive meals.

Each member will be required to complete the starred numbers in the following list besides completing A or B in each of the other groups.

*1. Prepare 5 cooked cereals. *2. Prepare 5 egg dishes. 3. A. Make cottage cheese 5 times, or B. Prepare 5 different custards. *4. Prepare 5 quick breads. 5. Prepare 5 one-dish meals, or Prepare 5 different meat dishes using left-over meats.

*6. Prepare potatoes 5 times. *7 Prepare 5 different vegetables. 8. a. Prepare 5 different fruits for immediate use, or b. Can 5 different fruits for winter use.

;9. Prepare 5 different milk dishes. 10. a Prepare yeast bread or yeast rolls 5 different times, or b. Prepare 5 different desserts. *11. Prepare 5 different sandwich filling.

Every girl 15 years of age or over in Pennington County is invited and urged to take part in the new meal planning and preparation project and to get in touch with the county 4-H club leader, Miss Thelma Solie, at Thief River Falls for further information.

TEXAS' $25,000,000 FAIR OPENS JUNE 6

City of Dallas Plans Real Southern Welcome for Throngs Who Will Visit Centennial Exposition This Summer.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

"WELCOME to Dallas!" The sign is going up in the city where the $25,000,000 World's Fair of the Southwest opens June 6. With every intention of according to the millions of sightseers expected at the Texas Centennial Exposition which will remain open until November 26, a real, old-fashioned southern welcome, Dallas is undoubtedly one of the busiest cities of the land today.

Her beautiful "salesladies," the Rangerettes, 50 of the fairest daughters of the Lone Star state, have for the last few months busied themselves with gadding about the country presenting various celebrities with 10-gallon hats and 24-carat kisses, and spreading the news that this is to be one of the most picturesque, historically fascinating and recreationally diverting fairs in the annals of expositions.

Now it's up to the home folks to make good the promises of their much photographed lady ambassadors and put on a show for the victims who have fallen prey to their charms.

Fair Speeds to Completion.

This the Texans are doing in a big way. Three shifts of men, working night and day, are putting the finishing touches on the buildings, exhibits, parks and amusement areas so that they will open complete and on time. Anyone who has doubts that this can be done need only be reminded of A Century of Progress, the World's fair which had a two-years' run in Chicago. The night before opening day, Chicago citizens, peering over the fences for a preview, went back to their homes heartsick in the conviction that the fair was still months from completion. They returned to the grounds in the morning, to find the scene completely changed and the job finished, so swiftly do the builders of modern expositions work.

Bill Pack, young rodeo star, and Lucy Ann Snell, Rangerette hostess, snapped on the facade of the $250,000 administration building of the Texas Centennial exposition which opens in Dallas June 6.

The opening of the Fair will be the culmination of preliminary celebrations held in various cities throughout the state, commemorating 100 years of Texan independence. This independence, gained by revolution against the government of Mexico in 1835-36, plus the richly dramatic events which followed, and with which anyone who has studied history in the public schools is generally familiar, forms the background for the exposition.

"The most beautiful girl I have ever seen" is the way Walter Winchell described Frances Naile, Dallas red-head and queen of the Rangerettes who have been used to publicize the exposition.

It will not be the purpose of this account to review the historic events which the fair commemorates, for there are many books which do it far more thoroughly. Rather it will be an attempt to cover briefly what the visitor to Dallas this summer can expect to see.

The grounds, which embody chiefly the $4,000,000 plan of the Texas state fair, cover 200 acres. Over this vast area is rising a fairyland city of unusual buildings, characterized by massive pile, unbroken sweep of wall and gay, painted borders. Architecture is of the classic modern type, with a definite pueblo influence. City, state and federal governments, and exhibitors and concessionnaires are combining their efforts to make up the whole.

Lagoons Are Decorative.

At the main entrance is to be an esplanade, 300 feet wide and 1,000 feet long, leading to the Texas Hall of States. Centering the esplanade will be a huge reflecting basin with concealed lights shining through the water to illuminate the surrounding buildings. Flanking the basin are to be two permanent buildings, the halls of transportation and varied industries.

The beauty of water will be a delight frequently to meet the eye in this fair, for yet another lake will appear in the civic center, and a symphony shell will decorate its banks. A giant fountain will act as a centerpiece landmark for this lagoon.

Largest of all the exposition buildings is to be the $1,200,000 Texas Hall of State, a native white limestone structure with an elaborate court which was dedicated on San Jacinto day, April 27. Its historical wing will house hundreds of fascinating treasures of the revolution and the days of the republic which followed, its exhibits continuing chronologically through the entire period of statehood up to the present day. The Hall of Heroes will pay tribute to the men who founded Texas, while other sections of the building will be devoted to displays of the social and industrial life of the state.

Plan Diversified Exhibits.

Of the buildings constructed by the exposition itself, the most important are the halls of transportation and varied industries, which will house exhibits of the character indicated in their names, and the buildings of the farm center, five in all. In these latter structures will be conducted livestock, agricultural, poultry and food shows, and related exhibits.

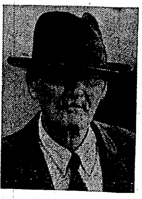
Exhibits in the exposition will fall into several major groups, such as agriculture, livestock, science, arts, industry, education, history, domestic arts and home planning, electricity and communications, transportation, petroleum and mineral resources, natural history and aquatic life, etc.

Hundreds of fine specimens of southwestern game and bird life will be mounted in habitat groups in the hall of natural history. The aquarium of the exposition, one of the largest in the United States, will be stocked with myriad varieties of salt and fresh water fish, in 66 different tanks and pools.

In another building, the great air-cooled exposition auditorium, which seats 4,600 persons, will be found almost continuous entertainment, including grand opera, musical comedy, celebrated orchestras, folk festivals and pageants. Each night a southwestern utility company will present some outstanding Broadway musical show or stage play. Another utility has built a hall of religion, in which all creeds will participate.

Flowers and Music.

For the nature lover, the hall of horticulture will be near approach to heaven. It will be surrounded by flower gardens where hundreds of varieties of roses, wild flowers and other floral gems will be growing. Strolling the gardens, the visitor will be able to hear the music from the symphony shell on the lagoon nearby, where outdoor programs will be given daily during the exposition.



Andrew Jackson Houston, 82, is the only living son of Gen. Sam Houston, and will be one of the outstanding figures in the Centennial at Dallas.

Elaborate industrial exhibits are planned by some of the nation's largest corporations. In the hall of varied industries, electricity and communications, for instance, will be found General Electric, Westinghouse, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, du Pont and other manufacturers.

In the hall of transportation and petroleum will be the displays of the great automobile and airplane manufacturers, as well as the oil companies. The petroleum show will be inspired by Texas' leadership in the production of oil.

Midway Takes Shape.

No matter if he misses many of the cultural and educational exhibits the average visitor never fails to find his way to the Midway of a world's fair. At Dallas the seeker after entertainment will find it plentiful. Already nearing completion are the German Black Forest village, the English village, the famous Old Globe theater of Sixteenth century London, and other gay spots which were outstanding hits of the World's fair in Chicago and will probably be repeated in many world's fairs to come.

The visitor's comfort will by no means be overlooked by the hospitable Texans. Already steps are being taken to shelter the world's fair wayfarer, especially the visitor from the cooler regions of the North, from the Texas sun. Six hundred large trees have been planted for their shade value as well as the natural beauty they will add to the scene. Also of decorative importance are the 50,000 shrubs which will be set out before opening day.

Leading among the show attractions is the "Cavalcade of Texas," a vast pageant which will be produced on a stage 350 feet across and 200 feet deep, and will dramatize the history of the Lone Star state, beginning with the landing of the conquistadores in 1519. Many of the 800 actors in the extravaganza will be descendants of the heroes and heroines whom they will impersonate.

Pageant Is Ambitious One.

Audiences at this giant spectacle will see on the stage artificial rivers with Spanish galleons and pirate ships floating upon them. Massed singing choruses will include cowboys, Franciscan friars, revolutionary and confederate soldiers, trail drivers and Texas rangers. Stage coaches, covered wagons, Spanish armor, frontier rifles, long horn cattle and buffalo will be among the colorful properties. It is said that the pageant will far outdo even the magnificent "Wings of a Century," pageant of transportation which played to more than 2,000,000 persons at the Chicago fair.

Unique among theatrical effects will be the "curtain" between scenes. This will be nothing more than a vast sheet of fine water spray, 100 feet high, with colored lights playing upon it to produce the mood of the scene to follow. So large is the stage, even great battle scenes will be enacted.

Dallas itself is being beautified in anticipation of a great influx of summer visitors. Fifty street cars and a number of buses are being added to the transportation systems to handle the crowds. Civic plans include the establishment of adequate housing facilities. Permanent guests are being asked to move out of the hotels, and managements are pledging definite numbers of rooms for exposition visitors. At Southern Methodist university dormitory rooms will be opened to summer guests, and at the Hockaday School for Girls dormitories will be held open part of the summer for guests. Hundreds of private homes have listed rooms which will be available to the traveler. The city's department of information is ready to offer what services it can.

The body of the New Firestone High Speed Tire is made from selected long-staple cotton dipped in liquid rubber, absorbing eight pounds of rubber in every hundred pounds of cotton. This patented Gum-Dipping process insulates every fiber in every cotton cord, preventing internal friction which creates the heat so destructive to tire life, and giving to the tire added strength.

This heavy, broad, traction and non-skid tread is held to the cord body of the tire with Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords, a patented construction, making the cord body and tread an inseparable unit.

NO SWERVE LEFT
NO SWERVE RIGHT

A leading university in 2350 tire tests has found that the new, scientifically designed Firestone High Speed tread stops a car up to 25% quicker. Its super-traction and non-skid efficiency have also been proved in the famous Pike's Peak Race where for eight consecutive years it has been used on the winning cars.

Many Sports Folks Share Ruth's Hazy Memory for Names

DURING the seasons of his greatest glory, the newspaper boys were ever uncovering one flaw in the perfection of that stout citizen who now devotes his declinig years to golf. No matter how often they might dine or otherwise commune with him, they always were discovering that the first 15 or 20 meetings were the hardest.

After that the stout citizen would give up guessing as to whether this was Bill or Dan or Joe. From then on their lives could be made more beautiful by knowledge that Babe Ruth would know them, collectively and individually, as "Kid."

Babe Ruth

Of course, from time to time gentlemen—from whatever estate the newspaper business happens to be in—resented this disregard for their undoubted worth and baptismal monickers. Most of them, though, merely took it as new evidence of the pressure that besets a great man or smirked complacently at mirrors which persisted in giving bald evidence that this "Kid" stuff was all wrong.

Recently a reporter made mention of this at one of those vast public gatherings at which he is such a popular favorite. Immediately some busybody in the audience inquired if inability to remember names of eminent commentators upon sports and wresting was confined entirely to the Babe.

How Billy Southworth's Memory Was Stymied

Sadly, being one of those who are reluctant to share the miseries and the secrets of his profession with the world, the reporter was forced to admit the truth.

There was, for instance, the St. Louis baseball scrivener who devoted several seasons to giving his best aid, advice and comfort to Billy Southworth. Perhaps the reporter and the Cardinal manager were not as close as Park and Tilford but to all outward appearances they seemed two hearts that beat as one. Then fate (along with the failure to win a pennant) decreed that Southworth should try his baseball fortunes elsewhere.

Scant months later the two were reunited in a hotel lobby.

"How are you, Bill," caroled the baseball writer, rushing forward.

"Ah, uh." It was not that Mr. Southworth is a snob, a ribber or a guy who devotes his life to dealing out the ice. His brow was wrinkled in earnest concentration for a full minute. You could see that he was bearing down, determined not to let memory slip a fast one over the corner.

"Ah, uh—Say, I know your face. Didn't you use to play the piano at—" But the curtain must be drawn over this deplorable scene . . .

Carpentier Didn't Know Joe Beckett Socially

It can be lifted upon the fact that athletes also fail to know one another. By this I do not refer to the Helen Willses, the Helen Jacobses or those others who probably have very good reason for not nodding as they pass by.

Instead, we can turn to the more elysian spheres. There we can consider an episode in the life of a gentleman once admiringly hailed by the press as the "Orchid Man," although he certainly was not in the florist racket.

"What kind of a fellow is this Joe Beckett?" he was asked.

"I don't know," was the quick, confident and smiling reply. "I've never met him."

"Sure you have," persisted the interviewer, shifting to English so that the waiter might get in on the laugh, too. "Don't you remember? He was in the ring with you twice and you knocked him out both times."

"Yes, I know." Georges Carpentier continued affable and willing to oblige. "But that was in the ring. I was only getting paid to fight him. There was no sense in talking to him then, was there?"

Not in the Box Score:

Both the Cubs and the Dodgers, his old and his new playmates, are using the Freddy Lindstrom sliding pad this year. It is a pad sewed inside the left trouser leg . . . . Nat Fleischer, the magazine editor, shortly will publish an encyclopedia of boxing. It will contain the history and bout by bout records of fighters since 1703.

IT, PERHAPS, was no mere coincidence that one of the warmest days of the year arrived along with Max Schmeling.

Naturally the ballyhoo for his fight with Louis will continue to set the pace for other temperatures until the dark Uhlan sits down in front of the cream-colored Bomber on June 18. As Mr. Arthur Brisbane probably quite often has advised the world, a million bobs is a lot of doughnuts. Therefore even such specialists in charitable promotion as the athletic club directors must shower down their sparks of imagery so that all citizens with money to burn will have no trouble finding their way to the festal altar.

Just as naturally, though, all this good clean fun has brought new wrinkles into the otherwise bland countenance of Uncle Michael Strauss Jacobs. While wandering hither and yon, now peeping in anxiously to see that Herr Schmeling has been properly tucked into his pretty white (11:00 p. m.) bed, now peeping out fretfully to inquire whether Bolabos Yussell Jacobs has been yanked out of his pretty white (11:00 a. m.) crib, Uncle Mike ever faces the future with suspicious eye. Even while engaged in such elevating work as handing out A's (or some other letter of the Broadway alphabet) to the boys who have done the best daily compositions, the haunted gleam ever is present.

This is because, first of all, Uncle Mike has no illusions as to where charity lines up for the gun. Then again, he is a business man as well as the most eminent promoter since the days of the late lamented Rickard. So, because it is his own dollars which must back the ballyhoo and because a full 200 G's worth of them must be laid on the line long before June 18, this most celebrated of Main Stem traders must ever give his best regard to those items of fate which never appear upon the immaculate balance sheets.

Schmeling.

To make sure that no misfortune besets the path of the two athletic young men before they can wrangle before their gold embroidered audience, he must carefully scan all angles. While doing so he must comport himself with due memory of those other promising prizefights which were forcibly detoured, while seemingly on the straight and narrow way to success.

In mentioning this, there is no desire to cast hints or make promises. Instead, because the way of a promoter is tough and because no fight is a success, a flop or even a sure thing until the gong has sounded, I merely am sympathizing with Uncle Mike. There have been all too many such affairs which have encountered dire fate in spite of the best of skill and intentions.

For instance there was the time when Stanley Ketchell and Sam Langford were ready to enter the ring of the old Fairmont club up in the Bronx. Perhaps a little bird whispered, although the bird for which the Bronx is most famed is not given to whispering. Or it may have been that the higher-ups conveyed more direct and forcible tidings to Billy Gibson, the promoter. Anyhow, the affair was junked and later conveyed to Philadelphia.

Wills' Battle With Tunney Never Did Come Off

Sometimes, though, fate behaves very handsomely in dealing with all parties concerned. High up in this sorting of fights which never came off there can be mentioned the Sharkey-Campolo affair, which was scheduled for Yankee stadium. Just as the woefully small crowd was wending its way into the arena, the skies wept in sympathy with the promoters who were about to lose a small fortune. So the thing was called off forever.

There also was the time when Gentleman Gene Tunney was supposed to meet Stevedore Harry Wills. A considerable portion of the press thought favorably about the glorious possibilities of that one and, indeed, the tickets already had been ordered for it.

What happened need not be gone into here. Some say that Tex Rickard begged Tunney to lay off and promised him a shot at Dempsey.

* * *

Things I believe:

That the sign on Connie Mack's door should read "Wrecking Done Here. Terms Strictly Cash."

That folks who predict that Tony Canzoneri will be massacred at Madison Square Gardens in May forget the first Ross-McLarnin affair. Just as is the case now, Vancouver Jimmy had been idle for too long before training for that one. So his legs were shaky and his timing was off all evening.

That the National League executives, having proved themselves great big strong business men of sterling character by blackballing the Jew who was voted the best umpire in the game, should make up with Dolly Stark. That the National League umpiring, never on a very high average, is worse than it has been in years. That, if Brooklyn really is the best of all baseball cities, it is very poor judgment to keep shooting the most incompetent arbiters into the Dodgers' games.

That the A. A. U. may be shocked to discover a Commercial league digging deeply into that Sunday afternoon hockey gold mine next season.

That a man with a bag of gold also will come into the lives of the more eminent winners at the Olympics this summer. And that professional track and field events will be a success.

TALL TALES

As Told to:

FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Blondy by a Tongue!

'WAY back in 1892—said the Old turfman—I owned as beautiful a racing mare as ever was foaled. Her name was Blondy because of her color.

My other possession was a farm in the Blue Grass country on which was hung a "plaster" of $15,000.

Bad luck cut between me and the purses although Nigger Jim, my trainer, would get her cream-colored body in the pink before every race.

We taught Blondy a lot of tricks, between losing races. One was to make a face. Nigger Jim or I would hold an apple or carrot so she had to stretch her neck and put out her tongue for it. And she got so she would do this whenever we told her "make a face."

We entered the mare in a claiming race at Churchill Downs the spring of '92. It was May 15, to be exact. The mortgage on the farm was due May 16. Nigger Jim had Blondy in great form for the 1⅛ mile race. But the bookies were laying 20 to 1 against our nag. I managed to scare up exactly one thousand berries and placed the whole roll at 20 to 1. It was win the race or lose the farm.

The horses were away evenly but 100 yards from the start Blondy stumbled and lost stride. We groaned but heartened as she winged away, regaining lost ground at every jump. Then a horse cut in front of her. It was Dixie Dude, and she had to be pulled.

Down the back stretch and around the turn they came. Blondy was moving up on the outside. When they hit the stretch she and Dixie Dude were running head and head.

It looked like a certain dead heat but at the last jump or two Nigger Jim, hanging on the rail, yelled "Make a face, Yo' Blondy! Make a face!" Thank God! Blondy heard, straightened her neck, shot out her tongue across the finish line and won the race."

Man-Made Mesas

AFTER Paul Bunyan finished his work logging off the Pacific Northwest he decided he'd become an oil-driller. First thing he did was to go down into New Mexico and begin drilling a well on top of a mountain.

Paul's well was sunk to a depth of 14,006 feet without a sign of oil. Funny thing about that mountain—it was made up of alternate layers of thin rock and dry sand.

One night a windstorm came up. And how she did blow! The next morning when Paul woke up he looked out of the window of his shack and such a sight as met his eyes! There was his hole, standing straight up in the air as high as he could see. The wind had blown all the sandy layers away from it but the layers of rock were hanging around it like washers pushed around a drill stem.

Paul was pretty mad about it but he didn't waste any time standing around cussing. He just took a sledge and climbed up to the top of the hole. When he got there, he began pounding the hole down into the ground again. As he did so the layers of rock began to come together and in less than no time they made a mesa.

That sort of thing happened time after time and that's why New Mexico is so full of mesas. They're perpetual monuments to Paul Bunyan's unsuccessful oil-drilling operations there.

The Squalling Squonk

SOME cold, winter night, as you sit before a roaring fire in a hunting lodge or in the bunkhouse of a lumber camp in the North Woods, you're certain to hear outside a long-drawn-out moaning. But if you think it's the wind in the bare branches of the trees, you're mistaken! Your lumberjack friend will tell you it's a squonk, mourning because it has a warty, ill-fitting skin.

That's all a squonk ever does—just goes wandering among the hemlock trees, weeping and sobbing bitterly because its skin doesn't fit. When the thermometer is down to nine degrees above zero, you can follow it by the little globules of ice it leaves behind—the squonk's trail of frozen tears.

Because it is such a shy, nocturnal animal few men have ever seen a squonk. But once a lumberjack, by imitating its cries, lured one into his cabin. The little beast seemed perfectly satisfied until he shut it up in a wicker basket. Then it began to sob and moan.

This went on for hours, then died down. The lumberjack peeked into the basket to see if the squonk had cried itself to sleep. But all he found was salt water and a few bubbles. The squonk had dissolved itself in its own tears. "I mighta known better," said the lumberjack, as he added one of his own tears to the collection, "than to have shut up a squonk in a basket made from branches of the weeping willow tree."

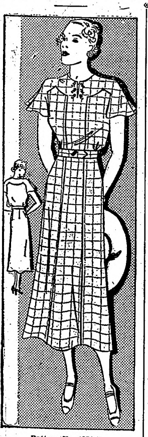
Strange Burial Custom

The Toradjas, a primitive race of Celebes, have strange burial customs. The body remains in the house for two years, until the death rites have been completed, and then it is placed in a tomb, cut in the side of a mountain, the entrance of which is forever guarded by a lifelike effigy. Incidentally, the Toradjas are the only people whose holy men are known to dress in women's clothes.—Collier's Weekly.

Simple Lines in This Exclusive Model, Which Is a Perfect Utility Frock



Pattern No. 1873-B

Checks in crepe, silk, pique, linen or cotton lead the way to chic in this easy, casual, day dress. While the design emphasizes smooth slim lines, comfortable fullness for the skirt is provided by a wide inset at the front.

The model cuts quickly and easily, with only seams to join at the sides, panel and waistline. No troublesome armholes to discourage amateur dressmakers, as the sleeves and shoulder line belong to "one family," and a slim waistline is assured the minute you insert the back darts. This is a perfect utility frock for a multitude of daytime wears. You can make it as a house frock, too—it's so simple and quick to launder and, being collarless, even easier to iron.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1873-B is available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44. Size 34 requires 4⅛ yards of 35 inch material. Send fifteen cents for the pattern.

THE MYSTERIOUS DERELICT
An adventure of CAPTAIN FRANK HAWKS ON HIS FLIGHT AROUND THE WORLD WITH JERRY AND JANET
CAPT. FRANK HAWKS
CAPTAIN FRANK, THERE'S AN OLD DERELICT DOWN THERE. LETS GO DOWN AND EXPLORE IT!
O-K-JERRY THE SEA'S CALM...AND WE'RE IN NO HURRY.
CAPTAIN FRANK HAWKS, HOLDER OF 214 AVIATION RECORDS, AND HIS TWO YOUNG FRIENDS, JERRY AND JANET, CHARTER MEMBERS OF THE AIR HAWKS, ARE NOW FLYING OVER THE JAPANESE SEA.
GEE! I WONDER WHAT HAPPENED TO THIS OLD BOAT!
OH, THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF THESE OLD DERELICTS FLOATING AROUND THE OCEANS. WHEN THEY GET IN THE SHIPPING LANES SOMEBODY SENDS OUT A WARSHIP AND BLOWS THEM UP. WELL, LET'S GO BACK.
MEANWHILE—BELOW
NO—WE WON'T KILL THEM HERE—I'VE GOT A BETTER PLAN. WE'LL CAPTURE THEM, FLY BACK TO OUR HIDEOUT, AND HOLD THEM FOR RANSOM! LET'S GO.
SHUT UP YOU...AND GET IN THAT PLANE. YOU'RE GOING TO TAKE US FOR A LITTLE JAUNT.
I'LL TIE UP THESE BRATS—WE DON'T WANT THEM MESSIN' AROUND!
YOU FLY WHERE I TELL YOU, AND DON'T TRY ANY FUNNY BUSINESS, EITHER!
LOOKS LIKE YOU WIN. SORRY, YOUNGSTERS. THERE'S NOTHING TO DO, BUT THIS!
SUDDENLY CAPTAIN HAWKS PUTS THE PLANE INTO A BARREL ROLL. THE SMUGGLERS ARE HURLED AGAINST THE METAL WALL OF THE PLANE, KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS. JERRY AND JANET'S BONDS HOLD THEM SAFELY TO THEIR SEATS.
WE'LL TAKE THESE BEAUTIES TO THE JAPANESE POLICE. AND A SHORT RADIO FLASH WILL BRING ENOUGH PLANES TO WIPE OUT THAT GANG OF SMUGGLERS.
WHEW! WAS I SCARED! BUT IT TAKES MORE THAN THAT TO GET AHEAD OF YOU, CAPT. FRANK!
GEE! THE POLICE SURE WERE GLAD TO GET THOSE SMUGGLERS.
WELL, THEY WEREN'T ANY GLADDER THAN I AM TO GET THESE POST'S BRAN FLAKES. BOY, THEY TASTE GOOD!
THAT'S THE STUFF! I LIKE TO SEE YOU AIR HAWKS EATING PLENTY OF THEM. THEY TASTE GREAT AND ARE GOOD FOR YOU, TOO!
COMING, IN AN EARLY ISSUE OF THIS NEWSPAPER: "THE LOST VALLEY OF TIBET," ANOTHER ADVENTURE OF CAPTAIN FRANK, JERRY AND JANET, ON THEIR WORLD FLIGHT.

Only That and Nothing More

The fat man was trying to find some tropical clothes in the Far South resort. He tried most every store in town, and patient clerks had politely made a pretense of looking over their stocks and advising him they were just out of his size. Finally he ran across a clerk more truthful than diplomatic who—after looking him over—said:

"Frankly, mister, we carry nothing in stock that would fit you, except collar buttons and handkerchiefs."—American Legion Monthly.

In a Nutshell

The theater was in an uproar.

"They're calling for the author," said the manager.

"But I can't make a speech!" replied the man responsible for the play.

The manager grabbed the playwright and impelled him along the passage. As he shoved him toward the curtain he said curtly: "Well, just go in front and tell them you're sorry."—Hudson (N. Y.) Star.

Hungry Dog

By SIDNEY MELLAR

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

ONE night, lounging alone before the fireplace, I heard a sound at the door, a sound of scratching. "Who's there?" I cried. There was no answer.

Again the scratching and the whine! I went to the door, opened it. A police dog lay outside, quivering.

The mellow light from my two-room bungalow fell upon him, and I saw how weary he seemed, how his ribs showed through his short, stiff fur. He looked as if he were starving.

It was cold at the door so I whistled and he followed me into my living room. Patiently he sank down before the fireplace, his head relaxing over one outstretched paw. Years before, I'd had a police dog that resembled him.

Then I went into the kitchen. There was no meat in the food-safe, but there were eggs. I broke two eggs into a soup plate, beat them up, poured on some milk. Into this mixture I crumbled a slice of stale wheat bread. What else? In the vegetable bin I found tomatoes and lettuce, shredded some of these and mixed all together.

When I stepped from the kitchen into the living room, the police dog sniffed the combination that was in my hand. He stood up, his tail lashing excitedly, his tongue dancing from his mouth. "Sit down!" I ordered.

Reluctantly he sat down. His body writhed with anxiety. I admitted to myself that he was a handsome beast, his ears up, attentive, hungry yet obedient.

I set the plate upon a newspaper, and the dog arose rebelliously. I had to make him learn who was master, so I ordered him to sit down. Unwillingly he obeyed. He smacked his jaws together, saliva drooling from his mouth.

"O. K.," I said. He stared at me appealingly, not sure of my meaning. I nodded, and he bounded to his food and swallowed hastily. He was gulping entirely too fast. I bent down to pick up the plate. He turned on me.

"Down!" I cried, holding the plate in my hand. He bared his fangs. I sympathized with him. He was starved. But he'd have to learn who was master immediately, so I snarled at him, "S-sit down!" Slowly, slowly his haunches sank.

Picking up the plate, still half full of food, I put it on the library table. He watched me sadly. Even now he was powerful, tired and hungry though he might be. I bent over his collar, but it held no license plate. He wagged his tail and wanted to lick my wrist.

There was a knock at the door. The dog stood up, growling. His ears pricked forward and his black nose sniffed.

"Who's there?" I called.

"Did you see a dog anywhere about?" cried a voice in return. The dog whined.

My heart fell. The dog was being claimed.

I opened the door. A man entered. He was wizened, with shifty eyes and sneery lip. "Is this the dog?" I asked.

"Yes. Hello, Ringy!" The dog went to him.

"He seems pretty hungry," I said. "If you'll wait a minute or two, I'll give him something more to eat. I have it all prepared for him."

The man kicked the door shut behind him and sneered, "You'll give him and me more than something to eat."

"Come, come," I said, approaching. "What's the meaning of this?"

"Stop!" he warned sharply. "Come one step closer, and I'll order Ringy to tear you to pieces. This dog is trained. He's my side-kick on a new angle of hand-me-over. You can tell it to the police after you gimme your jack and I beat it."

I had about seventy-five dollars, and that wasn't a trifle for me to lose, but the worst ache was to surrender to this thief. The muscles in my arms itched. I wanted to leap at him.

"Well? Hand over your money before I count ten or I'll take it off your body after Ringy's through with you. One. . . . Two. . . ."

I thought fast. My heart was pounding in my ears. My breath was disordered. I cried out: "Hold on!"

"Ready?" he sneered, one hand out negligently.

"There's a trick you didn't think of!" I cried, running desperately to the library table.

"At him, Ringy! At him!" screamed the thief frantically. Ringy charged. He was almost on me as I tore the plate of food from the table. I reached the door to the kitchen and flung the plate upon the floor. Ringy bounded in after the food and I shut the door behind him.

Then I faced the cowering thief.

Death-Spray Too Dangerous

Fears that arsenic dust sprayed from airplanes to combat the great locust plague in South Africa would bring death to big game and domestic cattle have proved to be only too well grounded, according to reports reaching the British Society for the Preservation of the Fauna of the Empire. Preliminary experiments had indicated that the danger would be small. Experience has shown, however, that the poison clouds have not only been fatal to animals but to large numbers of insectivorous birds, particularly the migrant European stork. "This picture," the society's journal says, "alters the whole aspect of the supposed efficacy of the method, for the army of insectivorous birds inhabiting the regions invaded by locusts would in any year undoubtedly destroy more locusts than are poisoned by arsenic."

This Means Lake Navigation Season Is Open

WHEN the big buoys that mark the channels of the Great Lakes and the Detroit river emerge from their winter homes, it is a sure sign that the navigation season will soon be open. The huge markers, loaded with fuel and in new coats of paint, are loaded aboard lighthouse service tenders at Detroit for their annual spring migration.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

BILLY MINK BECOMES SUSPICIOUS

OF ALL the little people in the Green Forest there is none with sharper eyes, and keener wits than Billy Mink. Nothing goes on along the Laughing Brook, from its start in the Green Forest to where it joins the Big River, that Billy Mink doesn't know about. Billy is a great traveler. He is so full of life and energy that he cannot keep still very long at a time. Moreover, Billy is one of those little people to whom it makes no difference whether jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun is shining or gentle Mistress Moon has taken his place up in the sky, or the Black Shadows have wrapped everything in darkness. He takes a nap whenever he feels sleepy, and whenever he doesn't feel sleepy he travels up and down the Laughing Brook.

Billy Mink Followed the Man Down the Laughing Brook.

In these little journeys back and forth nothing escapes Billy's bright eyes and sharp ears and keen nose. Being such a slim fellow he slips in and out of holes and hiding places which no one save his cousin, Shadow the Weasel, could get into.

Now it happened that one day Billy curled up in a hollow log under a pile of brush close to the Laughing Brook. In a jiffy he was asleep. Right in the middle of the pleasantest of pleasant dreams he was awakened. Instantly he was wide awake. He was just as wide awake as if he hadn't been asleep at all. Without stopping to think anything about it, he knew what had awakened him. Some one had just passed his hiding place.

Noiselessly Billy crept out of the hollow log and peeped from under the pile of brush. Walking down the bank of the Laughing Brook was a man. "I've never seen that fellow before," muttered Billy to himself. "It isn't Farmer Brown's Boy, and it isn't Farmer Brown. He seems to be looking for something. I wonder what he is about. I think I'll watch him."

So, as silently as a shadow, Billy Mink followed the man down the Laughing Brook, and the man didn't once suspect it. You see, Billy can always find a hiding place if it be no more than a heap of brown leaves. He just slipped from one hiding place to another, always keeping the man in sight.

Billy became more and more interested and inquisitive as he watched that man. The man certainly did seem to be looking for something. He would examine every half sunken log in the Laughing Brook. He searched carefully every little hole. It didn't take Billy long to discover that this man seemed to be especially interested in those places where Billy almost always went when traveling up and down the Laughing Brook.

Billy stopped and rubbed his nose thoughtfully. He was growing suspicious. "I wonder," thought Billy, "if he is looking for me."

TRY THIS TRICK

MAGICAL CORKS

THE magician displays a small cardboard box. He opens it and reveals two small corks inside. He closes the box, shakes it and reopens it. The corks have multiplied. There are four instead of two.

The box is prepared beforehand. Boxes of this type, obtainable at any drug store, actually consist of two lids, with a ring or collar between.

In the upper lid the magician glues two corks. He drops two loose corks in the lower portion. Thus, in performing the trick, he begins by showing only two corks, not revealing those that are attached to the lid which he removes.

Closing the box, the magician shakes it. In so doing he turns over the box. The lid which he lifts is the original bottom of the box. Thus the box contains four corks.

ORDINARY DISHES

THE cook who can present an ordinary dish in an extraordinary way is a genius. Many of our homely dishes with a bit of pep in the form of different flavors for seasoning, will become quite unusual dishes.

Beef Stew.

Take two and one-half pounds of chuck steak, wipe it with a damp cloth and cut into one and one-half inch squares. Heat four tablespoonfuls of suet in a Scotch kettle, add the meat and brown well. Season with salt, paprika, a few dashes of cayenne, one-half cupful of diced celery and three tablespoonfuls of chopped onions. Cover with eight cupfuls of cold water, cover tightly and cook two and one-half hours. During the last 45 minutes add the following vegetables sprinkled with salt to season: Six medium-sized potatoes, six each of carrots and parsnips, scraped. When ready to serve thicken the stew with melted butter, adding flour and the stock from the stew. Cook well and pour over the meat and vegetables. Serve all together on a hot platter.

Here is something new, if you like apples, and who does not?

Apple Jam.

Take four pounds of apples, peel and cut into slices. Place in a kettle with a two-pound can of corn sirup and two pounds of sugar, the juice and rind of two lemons, three ounces of ground ginger and six cloves. Cook slowly two hours. Put into a marmalade jar and cover tightly.

Chocolate Mousse.

Melt three squares of chocolate, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of thin cream; boil one minute. Cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla, a pinch of salt and the whip from three cupfuls of heavy cream. Add a tablespoonful of gelatin mixed with one-fourth of a cupful of cold water to the hot chocolate and mix all together after the gelatin is well dissolved. Pour into a mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

AT DAWN SOME DAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

LET us arise at dawn some day,
Not even wash and put away
The breakfast things, but leave a few
Behind for lazy folks to do,
Let us arise and see this earth
The moment of its daily birth,
Up yonder hilltop let us hike,
See what a rising sun is like.

The woodlands will be dewy wet,
But every flower diamond-set,
The morning breeze a little chill,
But we won't mind who climb a hill
The waking thrushes caroling,
But you have never heard one sing
Until you hear one sing to greet
Another morning cool and sweet.

The bluest blue the distant scene,
The woods around the greenest green,
The whitest white the sandy beach,
And heaven near enough to reach,
For thus are waters, woods and skies
When morning calls and earth replies,
When first the shadows slip away—
Let us arise at dawn some day.
